6 And he walked in <sup>7</sup>the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab; for he had the daughter of <sup>8</sup>Ahab to wife: and he wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD.

7 Howbeit the LORD would not destroy the house of David, because of the covenant that he had made with David, and as he <sup>9</sup>promised to give a light<sup>4</sup> to him and to his sons for <sup>10</sup>ever.

8 ¶ In his days the <sup>11</sup>Edomites revolted from under the dominion<sup>6</sup> of Judah, and made themselves a king.

9 Then Jehoram went <sup>12</sup>forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he rose up

10 So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did <sup>m</sup>Libnah<sup>8</sup> revolt from under his hand; because <sup>n</sup>he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers.

12 ¶ And there came<sup>1</sup> a <sup>r</sup>writing to him from Elijah the prophet,<sup>2</sup> saying, Thus saith the LORD God of David thy father, Because thou hast not walked in the <sup>s</sup>ways of Jehoshaphat thy father, nor in the ways of Asa king of Judah,

13 But hast <sup>t</sup>walked in the way of the kings of Israel, and hast made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to go a <sup>u</sup>whoring, like to the whoredoms of the house of Ahab, and also hast slain thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better than thyself;

14 Behold, with <sup>v</sup>a great plague will the LORD smite thy people, and thy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods.

15 And thou shalt have great sickness by disease of thy bowels, until thy bowels fall out by reason of the sickness day by day.

16 ¶ Moreover, the LORD stirred up against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines, and of the Arabians, that were near the Ethiopians:

17 And they came up into Judah, and brake into it, and <sup>w</sup>carried away all the substance that was found in the king's house, and his sons also, and his wives; so that there was never a son left him, save Jehoahaz, <sup>x</sup>the youngest of his-sons.

18 ¶ And after all this the LORD smote him in his bowels with <sup>y</sup>an incurable disease.

19 And it came to pass, that in process of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness; so he died of sore diseases: and his people made no <sup>z</sup>burning for him, like the burning of his fathers.<sup>3</sup>

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Ahaziah succeeding, reigneth wickedly. 5 In his confederacy with Joram the son of Ahab, he is slain by Jehu. 10 Athaliah, destroying all the seed royal, save Joash, whom Jehoshabeath his aunt hid, usurpeth the kingdom.

AND the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ahaziah<sup>a</sup> his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had slain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

2 Forty<sup>b</sup> and two years old<sup>9</sup> was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Athaliah, the daughter of Omri.

3 He also walked <sup>2</sup>in the ways of the house of Ahab:<sup>1</sup> for his mother was his counsellor to do wickedly.

4 Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD like the house of Ahab: for they <sup>3</sup>were his counsellors, after the death of his father, to his destruction.

5 ¶ He walked also after their counsel, and went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram.

6 And <sup>4</sup>he returned to be healed in Jezreel, because of the wounds which were given <sup>2</sup>him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And Azariah <sup>5</sup>the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick.

7 And the destruction<sup>3</sup> of Ahaziah was of God,<sup>4</sup> by coming to Joram: for, when he was come, he went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, <sup>6</sup>whom the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

8 And it came to pass, that, <sup>7</sup>when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them.

9 And<sup>m</sup> he sought Ahaziah: and they caught him, (for he was hid<sup>5</sup> in Samaria,) and brought him to Jehu:<sup>6</sup> and when they had slain him, we are taken off from every self-dependence in the view of our wants and wretchedness, we are the more sure to find help in the time of need. If faith and hope look upward, the everlasting arms will be underneath us. In our cries to God for deliverance, let us therefore plead his tender promises to us, the grants he has made us, his ability to protect and deliver us, and kindness.—But O, how hard is it to render reformation thoroughly complete; and to wean the best of men from sins which easily beset them, even when they have before smarted for them! But it is kind in God to continue a reprover to us; and it is great gain if our providential losses turn us from the path of evil.

REFLECTIONS.—What monsters are bred in the best of families; or, at least, are made so by unhal- lowed marriages! And none are such plagues to families and kingdoms as ungrateful heirs. Ambition is deaf to the cries of nature or humanity: and those whom duty they buried him;<sup>7</sup> Because (said they) he is the son of Jehoshaphat, "who sought the LORD with all his heart. So the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom.

10 ¶ But<sup>o</sup> when Athaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed-royal of the house of Judah.

11 But Jehoshabeath, the daughter of the king,<sup>8</sup> took<sup>2</sup> Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, and put him and his nurse in a "bed-chamber.<sup>9</sup> So Jehoshabeath, the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of "Jehoiada the priest, (for she was the sister of Ahaziah,) hid him from Athaliah, so that she slew him not.

12 And he was with them "hid in the house of God six years: and Athaliah reigned over the land.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Jehoiada, having taken measures for his security, maketh Joash king. 12 Athaliah is slain. 16 Jehoiada restoreth the worship of God.

AND in<sup>a</sup> the seventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jeroham, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into "covenant with him.

2 And they "went about in Judah, and gathered the Levites<sup>1</sup> out of all the cities of Judah, and the chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

3 And all the congregation<sup>2</sup> made<sup>a</sup> a covenant with the king in the house of God: and he said unto them, Behold, the king's son shall reign, as the LORD hath "said of the sons of David.

4 This <sup>is</sup> the thing that ye shall do: A third<sup>7</sup> part of you entering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites,<sup>3</sup> shall be porters of the doors;

5 And a third part shall be at the king's house;<sup>4</sup> and a third part at the "gate of the foundation:<sup>5</sup> and all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD.

3 The Levites had their turns or courses in the service of the temple; so that a certain number went out every Sabbath, to make room for another course. Jehoiada, having gained over the centurions and guards, at least some of them, to his party, and having all the Levites at his command, took occasion at that time when the courses were to be changed, at daybreak, to arm both those that were coming out and those who were coming in; and thus effected the revolution he had so wisely planned.—I.

The notices respecting most of them, he thinks, are too indefinite to enable us to determine anything more than that some of them probably did not belong to the external city wall. Thus the horse-gate, says he, evidently lay between the temple and the royal palace, and in proof of this he refers to the present passage.—I.

8 So the Levites, and all Judah, did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men "that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not "the courses.<sup>7</sup>

9 Moreover, Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds spears, and bucklers, and shields, that had been king David's, which were in the house of God.<sup>8</sup>

10 And he set all the people, "every man having his weapon in his hand, from the right side<sup>9</sup> of the temple<sup>1</sup> to the left side of the temple, along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

11 Then they "brought out the king's son, and put upon him the crown, and gave him the testimony,<sup>2</sup> and made him king: and Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and said, "God save the king.

12 ¶ Now, "when Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, she came to the people into the house of the LORD:

13 And she looked, and, behold, the king stood at "his pillar<sup>3</sup> at the entering in, and the princes and the trumpets by the king: and all the people of the land rejoiced, "and sounded with trumpets; also the singers with instruments of music, and such as taught to sing praise. TOMBS OF ZECHARIAH AND ST. JAMES. [II. Chron., xxiv:20, 21.]—"And the Spirit of God came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the Lord, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the Lord. He hath also forsaken you. And they conspired against him and stoned him with stones as the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the Lord." According to the traditions of the Jews, this tomb stands for Zechariah who was stoned in the reign of Joash. It is a cubical, monolithic structure excavated from the natural rock. Christians look upon the tomb as standing for the Zacharias spoken of by our Lord in Saint Matthew, xxiii:35. The tomb of Saint James is for the apostle by that name who was hurled to death in the valley below the tomb. This tomb is also an excavated chamber in the side of the cliff, having in front a porch supported by two columns and two half columns. The porch is eighteen feet wide by nine feet deep, and is approached by a door and staircase on the north side.

18 And they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served groves and idols: and wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and they testified against them: but they would not give ear.

20 And the Spirit of God came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the LORD, he hath also forsaken you.

21 And they conspired against him, and stoned him with stones, at the commandment of the king, in the court of the house of the LORD.<sup>6</sup>

22 Thus Joash the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son: and when he died, he said, The LORD look upon it, and require it.<sup>7</sup>

23 ¶ And it came to pass at the end of the year,<sup>8</sup> that the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of Damascus.<sup>9</sup>

24 For the army of the Syrians came with a small company of men, and the LORD delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers: so they executed judgment against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in great diseases,) his own servants conspired against him for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died: and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him not in the sepulchres of the kings.<sup>1</sup>

and fearful exam-ple is this of divine judgment upon both ruler and people on account of royal and national infidelity!

The king neglected

the duty which, as a king, he owed to God; he owed to

without restraint,

gave way to idolatrous practices. The whole land thus became corrupt and guilty. Swift judgment followed. The army was overthrown

in battle; the country was desolated; the capital was spoiled;

and at length the weak and guilty monarch himself was murdered by his own

ness of the burdens<sup>3</sup> laid upon him, and the repairing of the house of God, behold, they are written in the story of the book of the kings: and Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army<sup>7</sup> of Israel? And the man of God answered, The LORD is able<sup>m</sup> to give thee much more than this.

12 And <sup>other</sup> ten thousand <sup>left</sup> alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock, that they all were <sup>broken</sup> in pieces.<sup>3</sup>

13 ¶ But the soldiers of the army<sup>4</sup> which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria even unto Beth-horon, and smote three thousand of them,<sup>5</sup> and took much spoil.<sup>6</sup>

14 ¶ Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that he <sup>brought</sup> the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burnt incense unto them.

15 Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a<sup>7</sup> prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, <sup>which</sup> could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that <sup>the king</sup> said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? <sup>forbear</sup>; why shouldst thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbore, and said, I know that <sup>God</sup> hath determined<sup>7</sup> to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

17 ¶ Then Amaziah king of Judah took advice,<sup>8</sup> and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us <sup>see</sup> one another in the face.<sup>9</sup>

18 And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The <sup>thistle</sup> that <sup>was</sup> in Lebanon sent to the cedar that <sup>was</sup> in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife:

21 So Joash the king of Israel went up; and they saw one another in the face, <sup>both</sup> he and Amaziah king of Judah, at <sup>Beth</sup>-shemesh, which <sup>belongeth</sup> to Judah.<sup>3</sup>

22 And Judah was put to the <sup>worse</sup> before Israel, and they fled every man to his tent.

23 And Joash the king of Israel <sup>took</sup> Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh, and brought him to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem from the gate of Ephraim to the corner-gate,<sup>4</sup> four hundred cubits.

24 And <sup>he</sup> took all <sup>the</sup> gold, and the silver, and all the vessels <sup>that were</sup> found in the house of God with Obed-edom, and the treasures of the king's house, the <sup>hostages</sup> also, and returned to Samaria.

25 ¶ And<sup>1</sup> Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel fifteen years.<sup>7</sup>

26 Now the <sup>rest</sup> of the acts of Amaziah, first and last, behold, <sup>are</sup> they not written in the book of the Kings of Judah and Israel?

27 ¶ Now after the time that Amaziah did turn away from following the LORD, they <sup>made</sup> a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to Lachish: but they sent to Lachish after him, and slew him there.

28 And they brought him upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in the city of <sup>Judah</sup>.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Uziah succeeding, and reigning well in the days of Zechariah, prospereth. 16 Waxing proud, he invadeth the priest's office, and is smitten with leprosy by God. 22 He dieth, and Jotham succeedeth him.

THEN all the people of Judah took <sup>Uzziah</sup>, who <sup>was</sup> sixteen years old, and made him king in the room of his father Amaziah.

2 He built Elloth,<sup>1</sup> and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

3 Sixteen years old <sup>was</sup> Uziah when he began to reign; and he reigned fifty and two years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also <sup>was</sup> Jecoliah of Jerusalem.

5 And he sought God in the days of Zechariah, who had understanding in the visions of God: and as long as he sought the LORD, God made him to prosper.<sup>3</sup>

6 And he went forth and warred against the Philistines, and brake down the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities about Ashdod, and among the Philistines.

7 And God helped him against the Philistines, and against the Arabians that dwell in Gur-baal, and the Mehunims.

8 And the Ammonites gave gifts to Uzziah: and his name spread abroad even to the entering in of Egypt; for he strengthened himself exceedingly.

9 ¶ Moreover, Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the corner-gate, and at the valley-gate, and at the turning of the wall, and fortified them.

10 Also he built towers in the desert,<sup>5</sup> and digged<sup>h</sup> many wells: for he had much cattle, both in the low country and in the plains;<sup>6</sup> husbandmen also,<sup>4</sup> and vine-dressers in the mountains, and in Carmel:<sup>7</sup> for he loved husbandry.<sup>8</sup>

11 ¶ Moreover, Uzziah had an host of fighting men, that went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account, by the hand of Jeiel the scribe, and Maaseiah the ruler, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains.

12 The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valour were two thousand and six hundred.

13 And under their hand was man army, three hundred thousand, and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy.

14 And Uzziah prepared for them, throughout all the host, shields, and spears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and slings to cast stones.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by cunning men, to be on the towers, and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal:<sup>9</sup> and his name spread<sup>1</sup> far abroad; for he was marvellously helped, till he was strong.

<sup>22</sup> This was a bold and a noble act, worthy of the descendants of the men who stood by Moses for the honour of God in the wilderness. Uzziah was a prince of strong will and great power. <sup>25</sup> On examining any treatise on medicine the reader must be struck with the frequency with which disease is attributed to mental passions, and not to bodily causes. Fear produces many disorders, not unfrequently death. The same is the case with anger, envy, and the gentler feelings of inordinate and misplaced affection—and visible causes there may undoubtedly be; but the real cause, and which truth discovers to faith, is the judgment of God either for punishment, ver. 12:6; correction, He. 12:6; prevention of sin, 1 Co. 12:2, or growth in grace, He. 12:11.—C.

16 ¶ But when he was strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction:<sup>2</sup> for he transgressed against the LORD his God, and went into the temple of the LORD, to burn incense upon the altar of incense.<sup>3</sup>

17 And Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the LORD, that were valiant men;

18 And they withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the LORD, but to the priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be for thine honour from the LORD God.

19 Then Uzziah was wroth, and had a censer in his hand to burn incense; and, while he was wroth with the priests, the leprosy even rose up in his forehead<sup>5</sup> before the priests in the house of the LORD, from beside the incense-altar.

20 And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous<sup>6</sup> in his forehead, and they thrust him out from thence; yea, himself hasted also to go out, because the LORD had smitten him.

21 And Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house, being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the LORD: and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land.

22 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, write.

23 So Uzziah slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they said, He is a leper: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Jotham reigning well prospereth. 5 He subdueth the Ammonites. 7 His acts, reign, and death. 9 Ahaz succeedeth him.

JOTHAM was<sup>a</sup> twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Jerushah, the daughter of Zadok.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit he entered not into the temple of the LORD.<sup>1</sup> And the people did yet corruptly.

3 ¶ He built the high gate of the house of the LORD, and on the wall of 'Ophel<sup>2</sup> he built much.<sup>3</sup>

4 Moreover, <sup>4</sup>he built cities in the mountains of Judah, and in the forests he built castles and towers.

5 ¶ He fought also with the 'king of the Ammonites, and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year an hundred talents of silver,<sup>4</sup> and ten thousand measures<sup>5</sup> of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. So much<sup>6</sup> did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second year and the third.

6 So Jotham became mighty, because <sup>7</sup>he prepared<sup>7</sup> his ways before the LORD his God.

7 ¶ Now the <sup>8</sup>rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways,<sup>8</sup> lo, they are written in the book of the Kings of Israel and Judah.

8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

9 ¶ And <sup>9</sup>Jotham slept with his fathers; and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Ahaz reigning very wickedly is greatly afflicted by the Syrians. 8 Judah being captivated by the Israelites is sent home by the counsel of Oded the prophet. 16 Ahaz sending for aid to Assyria is not helped thereby. 22 In his distress he becometh still more idolatrous. 26 He dying, Hezekiah succeedeth him.

AHAZ was <sup>1</sup>twenty years old<sup>1</sup> when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD, like David his father:<sup>2</sup>

2 For he <sup>3</sup>walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also molten images for Baalim.

3 Moreover he <sup>4</sup>burnt incense in the valley of the son of Hinnom, and burnt his children in the fire,<sup>3</sup> after the abominations of the heathen whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

4 He <sup>5</sup>sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

There seems, however, no reason to question the account: the cruelty that could despoil the land by carrying off 200,000 women, sons, and daughters, to sell them or hold them for domestic, field, or colonial slaves, would feel little compunction for such a cruel and wholesale butchery of the sons of valor, whose total extinction would be the best safeguard of their conquerors. 19 There are always some who, in the time of national defections, can discover the signs of approaching judgments; who sigh and who cry for all the abominations that are done in the land; who do what they may to stem the iniquity that cometh in like a flood; who sometimes, by grace, by the enforcement of repentance, succeed in averting national calamities, but who, if their country or church will not hear, are yet privileged to deliver their own souls.—C.

5 Wherefore the LORD <sup>6</sup>his God<sup>4</sup> delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to Damascus;<sup>5</sup> and he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

6 For <sup>7</sup>Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah an hundred and twenty thousand in one day,<sup>6</sup> which were all valiant men;<sup>7</sup> because<sup>8</sup> they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was next to the king.<sup>8</sup>

8 ¶ And the children of Israel <sup>9</sup>carried away captive of their brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and <sup>10</sup>he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, <sup>11</sup>because the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that reacheth up unto heaven.

10 And now ye purpose to keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for <sup>12</sup>bondmen and bond-women unto you: but are there not <sup>13</sup>with you, even with you, sins against the LORD your God?

11 Now hear me therefore, and <sup>14</sup>deliver the captives<sup>9</sup> again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: <sup>15</sup>for the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you.

12 Then certain of the <sup>16</sup>heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, <sup>17</sup>stood up against them that came from the war,

13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the LORD already, ye intend <sup>18</sup>to add more to our sins and to our trespass; for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.<sup>1</sup> happy when children imitate their parents' goodness, and carefully avoid their faults. But hard is the task to bring an obdurate people off from their corrupt cus-heard unto Ahaz. How is that statement reconciled with this verse? In this way: the assistance rendered to Ahaz was of no real service, though he of his professing people. Often the very persons or nations whom we have made our pattern in wickedness, are made the instruments of our punishment. And

COFFEE GARDEN, DUMMAR, DAMASCUS—TO WHOSE GODS AHAZ, THE KING OF JUDAH, SACRIFICED, AND BROUGHT RUIN TO HIS HOME AND PEOPLE. [II. Chronicles, xxviii:23].—"For he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him." Ahaz was the son of Jothan and the twelfth king of Judah. He reigned sixteen years, from B. C. 726 to B. C. 742. He introduced new sanctuaries and strange altars in Jerusalem, and burned incense in the temple courts to the heavenly bodies. He erected a new altar after the pattern of one

he had seen in Damascus. He is said to have introduced the sun dial, which is about the only useful thing he contributed to his time. We give a picture above of a coffee garden in one of the suburbs of Damascus. This city was, perhaps, in the days of Ahaz, very much what it is to-day. It owes its existence to the Abana river, and has always been noted for its beautiful gardens filled with flowering shrubs. Damascus has always been a wicked city. People here have lived for pleasure, and the gods of Damascus to which Ahaz sacrificed were the ruin of him and of his people.

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which were expressed by name rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil clothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and gave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, the city of palm-trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.<sup>1</sup>

16 ¶ At that time did king Ahaz send unto the kings of Assyria to help him.

17 For again the Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away captives.<sup>2</sup>

18 The Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken Beth-shemesh, and Ajalon, and Gederoth, and Shchocho with the villages thereof, and Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof; and they dwelt there.

19 For the LORD brought Judah low, because of Ahaz king of Israel; for he made Judah naked,<sup>3</sup> and transgressed sore against the LORD.

20 And Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria came unto him, and distressed him, but strengthened him not.<sup>4</sup>

21 For Ahaz took away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

22 ¶ And in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: this is that king Ahaz.

23 For he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him;<sup>5</sup> and he said, Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that they may help me: but they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.<sup>6</sup>

24 And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and shut up the doors of the house of the LORD, and he made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places to burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

5 The Septuagint translates it: 'And king Ahaz said, I will seek to the gods of Damascus which have smitten me.' This view is preferred by many, as our translation seems to ascribe the power of smiting to idols. 4 The public worship at the temple was entirely suppressed during the latter years of king Ahaz. The only reason advanced for a contrary opinion is this: it is not said that the sacred fire on the altar of burnt-offering was extinguished, or that it was rekindled by fire from heaven, as at the dedication of the temple. If, however, the service was not entirely put a stop to, the people in general were shut out from attending.—J.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 Hezekiah's good reign. 3 He restoreth religion. 5 He exhorteth the Levites to cleanse the house of God. 12 They sanctify themselves, and cleanse the house of God. 20 Hezekiah offereth solemn sacrifices, wherein the Levites were more forward than the priests.

HEZEKIAH began<sup>a</sup> to reign when he was five and twenty years old;<sup>1</sup> and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Abijah, the daughter of Zechariah.<sup>2</sup>

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father had done.

3 ¶ He, in the first year of his reign,<sup>3</sup> in the first month, opened the doors of the house of the LORD, and repaired them.<sup>4</sup>

4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the east street,

5 And said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites; Sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place.<sup>5</sup>

6 For your fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and have forsaken him; and have turned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and turned their backs.<sup>6</sup>

7 Also they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense nor offered burnt-offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

8 Wherefore the wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to trouble, to astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes.

9 For, lo, our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons, and our daughters, and our wives, are in captivity for this.<sup>7</sup>

10 Now it is in mine heart to make a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.

11 My sons,<sup>8</sup> be not now negligent: for the LORD both rebuked you to stand before him to serve him, and that ye should minister unto him, and burn<sup>9</sup> incense.<sup>1</sup>

12 ¶ Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the <sup>2</sup>Kohathites: and of the sons of Merari; Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Jehalelel: and of the Gershonites; Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah:

13 And of the sons of <sup>3</sup>Elizaphan; Shimri, and Jeiel: and of the sons of Asaph; Zechariah, and Mattaniah:

14 And of the sons of Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: and of the sons of Jeduthun; Shemaiah, and Uzziel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, <sup>4</sup>by the words of the LORD, to cleanse the house of the LORD.

16 And the priests went into the <sup>5</sup>inner part of the house of the LORD, to cleanse it,<sup>2</sup> and brought out all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad <sup>6</sup>into the brook Kidron.

17 Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to the <sup>7</sup>porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.<sup>3</sup>

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and the <sup>8</sup>altar of burnt-offering, with all the vessels thereof, and the show-bread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover, <sup>9</sup>all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away<sup>4</sup> in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king <sup>10</sup>rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD.

21 And they brought <sup>11</sup>seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for a sin-offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah:<sup>5</sup> and he commanded the priests, the sons of Aaron, to offer them on the altar of the LORD.

1 Hezekiah acted the part of a God-fearing monarch. He used his influence and his power to promote the spiritual welfare of his kingdom. He became a father to the nation. He instructed the priests, and stirred them up to a discharge of their proper duties. He warned the people, by showing what calamities had befallen them on account of their neglect of religion. All this is an example and a lesson to Christian kings and rulers in our days.—P.

the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar.

23 And they brought forth<sup>6</sup> the he-goats for the sin-offering<sup>7</sup> before the king and the congregation;<sup>7</sup> and they laid their <sup>8</sup>hands upon them.

24 And the priests killed them, and they made reconciliation with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel: for the king commanded that the burnt-offering and the sin-offering should be made for all Israel.

25 And<sup>9</sup> he set the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, according to the commandment of David, and of Gad the king’s seer, and Nathan the prophet: for so was the commandment of the LORD by<sup>8</sup> his prophets.<sup>9</sup>

26 And the Levites <sup>10</sup>stood <sup>11</sup>with the instruments of David, and the priests with <sup>12</sup>the trumpets.

27 And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt-offering upon the altar. And when the burnt-offering began, the <sup>13</sup>song of the LORD began<sup>2</sup> also with the trumpets, and with the instruments ordained by David king of Israel.

28 And all the congregation worshipped, and the <sup>14</sup>singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded: and all this continued until the burnt-offering was finished.

29 And when they had made an end of offering, the king, and all that were present with him, <sup>15</sup>bowed themselves, and worshipped.

30 Moreover Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD with <sup>16</sup>the words of David, and of Asaph the seer:<sup>3</sup> and they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshipped.

31 Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye have consecrated yourselves unto the LORD, come near, and bring <sup>17</sup>sacrifices and thank-offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank-offerings; and as many as were of a free heart, burnt-offerings.<sup>4</sup>

32 And the <sup>18</sup>number of the burnt-offerings, which the congregation brought, was threescore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt-offering<sup>5</sup> to the LORD. *

33 And the <sup>2</sup>consecrated things were six hundred oxen, and three thousand sheep.

34 But the <sup>1</sup>priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt-offerings: wherefore their <sup>2</sup>brethren the Levites did help them,<sup>6</sup> till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves: for the Levites were more upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.

35 And also the burnt-offerings were in abundance, with the <sup>1</sup>fat of the peace-offerings, and the <sup>2</sup>drink-offerings for every burnt-offering. So the service of the house of the LORD was set in order.

36 And Hezekiah <sup>1</sup>rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people: for the thing was done suddenly.<sup>7</sup>

CHAPTER XXX.

AND Hezekiah sent to all <sup>1</sup>Israel and Judah, and wrote letters also to <sup>2</sup>Ephraim and Manasseh,<sup>1</sup> that they should come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, to <sup>3</sup>keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

2 For the king had <sup>4</sup>taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover <sup>5</sup>in the second month.<sup>2</sup>

3 For they could not keep it at <sup>6</sup>that time, because the priests <sup>7</sup>had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing pleased the king<sup>3</sup> and all the congregation.

5 So they established a decree to make proclamation <sup>8</sup>throughout all Israel, from Beersheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done <sup>9</sup>it of a long time in such sort as it was written.

6 So the posts<sup>4</sup> went with the letters from<sup>5</sup> the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you that are escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>3</sup> 1 Ephraim and Manasseh lay contiguous to Jerusalem, but not never than Reuben and Gad, and not so near as Simeon and Dan. Three reasons seem to have produced this special notice of the invitation to Ephraim, of which Manasseh was a dependency, as Benjamin was of Judah. (1) After Judah Ephraim was the greatest tribe. (2) It seems to have been the most heathenish and idolatrous, and therefore its omission might have been expected. Ho. 4. 17. 13. 1. (3) The king, by his pious and energetic letter, seeks to avail the efforts of Hosea for the reformation and salvation of his country. This special invitation to Ephraim seems to have arisen from the partial reformation produced by the preaching of Hosea, ch. 13. 12. 14. 8, in which Manasseh, a dependency of Ephraim, as Benjamin was of Judah, had most probably participated. On being fully instructed after reaching Jerusalem, the heads of families found that they could not themselves slay the paschal lamb, because they were unclean. In all such cases the Levites acted in their stead, and the priests received the blood from the Levites and sprinkled it on the altar.—P.

<sup>32</sup> The end of all outward ceremonial purification was to reach the heart—means to an end. But we may not neglect that the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you.

9 For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.

10 So the posts passed from city to city through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh even unto Zebulun: but they <sup>1</sup>laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.

11 Nevertheless <sup>2</sup>divers of Asher, and Manasseh, and of Zebulun, humbled <sup>3</sup>themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

12 Also in Judah the <sup>4</sup>hand of God was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king and of the princes, by the word of the LORD.<sup>1</sup>

13 <sup>5</sup>And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread <sup>6</sup>in the second month, a very great congregation.

14 And they arose, and took away the <sup>7</sup>altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the <sup>8</sup>priests and the Levites were ashamed,<sup>2</sup> and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt-offerings into the house of the LORD.

16 And they stood in their place<sup>3</sup> after their manner, <sup>4</sup>according to the law of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites.

17 For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified: therefore <sup>5</sup>the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD.<sup>4</sup>

18 For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, <sup>6</sup>had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written: but Hezekiah <sup>7</sup>prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with loud instruments<sup>7</sup> unto the LORD.

22 And Hezekiah spake 'comfortably unto all the Levites that taught the 'good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace-offerings, and making<sup>8</sup> confession to the LORD God of their fathers.

23 And the whole assembly took counsel to<sup>m</sup> keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness.<sup>8</sup>

24 For Hezekiah king of Judah 'did give to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and ten thousand sheep: and 'a great number of priests sanctified themselves.

25 And all the congregation of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the strangers<sup>p</sup> that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced.<sup>9</sup>

26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem: for since the 'time of Solomon, the son of David king of Israel, there was not the like in Jerusalem.<sup>1</sup>

27 ¶ Then the 'priests the Levites arose and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to 'his holy dwelling-place, even unto heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The people's zeal in destroying idolatry. 2 Hezekiah ordereth the courses of the priests and Levites, and provideth for their work and maintenance. 5 The people's forwardness in bringing in first-fruits and tithes. 11 Hezekiah appointeth officers to dispose of those offerings. 20 The sincerity of Hezekiah.

NOW when all this was finished, all Israel that were present<sup>1</sup> went out to the cities of Judah, and brake the images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasseh, until they had utterly destroyed<sup>2</sup> them all.<sup>3</sup> Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

2 ¶ And Hezekiah appointed the courses of the priests, and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests and Levites for burnt-offerings and for peace-offerings, to minister, and to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the LORD.<sup>4</sup>

6 In the reign of the idolatrous Ahab, the temple being closed, and the priests and Levites dispersed, all provision for the service of God had ceased; now, in better times, the temple is reopened, the priests and Levites recalled, their legal provision restored; and as soon as the 'commandment comes at road' the people, whose heart God had opened, 'brought in abundantly for the support of his service.'—C.

14 The first-fruits of the field are here referred to. In the third month, just at the close of the wheat-harvest, they began to bring in the first-fruits, and to lay the foundations of the heaps; in the seventh month, at the close of the vintage, they completed their offerings.—P.

18 Whence it may be inferred, that until 'the commandment came abroad' (ver. 5), the priests were often in want of provisions. Now, by the blessing of God upon a pious king, they have 'enough to eat, and plenty left.' But the liberality and the abundance are both ascribed to the Lord.—C.

19 The disinterestedness of the priests was highly commendable, for they might easily have enriched themselves without being suspected. The whole transaction enlarges our idea of the blessing which had attended the solemnity; for before this the priests were generally careless and ungodly.—1.

4 Moreover he commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give 'the portion of the priests and the Levites, that 'they might be encouraged in the law of the LORD.<sup>6</sup>

5 ¶ And as soon as the commandment came abroad,<sup>7</sup> the children of Israel 'brought in abundance<sup>8</sup> the first-fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey,<sup>9</sup> and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.

6 And concerning the children of Israel and Judah, that dwelt in the cities of Judah, they also brought in the tithe of oxen and sheep, and the 'tithe of holy things, which were consecrated unto the LORD their God, and laid them <sup>h</sup>by heaps.

7 In the 'third<sup>1</sup> month they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh<sup>2</sup> month.<sup>3</sup>

8 And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they 'blessed the LORD, and his people Israel.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

11 ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare chambers<sup>6</sup> in the house of the LORD; and they prepared them, 12 And brought in the offerings, and the tithes, and the dedicated things, faithfully: 'over which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next.

13 And Jehiel, and Azariah, and Nahath, and Asahel, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Ismachiah, and Mahath, and Benaiah, were overseers, under the hand<sup>7</sup> of Cononiah, and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and Azariah the ruler of the house of God.

14 And Kore the son of Innah the Levite, 'the porter toward the east, was over the free-will-offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the LORD, and the 'most holy things.

15 And next him<sup>8</sup> were Eden, and Miniamin, and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and She-

17 Both to the genealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites from twenty years old and upward, in their charges by their courses;

18 And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their set office they sanctified themselves in holiness.<sup>4</sup>

19 Also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were in the fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were expressed by name, to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.

20 ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and wrought that which was good, and right, and truth, before the LORD his God.

21 And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart,<sup>5</sup> and prospered.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Sennacherib invading Judah, Hezekiah fortifieth himself, and encourageth the people. 9 Against the blasphemies of Sennacherib, by message and letters, Hezekiah and Isaiah pray. 21 An angel destroyeth the host of the Assyrians, to the glory of Hezekiah. 24 Hezekiah praying in his sickness, God giveth him a sign of recovery. 25 He waxing proud is humbled by God. 27 His riches and works. 31 His error in relation to the Babylonish ambassadors. 32 He dying, Manasseh succeedeth him.

AFTER these<sup>a</sup> things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities,<sup>1</sup> and thought to win them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city; and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ran through the midst of the land,<sup>3</sup> saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?

5 Also he strengthened himself, and built up all the wall that was broken, and raised it up to the towers, and another wall without, and repaired Millo in the city of David, and made towers and shields in abundance.

LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

18 Then they cried with a loud voice, in the Jews' speech, unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, to affright them, and to trouble them; that they might take the city.

19 And they spake against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods or the people of the earth, which were the work of the hands of man.<sup>7</sup>

20 ¶ And for this cause Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven.<sup>8</sup>

21 And the LORD sent an angel,<sup>9</sup> which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria: so he returned with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god,<sup>1</sup> they that came forth of his own bowels slew him<sup>2</sup> there with the sword.

22 Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other,<sup>3</sup> and guided them on every side.

23 And many brought gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, and presents<sup>4</sup> to Hezekiah king of Judah: so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations<sup>5</sup> from thenceforth.

24 ¶ In those days Hezekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he spake unto him, and he gave him a sign.

25 But Hezekiah rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him; for his heart was lifted up: therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem.<sup>6</sup>

26 Notwithstanding Hezekiah humbled himself for the pride<sup>7</sup> of his heart, (both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem,) so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them in the days of Hezekiah.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 Manasseh's wicked reign. 3 He setteth up idolatry, and would not be admonished. 11

POOLOF HEZEKIAH—BUILT BY THE KING OF JUDAH. [II. Chronicles, xxxii:30.]—"This same Hezekiah also stopped the upper watercourse of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. And Hezekiah prospered in all his works." The same pool is referred to also in II. Kings, xx:20, where it says: "And the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how he made a pool, and a conduit, and brought water into the city, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?" This pool is 240 feet long by 144 feet wide, and is rather shallow. At the bottom is natural rock, which is leveled and covered with cement, and it is furnished with water by a small aqueduct from Birket Mamila. Dr. Thomson says the water which fills the pool is still brought by an underground conduit from what is supposed to be the upper Gihon.

son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; <sup>so</sup> that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law, and the statutes, and the ordinances, by the hand of Moses.

9 So Manasseh <sup>made</sup> Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err,<sup>5</sup> and to do worse than the heathen, whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And<sup>m</sup> the LORD spake<sup>6</sup> to Manasseh, and to his people; but they would not hearken.

11 Wherefore the LORD brought upon them the captains of the host <sup>of</sup> the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh <sup>among</sup> the thorns,<sup>7</sup> and bound<sup>n</sup> him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon.

12 And<sup>2</sup> when he was in affliction, he besought the LORD his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, 13 And prayed unto him: and he <sup>was</sup> entreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. <sup>Then</sup> Manasseh knew that the LORD he was God.

14 ¶ Now after this he <sup>built</sup> a wall without the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in of the fish-gate, and compassed about <sup>Ophel</sup>, and raised it up a very great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah.

15 And <sup>he</sup> took away the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the LORD, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city.

16 And he <sup>repaired</sup> the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed thereon peace-offerings and thank-offerings, and <sup>commanded</sup> Judah to serve the LORD God of Israel.<sup>8</sup>

17 Nevertheless <sup>the</sup> people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the LORD their God only.

23 And <sup>humbled</sup> not himself before the LORD, as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but Amon <sup>trespassed</sup> more and more.

24 And <sup>his</sup> servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.

25 ¶ But the people of the land <sup>slew</sup> all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.<sup>5</sup>

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 Josiah's good reign. 3 He destroyeth idolatry. 8 He provideth for the repairs of the temple. 14 Hilkiah having found the book of the law, Josiah sendeth to Huldah to inquire of the Lord. 23 Huldah prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem, but respites thereof in Josiah's time. 29 Josiah, causing it to be read in a solemn assembly, reneweth the covenant with God.

JOSIAH was eight years old when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his father, and declined neither to the right hand nor to the left.<sup>1</sup>

3 ¶ For in the eighth year of his <sup>2</sup>reign, while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father: and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

4 And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the images<sup>3</sup> that were on high above them he cut down; and the <sup>4</sup>groves, and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, and strowed it upon the graves of them that had sacrificed unto them.<sup>5</sup>

5 And he burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And so did he in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon even unto Naphtali with their mattocks round about.<sup>7</sup>

7 And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven images into powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

8 ¶ Now, in the eighteenth year of his reign,<sup>8</sup> when he had purged the land, and the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God.

9 And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and they returned to Jerusalem.<sup>9</sup>

10 And they put it in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and amend the house;

11 Even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and to floor the houses which the kings of Judah had destroyed.<sup>2</sup>

12 And the men did the work faithfully: and the overseers of them were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward; and other of the Levites, all that could skill of instruments of music.<sup>3</sup>

13 Also they were over the bearers of burdens, and were overseers of all that wrought the work in any manner of service: and of the Levites there were scribes, and officers, and porters.

14 And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, <sup>9</sup> The ruin of the temple must have been nearly complete, as walls, roofs, and floors alike require to be repaired. The walls had probably been partially pulled down, as is common in similar cases, for the erection of other buildings.

The flat roofs would suffer for want of repairs more speedily than those of angular form; and the destruction of the floors, independently of depredation, would soon follow from the free access of the rain.—Voss. This is a sad picture of the ruin of the house of God. How much more sad the state of a soul, which pride, or covetousness, which is idolatry, or deceitful lusts, have destroyed.—C.

<sup>4</sup> Why the sacred musicians were the overseers is not declared, yet there must have been some reason for the selection. May it not have had reference to the fact, that as in the building of the temple there was no sound of hammer nor axe, nor any tool of iron heard, 1 Ki. 6. 7, so it should be in the repairing, and that the bearers of burdens should march, and the other artificers work, to the sound of music and the voice of praise? 'book of Moses' are mentioned, yet in this place alone is it called 'the book of the law, in, or by, the hand of Moses.' C.—This should be translated 'The Book of the Law of Jehovah by the hand of Moses,' and any unprejudiced reader would infer from the words that it was the original copy, which by the command of Moses had been laid inside the ark.

<sup>1</sup> Or, it says, regarding the words of this verse:—'This is scarce possible for words more naturally to describe a book written by Moses, or to vouch more fully that the MS. of the law then found was in the handwriting of Moses. And if either doubt will be removed when his consent is further that, though there are sixteen places in the Old Testament which mention the words 'book of Moses,' yet this is one place only in which the book of Moses is the book of Moses.'—P.

16 And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back again saying, All that was committed to thy servants, they do it.

17 And they have gathered together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. And Shaphan read it before the king.

19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the law, that he rent his clothes.<sup>9</sup>

20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying,

21 Go, inquire of the LORD for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.

22 And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum, the son of Tikvath, the son of Asarah, keeper of the wardrobe,<sup>1</sup> (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the college;<sup>2</sup> and they spake to her to that effect.

23 ¶ And she answered them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell ye the man that sent you to me,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah:

25 Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and shall not be quenched.

26 And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to inquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel concerning the words which thou hast heard;

27 Because thine heart was tender,<sup>4</sup> and 28 Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave in peace, neither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the same. So they brought the king word again.

29 ¶ Then<sup>k</sup> the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.<sup>3</sup>

30 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests, and the Levites, and all the people, great and small;<sup>4</sup> and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant that was found<sup>5</sup> in the house of the LORD.

31 And the king stood in his place, and made<sup>m</sup> a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book.

32 And he <sup>caused</sup> all that were present<sup>6</sup> in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers.

33 And Josiah <sup>took away</sup> all the abominations out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel, and made<sup>7</sup> all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God. And <sup>all</sup> his days they departed not from following<sup>8</sup> the LORD, the God of their fathers.<sup>9</sup>

18 And there "was no passover like to that" kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

close to the spot consecrated in national history by the great victory of Barak. It would seem that there was on the battlefield an ancient sanctuary of the two Syrian gods Hadad and Rimmon, and that the city of Megiddo was not far distant. We have no details of the battle. One melancholy event absorbs the attention of the sacred writer. Josiah disguised himself, as kings were then accustomed to do when entering battle. The Egyptian archers fired upon and mortally wounded him. He was put into another chariot, and driven rapidly off towards Jerusalem. But all was in vain. The good monarch died; and a Josiah and Jerusalem mourned for him. —P.

His reign was very short, but it was very wicked. Instead of imitating the noble example of his father, he gave way to the follies and vices of the worst of his predecessors, 2 Ki. 23:32. Necho returned in three months from his victorious campaign. Encamping for a time at Riblah on the northern border of Canaan, he gave orders to dethrone Jehoahaz, probably because he had not himself nominated him; and then he placed Eliakim, another son of Josiah, on the vacant throne. Necho was one of the Pharaohs of Egypt. This view of the Hall of the Royal Mummies, Gizeh Museum, is given because it contains the remains of many of the Egyptian kings. This hall is one of the large rooms in the Palace of Gizeh, a building which is said to have been erected at a cost of nearly twenty-five million dollars. It was built as a harem for the great Egyptian Pasha who assisted DeLesseps in opening the Suez canal, and who brought such a load of debt upon Egypt that he was deposed by the Sultan and taken to Constantinople. This building was confiscated by the government and is now used to house the valuable collection of Egyptian antiquities which make up the marvelous contents of the museum.

The proclamation of Cyrus referred to above had reference to building the Lord's house at Jerusalem. This is the Cyrus that captured Sardis, the capital of the kingdom of Lydia. Croesus was king at the time. Cyrus condemned him to be burned alive. When bound to the stake Croesus was heard to utter the name of Solon. Whereupon Cyrus inquired the reason. The unfortunate monarch replied by repeating a conversation which had taken place between himself and the Grecian sage on the instability of human happiness, which so affected Cyrus that he liberated Croesus, and ever after retained him as one of his most intimate friends.

THE BOOK OF EZRA

Was probably written by himself. It contains a history of eighty years; and exhibits the divine fulfilment of all those predictions of Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Micah, or others, which respected the deliverance from Babylon. It particularly informs us, (1) Upon what encouragement, and what numbers returned, i. ii. (2) How the temple was rebuilt and dedicated, notwithstanding repeated stops from their heathen neighbours, iii.-vi. (3) How Ezra, as Artaxerxes' deputy, came to Jerusalem, mourned over, and dissolved the marriages with heathen women, vii.-x. [The book of Ezra may be divided into two sections:—(1) Ch. i.-vi., containing an account of the return of the exiles from Babylon under the leadership of Zerubbabel and Joshua, with the erection of the temple and the re-establishment of the Jewish worship. (2) Ch. vii.-x., detailing the journey of a second caravan of exiles under the leadership of Ezra himself. P.]

CHAPTER I.

1 The proclamation of Cyrus for the building of the temple. 5 The people provide for their return. 7 Cyrus restoreth the vessels of the temple to Sheshbazzar.

NOW, in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia,<sup>1</sup> (that the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled,) the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying.

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth;<sup>2</sup> and he hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah;

3 Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up<sup>3</sup> to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel, (he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem.

4 And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, besides the free-will offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit God had raised,<sup>4</sup> to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem.

6 And all they that were about them strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, besides all that was willingly offered.

7 ¶ Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the LORD, which Nebu-x That the Jews in their captivity still retained their taste for sacred music, both vocal and instrumental, is manifest from Ps. 137.2. 7 In 2 Ch. 8, 9 it is related that Solomon made servants, not of Israel, but of the remnants of the nations that had not been exiled. These, if conveyed to the fact, it was lawful to incorporate into the Jewish nation, and these servants of Solomon are most probably their descendants.—C.

8 The reason of this exactness plain from this, that such of the Jews as believed their prophets expected a return into their native land after a period of seventy years, and preserved their genealogies as the title on which they might resume their properties.—Graves, Je. 32, 14.

9 Not spiritually, but genealogically polluted. This exclusion presents the two emblematic lessons. 1. The necessity of proving our spiritual descent by being born again, Ju. 3, 5. 2. The duty of excluding or removing from the ministry of the gospel all who cannot afford scriptural evidence that they are themselves the subjects of that holy conversion which they enforce upon others.—C.

1 Castel supposes this title to be of Persian origin, and that it signifies, fox.—C.

2 These separate numbers being added, give only 29,818; the numbers in Nehemiah 31, 089; yet both agree in giving one grand total, 42,360. To reconcile these varying accounts, it is necessary to observe, 1. That as many priests failed in establishing their genealogy (ver. 62), we may unquestionably infer, that many of the people were in the same predicament. 2. The number of these attainted priests is not given, so we may justly conclude of the unregistered people. 3. The persons enumerated obtained their hereditary estates in virtue of their genealogy. 4. The persons who cannot trace their descent, fail in establishing a right to any particular estate, but are not therefore excluded from the other rights of citizenship, but may settle as derivative tenants, or purchase for years, according to the jubilee law, or obtain new settlements in the unclaimed lands. Now these being added to the others, make up the sum of the whole congregation. 5. When Ezra recounts 424 not mentioned in Nehemiah, and Nehemiah 175 mentioned in Ezra, these accounts may be easily reconciled, by supposing the two varying enumerations to relate to different periods of proof of genealogy and enrolment as citizens, the third to the register when the pedigree was completed.—C.

3 From what is known of eastern caravans or carriages, the horses would be for the necessary guard of cavalry, the mules for the richer class to ride, the camels for carrying food, camp furniture, &c., and the asses would be nearly all required for conveyance of the children. It is obvious the greater number of adults, both men and women, would be on foot. The whole presents a striking continuation of the statistics introduced by Moses at the commandment of God, Nu. 13, 2, 17-20; and while it exhibits the deep poverty of the returning remnant, it beautifully illustrates the power of grace to open the heart, and teach every man to contribute to the cause of God, after his ability. AND when the seventh month<sup>1</sup> was come, and the children of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem.

2 Then stood up Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt-offerings thereon, as it is written in the law of Moses the man of God.<sup>2</sup>

3 And they set the altar upon his bases; (for fear was upon them because of the people of those countries;) and they offered burnt-offerings thereon unto the LORD, even burnt-offerings morning and evening.

JAFFA, FROM HOTEL WINDOW—TO JAFFA WAS BROUGHT CEDAR TREES FROM LEBANON FOR THE REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE IN JERUSALEM, UNDER ZERUBABEL. [Ezra, iii. 7.]—"They gave money also unto the masons, and to the carpenters; and meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar trees from Lebanon to the sea of Joppa, according to the grant that they had of Cyrus, king of Persia." When Solomon originally built the temple, he had the assistance of Hiram, king of Tyre, who sent cedar from Lebanon by way of Joppa (Jaffa) to Jerusalem. So we find that when Zerubabel undertook the rebuilding of the temple, he had a grant from Cyrus, king of Persia, to bring cedar trees from Lebanon by way of Joppa to Jerusalem. We give an illustration of Jaffa from the hotel window. This city has a remarkable history. At different times it has been pagan, Jew, Moslem, Arab, Mameluke, and Christian. There are beautiful gardens about this old city filled with towering palms, and orange and lemon trees.

oil,<sup>4</sup> unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar-trees from Lebanon to the sea of Joppa,<sup>5</sup> according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

8 ¶ Now, in the second year<sup>6</sup> of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the LORD.

9 Then stood Jeshua, with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of Judah,<sup>7</sup> together,<sup>8</sup> to set forward the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, they set the priests in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites, the sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the LORD, after the ordinance of David king of Israel.

11 And they sang together by course, in praising and giving thanks unto the LORD; because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid.

12 But many of the priests and Levites, and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house,<sup>9</sup> when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes, wept with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy:

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people: for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

13 Some of these colonists can still be traced in geography, but the original seats of others are totally unknown. They serve, however, to illustrate an important evidence of the divine origin of the Scriptures. These different nations were all so amalgamated into one people, in which all distinctive characters were lost; but the Jews, according to prophecy, still remain a separate people, mixed with every nation, never combined with any. This the Spirit of God could alone foresee—this divine providence could alone produce.—C.

¶ Let us build with you: for we seek your God, as ye do; and we do sacrifice unto him since the days of Esar-haddon<sup>2</sup> king of Assur, which brought us up hither.

3 But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the LORD God of Israel, as king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

4 Then the people of the land weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and troubled them in building.<sup>3</sup>

5 And hired counsellors against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of Persia.

6 And in the reign of Ahasuerus,<sup>5</sup> in the beginning of his reign,<sup>6</sup> wrote they unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

7 ¶ And in the days of Artaxerxes<sup>7</sup> wrote Bishlam,<sup>8</sup> Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their companions, unto Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the writing of the letter was written in the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue.

8 Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe,<sup>9</sup> wrote a letter against Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the king in this sort:

9 Then wrote Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe, and the rest of their companions; the Dinaites, the Apharsathchites, the Tarpelites, the Apharsites, the Archevites, the Babylonians, the Susanchites, the Dehavites, and the Elamites,<sup>1</sup>

10 And the rest of the nations whom the great and noble Asnapper brought over, and set in the cities of Samaria, and the rest that are on this side the river, and at such a time.

11 ¶ This is the copy of the letter that they sent unto him, even unto Artaxerxes the king; Thy servants the men on this side the river, and at such a time.

12 Be it known unto the king, that the Jews which came up from thee to us are come unto Jerusalem, building the rebellious and the bad city, and have set up the walls thereof, and joined the foundations.

24 Then ceased<sup>9</sup> the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE ERECHTHEUM, ACROPOLIS—THE ERECHTHEUM WAS BURNED BY THE PERSIANS, LED BY DARIUS OR BY AHASUERUS, HIS SON, AND REBUILT IN THE TIME OF PERICLES. [Ezra, vii.]—"Then Darius the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the rolls, where the treasures were made up in Babylon." After the death of Cyrus, Cambyses was made king of Persia. He died of a small wound, and left no issue to succeed him, and his throne was usurped by Darius. Darius burnt Sardis, and thereby so enraged the Athenians that a war was kindled between

Greece and Persia. Darius was then so exasperated against the Greeks that a servant every day, by his order, repeated these words: "Remember, O King, to punish the Athenians." He was conquered at the celebrated battle of Marathon by 10,000 Athenians. We give a picture of a general view of the Erechtheum on the Acropolis to illustrate these facts of Grecian history and the connection of Darius with it. It is an interesting fact that the Persians burned down the temple of Erechtheus that stood on this very spot. It was afterwards rebuilt in the time of Pericles.

whose name was Sheshbazzar,<sup>1</sup> whom he had made governor;<sup>2</sup>

15 And said unto him, Take these vessels, go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be builded in his place.

16 Then came the same Sheshbazzar, and laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem: and since that time even until now hath it been in building, and yet it is not finished.<sup>3</sup>

17 Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, let there be search made in the king's treasure-house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Darius, finding the decree of Cyrus, maketh a new decree for the advancement of the building. 13 By the help of the enemies, and the directions of the prophets, the temple is finished. 16 The feast of the dedication is kept, 19 and the passover.

THEN Darius<sup>a</sup> the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the rolls,<sup>1</sup> where the treasures were laid up<sup>2</sup> in Babylon.

2 And there was found at Achmetha,<sup>3</sup> in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written:

3 In the first year of Cyrus the king, the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid; the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits;<sup>4</sup>

4 With three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber; and let the expenses be given out of the king's house:

5 And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and brought<sup>5</sup> again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house of God.

6 Now<sup>a</sup> therefore, Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and your companions<sup>6</sup> the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence:<sup>7</sup>

7 Let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews and the elders of the Jews build this house of God in his place.

2 The terms occurring throughout the decree of Darius imply his conviction that the God of the Jews was the true Jehovah. He did not, indeed, relinquish the worship of his idols, but he clearly believed Jehovah to be superior to them all. He seems to have acknowledged him to be the supreme. He makes provision for the daily sacrifices, the morning evening burnt-offerings, which, according to the law, were to be made day by day continually; and he desires an interest for himself, and for his sons in the prayers of Jehovah's worshippers.—I.

The building originally begun by Cyrus was finished, so far as mere building was concerned, by Darius—the finishing was reserved for Artaxerxes, the friend of Ezra, ch. 7, 12, 27.—Note.18 The overruling providence of God employs the enmity of the Samaritans to keep the temple of the Lord and his service so long before the eyes of the government, that it is unnecessary for its claims to their attention. And even thus, in Christian times, the violence of persecutors has been overruled, to bring the name, evidences, and excellences of Christianity before kings and judges, so that the blood of martyrs has become the very seed of the church.—C.

11 ¶ Now this is the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even a scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

12 Artaxerxes, 'king of kings, unto 'Ezra the priest, a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace, and at such a time.

13 I make a decree, that 'all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests and Levites, in my realm, which are minded of their own free will to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee.

14 Forasmuch as thou art sent of the 'king, and of his 'seven counsellors,<sup>8</sup> to inquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, according to the law of 'thy God which is in thine hand;

15 And to carry 'the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have freely 'offered unto the God of Israel, whose habitation 'is in Jerusalem,

18 And 'whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver and the gold, that do after the will of your God.

19 The 'vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, those deliver thou before the God of Jerusalem.

20 And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, bestow it out of the king's treasure-house.<sup>2</sup>

21 And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to 'all the treasurers which are

And often his spiritual work is carried on by their means who have neither part nor lot in the matter. The prayers of the godly are, or ought to be, the great support of nations and their magistrates; and if magistrates understood their own interests they would carefully secure them in their favour. But dreadful is the curse, which shall at last light upon all the enemies of prayers of faith for God's blessing on the ordinances of his grace, which we have, or expect to enjoy. Yet not upon our services in his church must our hopes and joys depend, but on Jesus, as our God-honouring and sin-expiating oblation, and our passover sacrificed for us. If we live on him as our all in all, and occupy ourselves diligently in his service, the Lord will provide friends for us, even where we least expected.

24 Also we certify you, that touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it<sup>7</sup> shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom, upon them.

25 And thou, Ezra, after the wisdom of thy God that is in thine hand, set magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God; and teach ye them that know them not.

28 And hath extended mercy unto me before the king, and his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes: and I was strengthened as<sup>9</sup> the hand of the LORD my God was upon me; and I gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me.

monarch of the great principle, that God is king of nations, and that he can justly claim national treasures for the support and promotion of his church. Ezra was empowered to draw from the public funds whatever

for the building of the temple and the re-establishment of the worship of God

at Jerusalem. The great officers of the empire were commanded to afford

Ezra every facility in his work, and to see that he was supplied with money.

Ezra felt himself justified in accepting of and using the money.

The concluding clause of ver. 23 is especially deserving of note; it embodies a noble lesson, which kings and rulers in all ages and countries ought to learn—that the wrath of God is to be averted, and his blessing to be obtained, by a dedication to his glory of

and power.—P.

LYCABETTUS AND THE PALACE OF THE KING, FROM ACROPOLIS—IN SIGHT OF PLACE WHERE AHASUERUS WAS DEFEATED IN THE BATTLE OF SALAMIS. [Ezra, viii:1.]—After the death of Darius, who was conquered by the Greeks in the battle of Marathon, Ahasuerus succeeded his father on the throne. Ahasuerus continued the warlike operations of his father, and invaded Greece, but was conquered at the battle of Salamis on the 20th of September, B. C.
480. There is a mount whose base is washed by the sea, called Kory-dallos, in sight of the Acropolis and Mt. Lycabettus which has long borne the name of the Throne of Xerxes (Ahasuerus) because it is said he sat upon the rocky brow of this hill in his silver-footed chair to watch the progress of the battle of Salamis. The Persian army was almost completely destroyed in this battle. Under the very eyes of Ahasuerus the Greeks destroyed the "bloom of all the Persian youth, in spirit the bravest, and in truth the noblest princes."

20 Also* of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

21 ¶ Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might afflict ourselves before our God, to seek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way:<sup>a</sup> because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So we fasted, and besought our God for this; and he was entreated of us.<sup>3</sup>

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

25 And weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered;

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basons of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of fine copper,<sup>5</sup> precious as gold.<sup>6</sup>

28 And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto the LORD; the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.

29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem, unto the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy:<sup>7</sup> and of such as lay in the Bedouin Arabs,

These were chiefly

who still continue to infest the neighbourhood of Babylon and the deserts of the adjacent countries.

True to their origi-

hand is still against every man. Single travellers or weak

parties dare not pass

strong and numerous parties, well armed,

or escorted by ca-

vary, cannot pass

free, for when they fear to attack a well-guarded caravan,

they are the most

night, and carry off

they can seize by

day. Their more general habit, however,

is to avoid shedding blood, but to levy

amount to spoliation.

To such robber hordes, Ezra and his fellow-mourners presented a most tempt-could not be less than

What faith was here shown by Ezra?

He well knew that the whole country between the banks of

the Euphrates and Palestine swarmed with Arabs, with whom robbery was a trade. He knew also the immense value of the property the returning exiles were about to carry with them. Yet he would not ask a guard. He prayed to God. He had confidence in his power, his faithfulness, and his love to a penitent people.

He thus set forth on that perilous journey over the exposed desert, and the God of Abraham conveyed his people in safety to the land of their fathers.—P.

They appear to have

CHAPTER IX.

1 Ezra mourneth for the intermarriages of the people with strangers.
5 He prayeth unto God with confession of sins.

NOW, when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel,<sup>1</sup> and the priests, and the Levites, have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

2 For they have taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons; so that the holy<sup>2</sup> seed have mingled themselves with the people of those lands: yea, the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass.

3 And when I heard this thing, I rent my garment and my mantle, and plucked off the hair of my head<sup>3</sup> and of my beard, and sat down astonished.

4 Then were assembled unto me every one that trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonished until the evening sacrifice.

5 ¶ And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my heaviness; and, having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees

B BRIDGE OVER THE ILLISSUS—ONE OF THE FOUR MOST CELEBRATED RIVERS IN THE WORLD, THE OTHER THREE BEING THE TIBER, THE NILE AND THE JORDAN. [Ezra, ix:1.]—"Now when these things were done, the princes came to me, saying the people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, doing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians and the Amorites." About the time Ezra uttered the prayer recorded in this ninth chapter, confessing the sins of his people, the Spartans and the Boeotians were waging war against Athens. We give, as illustrating this Grecian history, contemporaneous with the facts of the ninth chapter of Ezra, a picture of a modern bridge over the Illissus. This is a small stream that flows at the bottom of a deep ravine, through the classic city of Athens. It is dry a part of the year, and yet is one of the most famous water courses on earth, made so by the great men who have lived on and about it.

our iniquities are increased over our head,<sup>4</sup> and our trespass is grown up unto the heavens.<sup>5</sup>

7 Since the <sup>2</sup>days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day.

8 And now for a <sup>1</sup>little space grace hath been showed from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant<sup>6</sup> to escape, and to give us<sup>7</sup> a nail<sup>8</sup> in his holy place, that our God may <sup>1</sup>lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage.

9 For <sup>1</sup>we were bondmen; yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the <sup>1</sup>sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to set up the house of our God, and to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us <sup>1</sup>a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.

10 And now, O our God, <sup>1</sup>what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments, 11 Which thou hast commanded <sup>1</sup>by thy servants the prophets, saying, The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from one end to another with their uncleanness.

12 Now therefore give not your daughters unto your sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever; <sup>1</sup>that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave <sup>1</sup>it for an inheritance to your children for ever.

13 And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God <sup>1</sup>hast punished us less than our iniquities<sup>9</sup> deserve, and hast given us such deliverance as this;

14 Should<sup>b</sup> we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? <sup>1</sup>wouldst not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping?

15 O<sup>a</sup> LORD God of Israel, thou art righteous;<sup>1</sup> for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee in our tres-

Or, the next words may be rendered not 'for we remain,' but 'though we remain' God's justice will not suffer us to escape, though for the present he forbear to punish us to the extent of our deserts. <sup>1</sup> The sorrow and consternation of so eminent a person as Ezra, with his prayer and confession of deep criminality, were no doubt speedily reported all over the city; and this induced the people seriously to reflect upon their conduct and its consequences, so that numbers of their own accord gathered around the governor, and united with him in lamentations and humiliation before God. And the alarm becoming general, even the women and children joined the assembly in the court of the temple, probably fearing lest the wrath of God should immediately be poured out upon them.—C.

passes; for we cannot <sup>1</sup>stand before thee be cause of this.

CHAPTER X.

NOW when Ezra<sup>1</sup> had<sup>a</sup> prayed, and when he had confessed, weeping and casting himself down <sup>1</sup>before the house of God, there <sup>1</sup>assembled unto him out of Israel a very great congregation of men, and women, and children: for the people wept very sore.<sup>2</sup>

2 And Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, <sup>1</sup>We have trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: yet now <sup>1</sup>there is hope in Israel concerning this thing.

3 Now therefore let us <sup>1</sup>make a covenant with our God, to put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my lord, and of those that <sup>1</sup>tremble at the commandment of our God; and let it be done <sup>1</sup>according to the law.

4 Arise;<sup>4</sup> for this matter belongeth unto thee: we also will be with thee: be of good courage, and do it.<sup>3</sup>

5 Then arose Ezra, and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel, to <sup>1</sup>swear that they should do according to this word. And they sware.

6 ¶ Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into <sup>1</sup>the chamber of Johanan the son of <sup>1</sup>Eliashib: and when he came thither, he <sup>1</sup>did eat no bread, nor drink water; for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away.

7 And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem, unto all the children of the captivity, that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem;

8 And <sup>1</sup>that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be <sup>1</sup>forfeited,<sup>4</sup> and himself <sup>1</sup>separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away.

9 ¶ Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto Jerusalem within three days: it was the ninth month,<sup>5</sup> and the twentieth day of the month; and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling<sup>6</sup> because of this matter, and for the great rain.<sup>6</sup>

10 And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and have taken strange wives, to increase the trespass of Israel.

11 Now therefore make confession unto the LORD God of your fathers, and do his pleasure; and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from the strange wives.

12 Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do.

13 But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without,<sup>7</sup> neither is this a work of one day or two: for we are many that have transgressed in this thing.<sup>8</sup>

14 Let now our rulers of all the congregation stand, and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until the fierce wrath of our God for this matter be turned from us.<sup>9</sup>

15 ¶ Only Jonathan the son of Asahel, and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah, were employed about this matter: and Meshullam and Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

16 And the children of the captivity did so: and Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month to examine<sup>10</sup> the matter.

17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.<sup>11</sup>

18 ¶ And among the sons of the priests there were found that had taken strange wives; namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren, Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah.

19 And they gave their hands<sup>12</sup> that they would put away their wives; and, being guilty, they offered a ram of the flock for their trespass.<sup>13</sup>

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH

Was probably written by himself. It commences twelve years after the dissolution of the unhallowed marriages; and, including at least twelve years of historical account, reaches to about the hundred and fourth after the return from Babylon. It represents (1) Nehemiah's deep concern for the desolations of Jerusalem, and the commission he obtained from king Artaxerxes to rebuild the wall of it, i. ii. (2) His building of the wall and dedicating it, notwithstanding great opposition from the heathens around, iii. iv. vi. xii. 27-43. (3) His redressing the people's grievances, their debts, and mortgages, v. (4) His taking account of those who returned from Babylon, vii. (5) His care to promote the solemn reading of the law, fasting, and renovation of their covenant with God, viii.-x. (6) His care to replenish Jerusalem, and settle the priests, Levites, singers, and porters in their proper work, xi. xii. (7) His care to check unhallowed marriages, procure the Levites their provision, and restrain profanation of the Sabbath, xiii.

CHAPTER I.

1 Nehemiah, informed by Hanani concerning the afflicted state of Jerusalem, mourneth, fasteth, and prayeth. 5 His prayer.

THE words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah. And it came to pass in the month Chisleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in Shushan<sup>1</sup> the palace,

2 That Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem.

3 And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before the God of heaven,<sup>2</sup>

5 And said, I beseech thee, O LORD God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him, and observe his commandments;

6 Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, day<sup>3</sup> and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: both I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which thou commandedst thy servant Moses.

by a humble and of sin, and an earnest supplication for disecuted in faith, will

succeed.—7.

person holding it was the monarch, and introduced or excluded for the vast riches of Nehemiah, of which

9 But if ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them, though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen to set my name there.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name; and prosper, I pray thee. thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man.<sup>4</sup> For I was the king's cup-bearer.<sup>5</sup>

CHAPTER II.

1 Artaxerxes, understanding the cause of Nehemiah's sadness, sendeth him with letters and a commission to build the walls of Jerusalem. 9 Nehemiah, to the grief of the enemies of the Jews, cometh to Jerusalem. 12 He vieweth secretly the ruins of the walls. 17 He encourageth the Jews to build in spite of the scorn of the enemies.

AND it came to pass in the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king.<sup>1</sup> Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, Why is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,<sup>2</sup>

3 And said unto the king, Let the king live for ever:<sup>3</sup> why should not my countenance be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

4 Then the king said unto me, What is the thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may <sup>1</sup>build it.

6 And the king said unto me, (the queen also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? So it<sup>m</sup> pleased the king to send me; and I <sup>2</sup>set him a time.

7 Moreover, I said unto the king, If it please the king, let <sup>3</sup>letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judah;<sup>5</sup>

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which <sup>4</sup>appertained to <sup>5</sup>the house, and for the <sup>6</sup>wall of the city,<sup>6</sup> and for <sup>7</sup>the house that I shall enter into. And the king granted me, <sup>8</sup>according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. (Now the king had sent <sup>9</sup>captains of the army and horsemen with me.)<sup>7</sup>

10 When Sanballat the <sup>10</sup>Horonite, and Tobiah <sup>11</sup>the servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, it <sup>12</sup>grieved them exceedingly that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So I came to Jerusalem, and was there three<sup>8</sup> days.

12 ¶ And I <sup>13</sup>arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither <sup>14</sup>told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem:<sup>8</sup> neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by night by the <sup>15</sup>gate of the valley, even before the dragon-well, and to the <sup>16</sup>dung-port, and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which <sup>17</sup>were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

14 Then I went on to the <sup>18</sup>gate of the fountain, and to the <sup>19</sup>king's pool: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by the have embraced the whole circuit of the city. He went out by the lower slope of

he dismounted and walked up the Ki-

enemies; and by the example of his energy and courage he roused the Jews from their ignominious lethargy. 'For pure and disinterested patriotism Nehemiah stands unrivalled. But in nothing was he more remarkable than for his piety, and the singleness of eye with which he walked before God. He seems to have undertaken everything in dependence upon God, with prayer for his blessing and guidance, and to have expect them—courts not excepted. And no dignity or distance can make such a one careless of the honour of the church of God. The poverty or persecution which discourages others awakens his zeal and concern. In seasons of public, or private distress, fasting and tears should accompany our prayers. It is a great relief for a sorrowful spirit to pour out its complaints into the bosom of a compassionate God. While we have can scarcely be concealed. And it becomes superior or others to observe the appearances of distress in those around them, and to sympathize with them in it. Even Jesus marks his people's groans, and puts their tear into his bottle. There is therefore no reason either for fear or for shame when sorrow for sin and for the affliction of God's people burden our heart and sadden our

DRAGON'S FOUNTAIN, JERUSALEM—WHERE NEHEMIAH WENT TO VIEW THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM. [Nehemiah, ii.15.]—"And I went out by night by the gate of the valley, even before the dragon well * * * and viewed the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire." In the center of the Ophel hill, in the Valley of Jehoshaphat, there is a fountain with an intermittent spring whose waters connect with the Pool of Siloam by a canal which runs through the hill. This fountain is called the Dragon's Well, because they have a tradition that a dragon swallows up the water when awake, the water rising again when he is asleep, and this waking and sleeping of the dragon causes the intermittent flow of the water. The water comes up in the bottom of a cave 35 feet deep excavated in the rock. By going down sixteen steps we reach a chamber 18 feet long by 10 feet wide and 10 feet high, its sides being built of old stones and its roof a pointed arch.

4 And next unto them repaired <sup>9</sup>Meremoth the son of Urijah, the son of Koz: and next unto them repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshézebeel: and next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana.

5 And next unto them the <sup>10</sup>Tekoites repaired; but their nobles put <sup>11</sup>not their necks to the work of their Lord.<sup>3</sup>

6 Moreover, the <sup>12</sup>old gate<sup>4</sup> repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

7 And next unto them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of <sup>13</sup>Gibeon, and of Mizpah, unto the <sup>14</sup>throne<sup>5</sup> of the governor on this side the river.

8 Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of the goldsmiths: next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of <sup>15</sup>one of the apothecaries,<sup>6</sup> and they <sup>16</sup>fortified Jerusalem unto the broad wall.

9 And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the <sup>17</sup>half-part of Jerusalem.

10 And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumaph, even over against his house: and next unto him repaired Hattush the son of Hashabnah.

13 The <sup>20</sup>valley-gate repaired Hanun, and the inhabitants of <sup>21</sup>Zanoah; they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the <sup>22</sup>dung-gate.

14 But the dung-gate repaired Malchiah the son of Rechab, the ruler of part of <sup>23</sup>Beth-haccerem; he built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

19 And next to him repaired Ezer the son of Jeshua, the ruler of <sup>29</sup>Mizpah, another piece, over against the going up to the armoury, at the turning of the wall.

20 After him Baruch the son of <sup>30</sup>Zabbai <sup>31</sup>earnestly<sup>4</sup> repaired the other piece, from the <sup>32</sup>turning of the wall unto the door of the house of Eliashib the high priest.

21 After him repaired <sup>33</sup>Meremoth the son of Urijah, the son of <sup>34</sup>Koz, another piece, from the door of the house of Eliashib, even to the end of the house of Eliashib.

22 And after him repaired the priests, the men of <sup>35</sup>the plain.<sup>5</sup>

23 After him repaired Benjamin and Hashub, over against their house: after him repaired Azariah the son of <sup>36</sup>Maaseiah, the son of Ananiah, by his house.

26 Moreover, the <sup>39</sup>Nethinims dwelt in <sup>40</sup>Ophel,<sup>8</sup> unto the place over against the <sup>41</sup>water-gate toward the east, and the tower that lieth out.

27 After them the <sup>42</sup>Tekoites repaired another piece, over against the great tower that lieth out,<sup>9</sup> even unto the wall of Ophel.

28 From above the <sup>43</sup>horse-gate repaired the priests, every one over against his house.

29 After them repaired Zadok the son of Immer over against his house: after him repaired also Shemaiah the son of Shechaniah, the keeper of the <sup>44</sup>east gate.

30 After him repaired Hananiah the son of Shelemiah, and Hanun the sixth son of Zalaph, another piece: after him repaired <sup>45</sup>Meshullam the son of Berechiah over against his chamber.

CHAPTER IV.

1 While the enemies are wroth, and scoff, Nehemiah prayeth to God, and continueth the work. 7 Understanding the wrath and secrets of the enemy, he setteth a watch. 13 He armeth the labourers, 19 and giveth military precepts.

BUT it came to pass, that when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he <sup>a</sup>was wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren, and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble<sup>b</sup> Jews? will they fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they <sup>c</sup>revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burnt?

3 Now Tobiah the Ammonite <sup>d</sup>was by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox<sup>e</sup> go up, he shall even break down their stone wall.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof:<sup>4</sup> for the people<sup>a</sup> had a mind to work.<sup>5</sup>

7 ¶ But it came to pass, <sup>i</sup>that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem were made up,<sup>6</sup> and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were very<sup>k</sup> wroth,

8 And conspired all of them together to come <sup>j</sup>and to fight against Jerusalem, and to hinder it.

9 Nevertheless we <sup>l</sup>made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them.<sup>7</sup>

10 And Judah said, <sup>m</sup>"The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and <sup>n</sup>there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall.

11 And our adversaries said, <sup>o</sup>"They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the <sup>p</sup>Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us <sup>q</sup>ten<sup>p</sup> times, From all places whence ye shall ae The obscurity of meaning in this verse has led several critics of the highest order to adopt a change in a word, so as to produce greater clearness. The alteration of words, however, without overweighing authority of MSS. or early translations, is never to be admitted. And does not the marginal translation render the words quite intelligible? viz. The Jews that dwelt in the neighbourhood of Samaria, &amp;c., told their brethren ten times (frequently, continually), from all places, that is, from the cities which ye have occupied under Nehemiah's af mes that are plotting the ruin of Jerusalem. And that this was not friendly admonition, but a treacherous attempt to bring over the Jerusalemites, a party of the Samaritans, appears highly probable from the record of the conspiracy between the Jewish nobles and Tobiah, ch. vi.—C.

at This would be literally impossible if it meant that while the right hand worked the left held sword, or spear, or bow, ver. 23. And where is the use of such a violent figure for "equal readiness to work or fight?" But if the Hebrew employed the word translated hands as it is employed in English, that is for workmen, then the sense becomes plain, and mercy signifies that every class was divided, just as every army in field or garrison is often divided into a working party and a covering party, which perfectly coincides with ver. 21.—C.

az The last clause is very obscure. In fact the Hebrew words, as they at present stand in the revised text, convey no precise meaning. The general sense of the whole verse is clear enough. The people worked day and night, taking it in turns. They did not undress, lest they should be suddenly called to action. They only put off their clothes when it became necessary to have them washed. There is a reading in one of the MSS. examined by De Rossi which is worthy of note. It is as follows:—"We did not put off our garments except in order to send them to be washed."—P.

13 ¶ Therefore <sup>a</sup>set I in the lower <sup>b</sup>places behind the wall, <sup>c</sup>and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families with their <sup>d</sup>swords, their spears, and their bows.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, <sup>e</sup>Be not ye afraid of them: <sup>f</sup>remember the LORD, <sup>g</sup>which is great and terrible, and <sup>h</sup>fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God <sup>i</sup>had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

16 And it came to pass, from that time forth, <sup>j</sup>that the half of my servants <sup>k</sup>wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers <sup>l</sup>were behind all the house of <sup>m</sup>Judah.

17 They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, <sup>n</sup>every one <sup>o</sup>with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other <sup>p</sup>hand held a weapon.<sup>2</sup>

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded by his side,<sup>3</sup> and <sup>q</sup>so builded: and he that sounded the trumpet <sup>r</sup>was by me.

19 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

20 In what place <sup>s</sup>therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: <sup>t</sup>our God shall fight for us.

21 So we <sup>u</sup>laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

23 So neither <sup>v</sup>I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, <sup>w</sup>saving that every one put them off for washing.<sup>4</sup>

CHAPTER V.

1 The Jews complain of their debt, mortgage, and bondage. 6 Nehemiah rebuketh the usurers, and causeth them to swear to make a full and free restitution. 14 He forbearth his own allowance, and keepeth hospitality at his own expense.

AND there was a certain Jew, whose name was Sheshbazzar, who had been taken away from Jerusalem by the king of Babylon, and he came to Jerusalem in the first year of the reign of Darius the king of Persia.

2 For there were that said, We, our sons, and our daughters, are many; therefore we take<sup>e</sup> up corn for them, that we may eat, and live.

3 Some also there were that said, We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, because of the dearth.

4 There were also that said, We have borrowed money for the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards:

5 Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children: and, lo, we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.<sup>2</sup>

6 ¶ And I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words.

7 Then I consulted<sup>3</sup> with myself,<sup>4</sup> and I rebuked<sup>h</sup> the nobles and the rulers, and said unto them, 'Ye exact usury every one of his brother. And I set a great assembly against them.

8 And I said unto them, We, after our ability, have 'redeemed our brethren the Jews which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then 'held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

9 Also I said, 'It is not good that ye do: ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God, because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies?

10 I<sup>o</sup> likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, let us leave off this usury.

11 Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money,<sup>5</sup> and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

<sup>9</sup> Self-decision, when founded upon the promise of divine direction, is one of the most valuable qualities both in religion and worldly concerns. It does not proudly undervalue the counsel of a judicious friend, but where, as in the case of Nehemiah, that is scarcely to be had, it is thrown into no confusion, but retreats upon its own resources, standing collected when others are in confusion, and nobly independent of all but the grace of God.—C.

But if it was not so, of all, but of each, viz. money, wine, oil, and corn, then would it amount to 48 per cent., and in Syria and the adjoining countries money is still frequently lent at an interest of 30 per cent. The idea of a monthly payment is, however, totally unsupported by authority. Is it not therefore much more likely that the word hundredth was equivalent to the phrase per centage, because 100 is the arithmetical basis upon which interest is calculated, and consequently that Nehemiah gives no intimation of the rate of interest, but 12 Then said they, We will restore them, and 'will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and took an oath of them,<sup>6</sup> that they should do according to this promise.

13 Also I shook<sup>7</sup> my lap, and said, So God 'shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and 'emptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the LORD. And the people did according to this promise.

REFLECTIONS.—God's faithful builders are sure to have a share of the world's ridicule and contempt; and one wicked man encourages another. But though scoffers make their bands strong, God will shortly cover them with shame and confusion. Let saints then never discompose their souls on account of the most bitter or insolent contempt: God observes it, and will quickly resent it. Let them in patience possess their souls, commit their way to God, and go on more briskly with their Christian work. God's blessing will more than compensate men's revilings. And much may be done in a little time if all be hearty in lending their assistance. What a situation is it enter not into temptation. Let us, in our respective stations, unanimously unite, with heart and hand, against the common enemy; and count neither ease nor life dear unto us, that we may finish our course with joy. Religion bids fair to prosper when the professors thereof make earnest work of it, and endure hardship as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER V. [Ver. 2. The ground of complaint was this: The able-bodied men were kept at work on the walls. They received no pay, yet they had to provide food for themselves and families. They were families and much substance should make their abundance a supply for their neighbours' wants; for often poor housekeepers are in much greater straits than the most wretched vagrants. But what a scandal to our holy religion is a worldly-minded and niggardly professor! And deliberate and aggravated is that theft which lies in retaining that which we have unjustly gotten. There can be no uprightness towards God without restitution to the oppressed. It is proper that rulers show themselves angry at what is sinful, that their subjects may be deterred from it and excited to duty. But reproofs ought to be given with great con-

CHAPTER VI.

1 Sanballat practiseth by craft, by rumours, by hired prophecies, to terrify Nehemiah. 15 The wall is finished to the terror of the enemies. 17 Secret intelligence passeth between the enemies and the nobles of Judah.

NOW it came to pass, when "Sanballat, and Tobiah, and Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was no breach left therein, (though at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates,)

2 That Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages<sup>1</sup> in the plain of Ono:<sup>2</sup> but they thought to do me mischief.

3 And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?

4 Yet they sent unto me four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner.

5 ¶ Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me, in like manner, the fifth time, with an open letter in his hand;<sup>3</sup>

6 Wherein was written, 'It is reported among the heathen, and Gashmu saith it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, that thou mayest be their king, according to these words.'<sup>4</sup>

7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest<sup>5</sup> them out of thine own heart.

9 For they all made us afraid,<sup>5</sup> saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done: Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.

10 ¶ Afterward I came unto the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah, the son of Mehetabeel, who was shut up;<sup>6</sup> and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee; yea, in the night will they come to slay thee.<sup>7</sup>

5 ¶ And my God <sup>k</sup>put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy: and I found a register<sup>4</sup> of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein,

<sup>r</sup> Here is an account of the heads of the several families that first came up. Though it seems a little, (see to us now, yet then it was of great use, to compare what they had been with what they now were. We may suppose they were much increased by this time; but it would do well for them to remember their small beginnings, that they might acknowledge God in multiplying their families, and building them up. By this means likewise their genealogies would be preserved, and the destination of their families kept up, till Messiah should come, and then an end be put to all their genealogies, which were preserved for his sake, but afterwards were useless.—I.

<sup>n</sup> There are some families named here which are not in Ezr. as in ver. 22, and ver. 48, 49, 51, 52, which are all omitted in Ezr. For it must be considered that one of these accounts was taken by Ezr. in Babylon, the other by Nehemiah in Judea. And therefore it is no wonder that a greater number are sometimes mentioned in Nehemiah than in Ezr. for in the first account that was taken of them many were ignorant of their genealogy; but before the last, the book of their genealogy was found. Lightfoot remarks,

Note. These variations, so far from forming any a priori evidence against the divine inspiration and authority of Ezra and Nehemiah, afford, on the contrary, the strongest evidence, at least, of their integrity. Had they been forming a cunningly devised fable, the one would have minutely copied the other; but as truth was the object of both, each copied the register he formed or found (see ch. 7. 5), and each was correct, according to the time and place at which it was taken, varying, as the one refers to leaving Babylon, the other to arriving at Jerusalem, but agreeing when the genealogical and congregational families were summed up together, and thus amounting to 42,360.—C.

12 It is the opinion of Jacobus Capellus, that Zerubbabel is here meant by the Tirshatha. Whosoever he was, he expresses his hope that God might in time restore the Urim and Thummim (as he had done the nation), and so give answer about obscure and difficult matters, as had been done in former ages. But till then these priests were not admitted to partake of the most holy things, because it did not appear by good proof that they were of the family of the priests; and not to appear, and not to be, are the same thing, in law. But the Talmudists, as the same person observes, interpret these words, as if it had been said, Till the dead rise, or till the Messiah come. For after the first temple was destroyed the cities of the Levites, with their suburbs, were wanting, and so were Urim and Thummim, and the kings of the house of Judah (Patriarch). The expression is by many understood as amounting to a perpetual prohibition, as if the Tirshatha had said that they should never eat of the most holy things.—C.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The religious manner of reading and hearing the law. 9 Nehemiah, Ezra, and the Levites comfort the people. 13 The forwardness of them to hear and be instructed. 16 They keep the feast of tabernacles.

AND all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before the water-gate; and they spake unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord had commanded to Israel.<sup>1</sup>

2 And Ezra the priest brought the law before the congregation, both of men and women, and all that could hear with understanding,<sup>2</sup> upon the first day of the seventh month.

3 And he read therein before the street that was before the water-gate<sup>3</sup> from the morning until mid-day,<sup>5</sup> before the men and the women, and those that could understand: and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit of wood,<sup>7</sup> which they had made for the purpose; and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam.

5 And Ezra 'opened the book in the sight<sup>s</sup> of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and when he opened it, all the people stood<sup>m</sup> up:

6 And Ezra "blessed the LORD, the great God: and all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with 'lifting up their hands; and they "bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law; and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book in the law of God "distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.<sup>9</sup>

9 ¶ And Nehemiah, which is "the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is "holy unto the LORD your God; mourn<sup>t</sup> not nor weep: for all the people "wept when they heard the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat,<sup>1</sup> and drink the sweet, and "send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our LORD: neither be ye sorry; for "the joy of the LORD is your strength.<sup>2</sup>

11 So the Levites stilled all the people,<sup>3</sup> saying, "Hold your peace; for the day is holy; neither "be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared<sup>4</sup> unto them.

13 ¶ And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even "to understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law which the LORD had commanded by<sup>4</sup> Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths in the feast of the seventh month.<sup>5</sup>

15 And that they should "publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount,<sup>3</sup> and fetch olive-branches,<sup>6</sup> and nine-branches, and myrtle-

CHAPTER IX.

1 A solemn general fast and humiliation. 4 The Levites make a religious confession of God's goodness, and of the national sins.

NOW in the twenty and fourth day of "this month the children of Israel were assembled with "fasting, and with sackclothes, and "earth upon them.

2 And the seed of Israel "separated themselves from all strangers,<sup>1</sup> and stood and "confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And they stood up in their place, and "read in the book of the law of the LORD their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and "worshipped the LORD their God.<sup>3</sup>

4 ¶ Then stood up upon the "stairs,<sup>4</sup> of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and "cried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabnah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, Stand up<sup>5</sup> and bless the LORD your God for ever and ever; and blessed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, even thou, "art LORD alone: thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou "preservest them all;<sup>6</sup> and the host of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the LORD the God, who didst choose Abram, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, andarest him in the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, to give it, I say, to his seed, and <sup>thou</sup> hast performed thy words; for thou art righteous.<sup>7</sup>

9 And<sup>m</sup> didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest their cry by the Red sea:

10 And showedst signs<sup>s</sup> and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land; for thou knewest that they dealt <sup>thou</sup> proudly against them: so didst thou get thee a name,<sup>9</sup> as it is this day.

11 And thou didst divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, as a stone into the mighty waters.

12 Moreover, thou <sup>thou</sup> leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar, and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they should go.

14 And madest known unto them thy <sup>thou</sup> holy sabbath,<sup>1</sup> and commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant:

16 But they and our fathers <sup>thou</sup> dealt proudly, and hardened their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments,<sup>4</sup>

17 And refused to obey, neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them,<sup>4</sup> but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion appointed a captain to return to their bondage:<sup>5</sup> but thou art <sup>thou</sup> a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and <sup>thou</sup> forsookest them not.

18 Yea, when they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations;

19 Yet<sup>a</sup> thou, in thy manifold mercies, forsookest them not in the wilderness,<sup>6</sup>

3 In this beautiful public prayer there is a summary, brief but comprehensive, of the whole history contained in the Pentateuch. The prayer contains therefore a remarkable testimony to the authenticity and divine authority of the five books of Moses.—P.

20 Thou gavest also thy <sup>thou</sup> good Spirit<sup>6</sup> to instruct them, and withheldest not thy manna from their mouth, and gavest them water for their thirst.

21 Yea, forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they <sup>thou</sup> lacked nothing: their clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.<sup>7</sup>

22 Moreover, thou <sup>thou</sup> gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst divide them into <sup>thou</sup> corners: so they possessed the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

23 Their children also <sup>thou</sup> multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and <sup>thou</sup> broughtest them into the land concerning which thou hadst <sup>thou</sup> promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess it.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land, and thou <sup>thou</sup> subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as they would.

26 Nevertheless they <sup>thou</sup> were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and <sup>thou</sup> cast thy law behind their backs, and <sup>thou</sup> slew thy prophets, which testified against them to turn <sup>thou</sup> them to thee, and they wrought great provocations.

28 But after they had <sup>thou</sup> rest, they <sup>thou</sup> did evil again before thee;<sup>3</sup> therefore leftest thou <sup>thou</sup> them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven: and <sup>thou</sup> many times didst thou deliver them according to thy mercies.

[NEHEMIAH, xi: 1.]—"And the rulers of the people dwell at Jerusalem." The things recorded in the eleventh chapter of Nehemiah are connected, by the calculation of Archbishop Usher, with B. C. 445. This was the year when the thirty years' peace between Athens and Sparta was completed, and about the time, strange to say, that after the death of Cimon, negotiations for peace were opened between Athens and Persia, and an Athenian embassy under Callias was sent to Susa, capital of Persia. Thus we have the strange historical relationship of Greece and Palestine to Persia. About this time the Persian empire extended from India to Egypt, including the wide regions between the Black Sea, the Caucasus, the Caspian Sea, the Persian Gulf, the Indian Ocean, and the Arabian desert, and parts of Europe and Africa. We give a picture here of the Corinthian canal. The Isthmus of Corinth separated the ancient nations of Athens and Sparta.

1 The dates of the accession of the several high-priests after the time of Nehemiah, cannot be precisely ascertained. E. as Jaddua did not accede till the time of Alexander of Macedon, about 320 years after Nehemiah's commission, this verse has been ascribed to a later writer than Nehemiah. There is, however, no necessity for this conjecture. Nehemiah might well have been cup-bearer to Artaxerxes at 25, and at the age of 125 or upwards have written, or caused to be written, this, as well as the foregoing genealogy. This is said by Josephus (Antiq. l. xi. c. 8) to have come out to meet Alexander on his march from the siege of Tyre to the destruction of the Persian empire, whom Alexander declared he had seen in a dream, to whom he did obeisance as a priest of God; whom he accompanied into the temple of Jehovah to offer sacrifices; who showed him the prophecies of Daniel, by which he was encouraged to proceed upon his warlike enterprise.—P.

22 ¶ The Levites, in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers; also the priests, to the reign of Darius the Persian.<sup>2</sup>

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in the book of the Chronicles,<sup>3</sup> even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, according to the commandment of David the man of God, ward over against ward.

25 Mattaniah,<sup>b</sup> and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters, keeping the ward at the thresholds<sup>4</sup> of the gates.

26 These were in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest, the scribe.

27 ¶ And at the dedication of the wall<sup>5</sup> of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness, both with thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of Netophathi;<sup>6</sup>

29 Also from the house of Gilgal,<sup>7</sup> and out of the fields of Geba and Azmaveth: for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.<sup>8</sup>

31 Then I brought up the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the dung-gate.<sup>9</sup>

32 And after them went Hoshai, and half of the princes of Judah, 37 And at the fountain-gate, which was over against them, they went up by the stairs<sup>1</sup> of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the water-gate eastward.

38 And the other company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond the tower of the furnaces, even unto the broad wall.<sup>2</sup>

39 And from above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish-gate, and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep-gate; and they stood still in the prison-gate.

40 So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer: and the singers sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer.

43 Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced; for God had made them rejoice with great joy: the wives also and the children rejoiced; so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

44 ¶ And at that time were some appointed over the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the first-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them, out of the fields of the cities, the portions of the law for the priests and Levites: for Judah rejoiced<sup>4</sup> for the priests and for the Levites that waited.<sup>5</sup>

45 And both the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God,<sup>6</sup> and the ward of the purification, according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son.

46 For in the days of David and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

CHAPTER XIII.

ON that <sup>1</sup>day <sup>4</sup>they read in the book of Moses<sup>2</sup> in the audience<sup>3</sup> of the people; and therein was found written, <sup>b</sup>that the Ammonite and the Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever;<sup>4</sup>

<sup>9</sup> Then I commanded, and they <sup>s</sup>cleansed the chambers; and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat-offering and the frankincense.

In this we have an account of his marvellous preservation of those who continued in the eastern parts of the Persian empire. Particularly, (1) How God brought Esther to be queen, and Mordecai to be great at the Persian court, to prepare them to be instruments of the intended deliverance, ch. i. ii. vi. (5) The defeating of his general plot against the Jewish nation, viii. ix. (6) The joyful commemoration and happy issue of the deliverance, ix. x. [The authorship of this book is not stated. That it was written by an eye-witness of the events which it records is evident. There is a vividness of description, a minuteness of detail, and an acquaintance with the internal arrangements of the royal palace, which prove that the writer must have lived in the court of the Persian monarch. The only man mentioned in the book itself who could have written it is Mordecai; and it is highly probable he was the author. Independent of its sacred character as a part of the canon of Scripture, Esther is highly valuable as affording a vivid picture of the plots and intrigues, the public policy and domestic economy, of the Persian court. It is singular that in the Septuagint version, and others made from it, this book appears in a different form. It has various interpolations, prefixed, interspersed, and appended; but all so woven in as to form a complete and consistent narrative. The additions to the canonical book must have been made at a comparatively early period. P.]

[Esther, i:1.]—"Now it came to pass in the days of Ahasuerus (this is Ahasuerus which reigned from India even unto Ethiopia, over a hundred and seven and twenty provinces)." Ahasuerus is the name of the Persian king the Greeks knew as Xerxes, the latter being the Greek form of the word. The characters of the two kings as described by sacred and profane history correspond. Ahasuerus in the beginning of his reign organized an expedition for the purpose of subjugating Greece. The battle of Salamis, in which the Persians under Ahasuerus fought the Greeks, was in sight of the scene represented by the above picture. The Temple of Theseus which we see between the Pedestal of Agrippa on the left, and the stone wall on the right, was in all probability standing when this battle was fought. This temple was built in the fifth century, B. C., and is to-day the most perfect of the ancient buildings in Athens.

8 And the drinking was according to the law; none did <sup>9</sup>compel: for so the king had appointed<sup>1</sup> to all the officers of his house, that they should do according to every man's pleasure.

9 Also Vashti the queen made a feast for the women<sup>1</sup> in the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

10 ¶ On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven<sup>2</sup> chamberlains<sup>3</sup> that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king,

11 To bring Vashti the queen before the king with the crown-royal, to show the people and the princes her beauty; for she was fair to look on.<sup>4</sup>

12 But the queen Vashti refused<sup>5</sup> to come at the king's commandment by his chamberlains;<sup>6</sup> therefore was the king very wroth, and his anger burned in him.

13 ¶ Then the king said to the wise men, which knew the times, (for so was the king's manner toward all that knew law and judgment:

14 And the next unto him was Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, the seven<sup>7</sup> princes of Persia and Media, which saw the king's face,<sup>7</sup> and which sat the first in the kingdom.)

15 What<sup>8</sup> shall we do unto the queen Vashti according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus by the chamberlains?

16 And Memucan<sup>8</sup> answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not done wrong<sup>9</sup> to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall despise<sup>10</sup> their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

1 Wherever there is an unnatural law or custom, it sooner or later punishes the enactor or observer. Such was the custom amongst the Persians of exposing their wives to the gaze of Bacchanalian revelers, and such the law of polygamy, which invariably establishes domestic tyranny, introduces jealousies and feuds, and slowly yet finally exterminates those classes whose riches enable them most to resist.

The Targum gives this interpretation:—'Every man shall rule in his own house and compel his wife to speak in the language of her husband and in the language of his people.' It appears that the Persians, when they married foreign wives permitted them to speak in the harem as they thought proper, and to use in it their own language. The decree of Ahasuerus was intended to put a stop to this practice.—P.

AFTER these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he remembered Vashti,<sup>1</sup> and what she had done, and what was decreed against her.

2 Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king:

3 And let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather<sup>2</sup> together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, unto the custody<sup>3</sup> of Hegai the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women;<sup>4</sup> and let their things for purification<sup>5</sup> be given them:

4 And let the maiden which pleaseth the king be queen instead of Vashti. And the thing pleased the king; and he did so.

THEATRE OF BACCHUS DIONYSUS—WHERE ÆSCHYLUS BROUGHT OUT HIS PLAY REPRESENTING THE DEFEAT OF THE PERSIANS LED BY AHASUERUS, EIGHT YEARS AFTER THE BATTLE OF SALAMIS. [ÆSTHER, ii:1.]—"After these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, he remembered Vashti, and what she had done and what had been decreed against her." The theatre of Bacchus Dionysus is called the cradle of the dramatic art of Greece. Here is where the masterpieces of Æschylus, Sophocles, Euripides and Aristophanes were first brought before the Greeks. This theatre was frequently altered during its history, but when we see the above view we may know that we are looking at the very spot where the theatre always stood. Æschylus whose plays were acted here, fought against the Persian army led by Ahasuerus in the battle of Salamis. Eight years after this battle, his play, the "Persians," was performed in the theatre of Dionysus at Athens. The foundations of two sanctuaries of Dionysus have been excavated here, one of them dating from the time of the Persian wars. To the north and rising directly above this theatre is the Acropolis, and if one could have been standing on the top of the Acropolis when the battle of Salamis was fought he would have had a view of this decisive conflict between the Greeks and the Persians.

Esther,<sup>1</sup>) his uncle's daughter; for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was fair and beautiful:<sup>2</sup> whom Mordecai (when her father and mother were dead) took for his own daughter.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of Hegai,<sup>3</sup> that Esther was brought also unto the king's house,<sup>4</sup> to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

10 Esther had not showed her people, nor her kindred:<sup>3</sup> for Mordecai had charged her that she should not show it.

11 And Mordecai walked every day before the court of the women's house, to know<sup>4</sup> how Esther did, and what should become of her.<sup>5</sup>

12 ¶ Now, when every maid's turn was come to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women, (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished, to wit, six months with oil of myrrh, and six months with sweet odours, and with other things for the purifying of the women;)

13 Then thus came every maiden unto the king; whatsoever she desired was given her, to go with her out of the house of the women unto the king's house.

14 In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house<sup>6</sup> of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines:

Yea, ordinarily hard drinking, however unforced, issues in the misery or shame of those who occasioned it. If persons be once intoxicated with liquor, how imprudent their conduct! they are ready to dishonour themselves or their nearest relations, and to require what cannot be decently granted. And when pride meets with pride the issue is contention and ruin. It is easier to govern a kingdom than to rule our own proud spirit. But especially unhappy are those contentions between married persons which happen before company. The

What care he takes of orphans and fatherless! And great is the care which men ought to take of them. Yea, it is comely when near relations have a tender and fixed regard for one another. And there is need therefore of strong faith and ardent zeal to make us take a singular course at the hazard of all that is dear to us in this world. But no consideration must influence us to that which is evil. Of what intolerable pride, insatiable cruelty, and deep-rooted antipathy to the people of God are some men possessed! And often courtiers mark out the worst of the subjects as the objects of their resentments. The people of God are ordinarily loaded with the vilest calumnies in order to encompass their ruin. And

PRISON OF SOCRATES, ATHENS—WHERE SOCRATES, BORN FIVE YEARS AFTER THE BATTLE OF SALAMIS, WAS POISONED BY HIS COUNTRYMEN. [Esther, 10:1.]—Socrates was born about five years after the battle of Salamis. He is regarded as the greatest spirit of the pagan world. He was born at the time when Grecian civilization had reached its highest point of splendor. The high civilization to which the Greeks attained at the time Socrates was born is thought to have been due to the triumph which the Greeks, as representing western civilization, won over the Persians, representing the civilization of the east. The armies of the east that aroused and regenerated the Greeks were led by Ahasuerus, the king mentioned in the first verse of the third chapter of Esther. We give above a picture of the prison of Socrates, in sight of the Acropolis and the Pnyx, and of the neighborhood of the battle where the Greeks fought the Persians under Ahasuerus. <sup>1</sup> Haman, advanced by the king, and despised by Mordecai, seeketh revenge upon all the Jews: 7 He casteth lots. 8 He obtaineth by calumny a decree of the king to put the Jews to death.

AFTER these things did king Ahasuerus promote<sup>a</sup> Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, and advanced him, and set his seat above all the princes that were with him.

2 And all the king's servants, that were in the king's gate, bowed, and revered Haman; for the king had so commanded concerning him: but Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence.<sup>1</sup>

3 Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, Why transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai's matters would stand: for he had told them that he was a Jew.<sup>2</sup>

5 And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had showed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews<sup>3</sup> that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

7 ¶ In the first month, (that is, the month Nisan,) in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, they cast <sup>b</sup>Pur, that is, the lot,<sup>4</sup> before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.

8 ¶ And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not<sup>5</sup> for the king's profit to suffer them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written that they may be destroyed;<sup>6</sup> and I will pay<sup>7</sup> ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasuries.<sup>8</sup>

10 And the king took his ring from his hand, and gave it unto Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jew's enemy.

1 The most probable explanation of this is, that Haman was an Amalekite, and Mordecai scorned to do homage to him, show respect in any way to one of that hated nation. Possibly also Mordecai saw the wily and traitorous heart of the powerful but unscrupulous adviser. The sequel shows that Haman's boasted loyalty and devotion to the king was assumed for purposes of personal aggrandizement.—P.

2 Agag was the common name of the kings of Amalek, with whom Israel was commanded to have no peace. Nothing can account for the refusal of Mordecai to do an act of ordinary courtesy to his superior, but the idea that he judged himself thereby contravening a commandment of God. He recollected how Saul his kinsman had suffered for sparing the wicked Agag—he dreaded he might suffer for bowing to his equally wicked descendant.—C.

3 Every single evil passion passes immediately into another when temptation offers. Ham in a peevishness to have been merely proud, instantly he becomes immeasurably cruel—he was offended by the neglect of one man, whom his pride disdains to punish; but in revenge of the imaginary insult his cruelty enacts the destruction of a whole nation.—C.

4 The casting of lots to find out fortunate months and days, and even hours, is still all-prevalent in Persia. The king maintains an astrologer for this superstitious purpose. European almanacs were formerly filled with such vain but too successful impositions upon credulity, and even yet there are those who prefer one month or one day of the week to another for special undertakings. All this is a departure from God that, rightly considered, amounts to idolatry. The word and spirit of God, and a conscience void of offence, are the only oracles a true believer dares or requires to consult.—C.

a lure to the king's covetousness by extirpation. The offer amounts to above two millions of our money, but was not to come out of Haman's private property, as appears from ver. 11, but from the product of the plunder and confiscation arising from the execution of the decree.—C.

9 Several signet-rings, of very high antiquity, may be seen in the British Museum. The engraved part revolves upon a pivot, and was used as a signet manual in modern times. Many private and public documents still continue to be so authenticated, and the keeper of the great seal is in Britain an officer of the very highest rank. C.—The Persians have stones in their rings, with answer the purpose of seals. On these their names are frequently engraved, and the impression serves for their signature. It was probably for the purpose of sealing this writing that the king had previously given Haman his ring, by the use of which the sanction of the royal authority would be given to his bloody mandate.—C.

1 Different countries have different modes of expressing the same thing, or attempting the same object. Any obnoxious proclamation in a free country would instantly be met by public assemblies and petitions, but under an eastern despotism the effort must be personal. Loud cries are so common in the streets of Asiatic towns that the efforts of Mordecai would not be considered more than the ordinary mode of attracting public attention.—C.

3 This is a lovely trait in Esther's character. She despises her unhappy relative, whom probably she believes denuded, but 'exceedingly grieved.'

the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written, according to all that Haman had commanded, unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; <sup>5</sup>in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's ring.<sup>9</sup>

13 And the letters were sent by <sup>a</sup>posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, <sup>b</sup>to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in <sup>c</sup>one day, even upon the <sup>d</sup>thirteenth day of the twelfth month, (which is the month Adar,) and to take the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

CHAPTER IV.

WHEN Mordecai perceived all that was done, Mordecai rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and cried with a loud and a bitter cry;<sup>1</sup>

2 And came even before the king's gate: for none might enter into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth.

3 And in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and weeping, and wailing; and many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 ¶ So Esther's maids and her <sup>2</sup>chamberlains came and told it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved;<sup>3</sup> and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him: but <sup>e</sup>he received it not.

5 Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, whom he had appointed to attend upon her;<sup>4</sup> and gave him a command-

7 And Mordecai told him <sup>4</sup>of all that had happened unto him, and of the sum of the money that Haman had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews,<sup>5</sup> to destroy them.

8 Also he gave him the copy of the writing<sup>6</sup> of the decree that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to show it unto Esther, and to declare it unto her, and to <sup>7</sup>charge her that she should go in unto the king, to make <sup>8</sup>supplication unto him, and to make request before him for her people.

9 And Hatach came and <sup>1</sup>told Esther the words of Mordecai.

10 ¶ Again<sup>1</sup> Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai;

11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into <sup>2</sup>the inner court, who is not called, there is <sup>3</sup>'one law of his to put him to death,<sup>7</sup> except such to <sup>4</sup>whom the king shall hold out the golden sceptre,<sup>8</sup> that he may live: but I have <sup>5</sup>'not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days.

12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, Think <sup>1</sup>'not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews.

14 For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then <sup>2</sup>'shall there enlargement<sup>9</sup> and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth whether <sup>3</sup>'thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?<sup>1</sup>

15 ¶ Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer,

16 Go, gather together all the Jews that are present<sup>2</sup> in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens<sup>3</sup> will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law; and if I perish, I perish.<sup>4</sup>

17 So Mordecai went<sup>5</sup> his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

CHAPTER V.

1 Esther, adventuring on the king's favour, obtaineth the grace of the golden sceptre, and writeth the king and Haman to a banquet. 6 She, being encouraged by the king to name her suit, inviteth them to another banquet the next day. 9 Haman, proud of his advancement, repineth at the contempt of Mordecai. 14 By the advice of his wife and friends he prepareth for him a gallows.

8 Such laws still exist in several eastern courts. They originated, no doubt, in the necessity of preventing unreasonable intrusions upon domestic privacy; they were advocated by courtiers on the plea of protecting the royal dignity; but they were enforced for the real purpose of transferring from indolent and luxurious monarchs the whole administration into the hands of their attendants.—C.

9 That such a golden sceptre was used by the Persian kings is stated in Xenophon (Cyrus. 1. 8); but while such authorities are introduced, it is not for establishing the Scripture truth, which is totally independent of such aid, but for illustration of the homage that faithful history pays to divine revelation.—C.

residence of the king. The circumstance that Esther is seen by the king, she being in the court, while he was seated in the hall, is explained by the fact that, in the Persian palaces, the principal apartment is open in front, so that the king, from the upper end of the hall, commands a view of the whole court.—J.

2 It was customary with the Persian kings to give particular cities and provinces to their queens and favourites, not in absolute possession, but to furnish various necessities. Historians tell us of one city which was assigned to a Persian queen for sandals, a second for a girdle, a third for her head-dress; of one to furnish a favourite with flesh, another with bread, and a third with wine.—C.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Ahasuerus, hearing read in the chronicles the good service done by Mordecai, taketh care for his reward. 4 Haman, coming to one that Mordecai might be hanged, unawares giveth counsel that he might do him honour. 12 Complaining of his misfortune, his friend foretells him of his fall.

2 And it was found written, That Mordecai had told of Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

6 So Haman came in. And the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour? (Now Haman "thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?)

1 Heb. the king's sleep fled away.

2 These chronicles were written in verse, and would therefore form an embellished narrative, well suited to amuse the sleepless king. The famous Persian poem of Ferdowsy is nothing but such a chronicle of events from the creation till the tenth century. Similar poetic records may be found in all countries emerging from barbarism; and, in Persia, they continue down till the present day.—C.

3 We have here a key to Esther's postponement of her request. She was guided from first to last by divine wisdom. She may not herself have been fully conscious of it; yet still she was an instrument in God's hands. Matters were not yet ripe for action. The gallows had not been erected. Mordecai's loyalty and devotion had not been fully developed.—P.

4 What a blessing is a government where liberty, and life, and death stand not in the will of any man, but solely in the law openly administered; and deciding upon public evidence, not upon private insinuation! Haman, without a proof of crime, and obtained sentence of death against a nation, and now by a single writ expects the annihilation of the enemy. The date execution of Mordecai! Yet, in lands of law and liberty, let it never be forgotten, that every nation was at one period of its history despotically governed, and that to the light of Christianity is due all the real liberties that any nation has established and enjoyed.—C.

9 This 'crown-royal' was most probably some regal ornament for the head of a horse, as of the man. To put the crown upon his own head, even Haman, in all his pride, would scarcely have dared to propose. This custom of crowning a horse led in state still prevails in Ethiopia.—C.

7 And Haman answered the king, For the man whom the king delighteth to honour,<sup>5</sup>

8 Let the royal apparel be brought<sup>6</sup> which the king useth<sup>7</sup> to wear,<sup>8</sup> and the horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown-royal which is set upon his head;<sup>9</sup>

9 And let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man withal whom the king delighteth to honour, and bring him on horseback<sup>1</sup> through the street of the city, and "proclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

10 Then the king said to Haman, "Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: let nothing fail<sup>2</sup> of all that thou hast spoken.

11 Then took Haman the apparel and the horse, and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.<sup>3</sup>

12 ¶ And Mordecai came again to the king's gate: but Haman hastened to his house mourning, and "having his head covered.

13 And Haman told Zeresh his wife and all his friends every thing that had befallen him. Then said his wise men and Zeresh his wife unto him, "If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, but shalt surely fall before him.<sup>4</sup>

14 And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and "hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

CHAPTER V. REFLECTIONS.—Prudence and courage must be joined to our prayers if we would succeed in any work for God. And a plentiful harvest of joy shall they reap who sow in the tears and mourning of faith. They who venture all for God shall find him able to do for them unspeakably better than their most sanguine hopes. While himself is easily accessible, casting out none that come to him, he can dispose the spirits of the haughtiest princes to whatever he pleases. But in our dealing with great men, it is best first to conciliate their affection before we ask important favours: and to watch the favourable moment is the best way to insure success. They who are careful to please God need neither fear nor care who are displeased with them for so doing. But pitiful and miserable is the condition of the proud. Easily they are puffed up with that which is intended to ruin them, and unmeasurably fretted at that which could never hurt them. Their pride and discontentment create those who have the sleep of his beloved granted to them: or if their eyes be debarred from rest, can employ their minds in sweet surveys of the annals of redeeming love! The natural law of gratitude, even towards the meanest inferior, is binding upon the conscience. But how little notice earthly princes take of their mean servants and friends, when they often know not whether their important services have been rewarded or not! Nay, often the greatest merits and best services are least rewarded at courts. That modesty and self-denial which are of so great price before God, hinder men's preferment in this world; whilst forward flatterers thrust themselves into honours. The longer we have neglected to recompense favours done us we should the more abundantly reward them at last. But pride and ambition are never satisfied with the most accumulated honours. And it is dangerous for courtiers to have too high an opinion of their own merits, and of the opinion of others.

CHAPTER VII. REFLECTIONS.—God often strangely animates his enemies in power to encourage his people's requests for favour. And a tender regard for natural life at stake makes us very earnest in supplicating deliverance: and surely then we ought to be much more earnest for the life of our own and others' souls. The most ruinous and wicked projects are often laid to gratify men's sinful lusts. And though persecution of the people of God is not only impious, but even exceedingly detrimental to the state, where nothing can repair the loss of pious and industrious subjects, how often is it practised! Men are ready often to startle at the mention of that very wickedness to which they had given their consent! And sin generally becomes vexatious and burdensome at the last. That is often done thoughtlessly with which, on a moment's cool reflection, we cannot but be shocked. Many seem amazed at the wickedness of others, who over-

SO the king and Haman came to banquet<sup>1</sup> with Esther the queen.

<sup>2</sup> And the king said again unto Esther on the second day, at the banquet of wine, <sup>a</sup>What is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom.

<sup>3</sup> Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favour in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, <sup>b</sup>let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my request.

<sup>8</sup> Then the king returned out of the palace-garden into the place of the banquet of wine; and Haman was <sup>m</sup>fallen upon the bed whereon Esther was.<sup>7</sup> Then said the king, Will he force the queen also before me in the house? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they covered<sup>n</sup> Haman's face.<sup>8</sup>

The plot against the Huguenots, and the massacre of St. Bartholomew's, in France, can, however, furnish an example of similar devising and cruelty, where the victims were taken totally unawares, and where the king, so far from repenting, like Ahasuerus, of his rash decree, himself took part in the murder of his subjects.—C.

<sup>17</sup> It seems that according to the principles of Median and Persian jurisprudence, a decree, once signed, could not be reversed: full power, however, is given to Esther and Mordecai to devise any means by which Haman's decree may be counteracted. C.—What ever had passed the royal sanction could never be revoked; and this was the reason why the king was obliged not to reverse, but to give a contradictory decree—that if the Jews, pursuant to the first decree, were assaulted, they might legitimately, by virtue of the second, defend themselves, slay their enemies, and even take the spoil. The maxim in our government that no act can be so framed but that the same authority which enacted it may repeal it, is better suited to the state of human nature; for no human wisdom can foresee all the effects of any regulation till experience has evinced them. Nothing, indeed, could more strikingly shew the absurdity of this law of the Persians than that the king should unto Esther the queen: and Mordecai <sup>b</sup>came before the king; for Esther had told what he was unto her.

<sup>6</sup> For how can I <sup>k</sup>endure to see the evil that shall come unto my people? or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?

<sup>7</sup> ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen, and to Mordecai the Jew, Behold, <sup>l</sup>I have given Esther the house of Haman, and him they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

<sup>9</sup> Then were the king's scribes called at that time in the <sup>p</sup>third month, (that is, the month Sivan,) on the three and twentieth <sup>q</sup>day thereof, and it was written (according to all that Mordecai commanded) <sup>r</sup>unto the Jews, and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which are from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language.

people and province that would assault them,<sup>5</sup> both little ones and women, and to <sup>take</sup> the spoil of them for a prey, 12 Upon <sup>one</sup> day, in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, namely, upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was published<sup>6</sup> unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to <sup>avenge</sup> themselves on their enemies.

14 So the post<sup>s</sup> that rode upon mules and camels went out, being <sup>hastened</sup> and pressed on by the king's commandment. And the decree was given at Shushan the palace.

15 ¶ And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in <sup>royal</sup> apparel of blue<sup>8</sup> and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple; and the city of Shushan <sup>rejoiced</sup> and was glad.

16 The Jews had light, and gladness, and joy, and honour.

17 And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast and a good day. And many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.<sup>9</sup>

CHAPTER IX.

<sup>1</sup> The Jews (the rulers, for fear of Mordecai, helping them) slay their enemies, with the ten sons of Haman. 12 Ahasuerus, at the request of Esther, granteth another day of slaughter, and causeth Haman's sons to be hanged. 20 The two days of Purim are made festival.

NOW, in the <sup>twelfth</sup> month, (that is, the month Adar,) on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them, (though it <sup>was</sup> turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them),

2 The Jews <sup>gathered</sup> themselves together in their cities, throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as sought their hurt:<sup>1</sup> and no man could withstand them; for <sup>the</sup> fear of them fell upon all people.

3 And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and officers of the king, <sup>helped</sup> the Jews; because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them.

<sup>5</sup> Could not the Jews have stood upon the defensive without this royal decree? No doubt they could. But then they would have become rebels, and so would have been prosecuted for a new crime. This decree of Ahasuerus rendered their self-defence lawful, while it must greatly have abated the courage of their enemies. A more unnatural mode of government cannot well be conceived, nor can we wonder that the empire was soon afterwards dismembered by a handful of Macedonians.

Early European travellers were astonished to find similar posting establishments in the Mongol empire, having 10,000 post-houses, and 200,000 horses, and expediting despatches at the rate of 200 or 250 miles in a day.

23 But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth day of the <sup>same</sup> rested they, and made it a day <sup>of</sup> feasting and gladness.

24 But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together on the thirteenth day thereof, 19 Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwall'd towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar a day of gladness and feasting, and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

20 ¶ And Mordecai wrote these things, and sent letters unto all the Jews that were in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far,

21 To stablish this among them, that they should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly,

22 As the days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day; that they should make them days of feasting and joy, and of sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them;

24 Because Haman the son of Hammedatha, the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast Pur, (that is, the lot,) to consume them, and to destroy them:

25 But when Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters, that his wicked device, which he devised against the Jews, should return upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

26 Wherefore they called these days Purim, after the name of Pur: therefore for all the words of this letter, and of that which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them,

27 The Jews ordained, and took upon them, and upon their seed, and upon all such as joined themselves unto them, so as it should not fail,

At sunset the festival commences by a public service in the synagogue, after which the whole book of Esther is read from a special roll containing it alone. The passage containing the names of Haman and his sons (9. 7-9) is read very rapidly, to indicate that they were hanged at once. In the M.S. roll the names are placed underneath each other, each one occupying an entire line, and the whole ten being on a page by themselves. On the morning of the 14th there is another public service in the synagogue, after which the roll of Esther is again read through as before. The rest of the festival is spent in feasting and rejoicing—often in revelry and drunkenness.—P.

of God appear selfish, worldly, or covetous. And if we receive signal mercies from God, our thankful returns ought to be quick and speedy: while they are yet fresh in our minds, and the impressions of them most sensible. Nor ought astonishing deliverances and their circumstances ever to be forgotten. Remembrance of such ought to encourage us in every subsequent distress. Yet there is great need to beware, lest what is well intended at first should by degrees become an occasion of wickedness. Nothing more purifies the heart and adorns religion than holy joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ. And nothing more pollutes the heart, and reproaches religion, than carnal mirth and sensual pleasure.

GENERAL REMARKS ON THE HISTORICAL BOOKS.

[It has been well observed by a recent writer that 'the Old Testament may be regarded from two points of view—the religious and the literary. It is needless here to enlarge on the disproportion between the value of the two, or to re-assert the truism of the uselessness for the highest ends of the most accurate knowledge of the literary history of the Holy Scriptures, and the most minute acquaintance with their criticism, unless we also employ the Scriptures for the purpose for which they were given by divine inspiration, and make them 'profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness.' But while we endeavour to keep both in their places, and especially not to exalt the lower at the expense of the higher, we must recognize the existence of the two characters borne by the Old Testament. We must not be afraid to acknowledge the undoubted fact that it is not merely a revelation of God—his being, his attributes, his will, his works, his ways; but also a national literature, and a collection of books of different characters—historical, prophetic, poetic, and didactic; of widely different dates, some perhaps misdated, by very diverse authors, and some perhaps wrongly assigned.' The notes and reflections attached to the text in this Bible have been written almost exclusively from the religious point of view. The divine origin and sacred character of the book has never been lost sight of. It has been treated, in fact, as a revelation from God rather than a work of human authorship. I now think it well to append a very few observations, from a purely literary stand-point, upon the origin, history, and character of the historical books, which, as arranged in our English version, conclude with Esther.

It is important, at the outset, to know exactly what is the meaning of the word canonical as applied to books of Scripture. The meaning of the term canon was primarily a 'canon;' then, technically, a 'measuring cane;' then, metaphorically, 'anything which serves to regulate other things.' Hence canonical books are those which form the divine rule of faith and practice—by which men determine what they are to believe, and what they are to do. In the primitive church, however, the word was not always employed in the same definite sense. By some it was used to designate those books which were publicly read in the churches; and as in some churches apocryphal books were permitted to be read, the term canonical was given to them. Thus originated the admission by the Church of Rome, and the Greek church, of certain uninspired writings into the canon of Scripture. But while the term canonical was thus somewhat vaguely used in the early church, and by the early fathers, it is most important to bear in mind that, during the first four centuries of our era, there existed no doubt or uncertainty as to the books which were inspired and of divine authority, as contradistinguished from those which were uninspired. The books of Maccabees, and a few others, are classed by some churches among the historical books of the Old Testament; but their inspiration was never admitted by the Jews, or by any Christian writer or church during the first three centuries. The Jewish canon of the Old Testament, which received the sanction of our Lord and his apostles, was identical with that of our present authorized version.

It is well to observe, however, that the arrangement of the books in the Jewish canon was different from ours. The Jews divided the Old Testament into three parts—the Law, the Prophets, and the Psalms.

1. The Law included the five books of Moses—our Pentateuch in fact—and was usually written continuously upon one parchment roll, and called either 'The Law,' or 'The Book of the Law.'

2. The Prophets. Under this general name were comprehended two distinct classes of writings, which were again distinguished from each other by specific titles—(1) The Earlier Prophets, including only the historical books of Joshua, Judges, 1 and 2 Samuel, and 1 and 2 Kings; (2) The Later Prophets, including all those books of the Old Testament, with one exception, which are strictly prophetic, and which were classed under two heads, namely, (a) The Greater Prophets, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel; (b) The Twelve Minor Prophets, from Hosea to Malachi. The general name Prophets was given to them because they contained a large portion of prophetic matter, and were written by men gifted with prophetic power.

3. The Psalms, or Writings, comprehended the remaining books which were included in the Jewish canon as in ours. The Talmud, for example, makes the total number of books in the Old Testament twenty-four; Josephus makes it twenty-two; we make thirty-nine. The Talmud arranges them as follows: Law, 5; Prophets, 8; Psalms, 11. This is done by counting 1 and 2 Samuel one, 1 and 2 Kings one, the twelve minor prophets one, 1 and 2 Chronicles one, Ezra and Nehemiah one. Josephus has the same plan, only he unites Ruth with Judges, and Lamentations with Jeremiah.

The arrangement of the books in our Bibles is widely different from that followed by the Jews, and is more in accordance with their character and subject-matter. Our arrangement is not modern. We find it in the Septuagint version, which was made in Egypt in the third century B.C. It was followed by Jerome in his translation, which is now well known as the Latin Vulgate. It was adopted by Luther and the Reformers. The general plan is a threefold division into historical, poetical, and prophetic. The first division embraces seventeen books, terminating with Esther; the second division five, terminating with Canticles; and the third division seventeen. Each of the two first divisions is arranged chronologically, and this is very important to the student who wishes to read them systematically. In the third division, however, the chronology is not adhered to; and the reader is apt to become confused when passing suddenly from Daniel, one of the latest, to Hosea, one of the earliest of the prophets; and again from Zephaniah, who prophesied during the reign of Josiah, to Haggai, who lived after the exile. It will be well to remember that in our Bibles the prophets are divided into two groups, the greater and the minor. The former group includes Daniel, and is arranged chronologically; the latter includes the twelve, and is also arranged with a near approach to chronological order.

After these general observations on the whole of the Old Testament canon, I shall now direct special attention to the first great division of our English Bible, which comprehends the Historical Books.

1. THE PENTATEUCH contains an outline of the history of the world from the creation till the death of Moses. History forms its groundwork. Wherever doctrines or moral precepts are introduced, they are connected with historic facts. As a history we may inquire, Who was its author? When was it written? and What were its sources; or, in other words, whence did its author derive his information?

The Pentateuch professes to have been written by Moses during the last forty years of his life. Such at least is the impression which a thoughtful perusal would leave on any unprejudiced mind. In Ex. 17. 14, it is recorded that the Lord commanded Moses to write an account of the war with Amalek 'in this Book.' The Hebrew words indicate a book well known to Moses—a book intended to be handed down to posterity, at once for the future guidance of rulers, and to show that God would execute his prophetic judgments. Of this book Moses was the author; and we find him from time to time receiving divine instructions to record in it the great events of Jewish history, Ex. 24. 1-7; 34. 27; Nu. 33. 1, 2. The account of its completion and solemn delivery into the custody of the priests is most important: 'And Moses wrote this law, and delivered it unto the priests, the sons of Levi, . . . and unto all the elders of Israel. . . . And Moses commanded them, saying, At the end of every seven years, in the solemnity of the year of release, in the feast of tabernacles, when all Israel is come to appear before the Lord thy God in the place which he shall choose, thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing,' De. 31. 9-11.

We have thus an indication of the way in which the Pentateuch originated. It was not written at once. Genesis was first compiled by Moses, apparently from authentic and inspired documents, written by the patriarchs, and handed down through successive generations. Genesis formed the groundwork of the Bible. When it was compiled it was called The Book. The rest of the ancient peoples and tribes. The writer must therefore have been personally acquainted with Egypt and the whole desert of Arabia; and he must have possessed besides most extensive learning. All these things point to one man, and one only. Moses, who was brought up at the court of Pharaoh, who was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, who spent forty years in Egypt, and forty in the peninsula of Sinai—Moses is the only man on whom the scholar could fix his attention as the author of the Pentateuch.

What is indicated in the Pentateuch itself is fully stated by subsequent writers. In a literary point of view, the testimony of antiquity to the authorship and credibility of the Pentateuch is most interesting. The first evidence is that of a contemporary—a man who had fuller opportunity of knowing the whole truth than any other. When Joshua entered on his office as Moses' successor, he thus records the charges given to him by Jehovah: 'Be thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law which Moses my servant commanded thee. . . . This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate thereon day and night,' &c., Jos. 1. 6, 8. Again, at the close of his life he himself gave this last solemn admonition to the Israelites: 'Be ye therefore very courageous to keep and to do all that is written in the book of the law of Moses,' Jos. 23. 6. This book of the law is quoted or referred to by a line of illustrious authors extending from the time of Joshua down to the commencement of our era. A close inspection proves that every book of the Old Testament, with the exception of Job, indicates in one way or another the previous existence of the Pentateuch. In many of them it is mentioned by name, Ju. 3. 4; 1 Sa. 2. 13; 1 Ki. 2. 3, sq.; 2 Ki. 23. 25; 2 Ch. 23. 18; Ps. 119. 7-11; Dan. 9. 11, 13; Ezra 3. 2; in others it is quoted; in others simply referred to. The testimony of Nehemiah, the last of the historical writers in the Old Testament, is especially worthy of note. He speaks of Moses as its author, Ne. 8. 14; he calls it the 'book of the law of God,' Ne. 8. 18; he says it was read throughout at the feast of tabernacles; and he gives a summary of its contents, Ne. 9. 1, sq. And the last of the prophetic books is equally clear in its testimony. Malachi says, 'Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel,' Mal. 4. 4.

I have now brought down the testimony for the authorship and authenticity of the Pentateuch to the close of the Old Testament period. I have shown it to be clear and uniform from Joshua to Malachi. The Pentateuch was known to the whole Jewish nation. It contained the code of national law, the directory for national worship, the confession of the national faith. Many of its enactments were felt to be burdensome; but no attempt was ever made to dispute their divine authority. The unanimous and continuous testimony of the Jews regarding the Pentateuch was that Moses wrote it by divine inspiration. That testimony is embodied in the authentic records of national history, in the odes and hymns of poets, and in the writings of prophets. In fact it pervades the whole national literature. We may therefore conclude that 'at no time from the days of Joshua would it have been possible for any man, or any body of men, to introduce among the Jewish sacred records a modern work, or a modern compilation of ancient fragments and traditions, and to gain for it the confidence and respect of the nation. The imposition would have been at once detected and exposed.'

The chain of evidence does not end here. It extends unbroken down to the time of the New Testament, and from that period to our own day. In the apocryphal books of Ecclesiasticus (ch. 24. 23), Esdras (1 Esd. 1. 6), Baruch (ch. 1. 20), and Maccabees (2 Mac. 7. 30), the law of Moses is distinctly mentioned and quoted as authoritative. Philo, the distinguished Jewish philosopher of Alexandria, wrote a life of Moses, and gives a detailed account of his great work, the Pentateuch. Josephus, the representative of the Jewish literati in Palestine, as Philo was in Egypt, is equally full and clear in his testimony.

I have hitherto cited Jewish testimony alone. Some may perhaps affirm that the Jews were not impartial witnesses. I do not admit this. I affirm, on the contrary, that they were the best and safest witnesses. But to take away all ground of objection, I shall quote a few heathen testimonies. Hecataeus of Abdera, a contemporary of Alexander the Great, and a man famed for learning and wisdom, wrote a history of the Jews, in which he has described the exodus, and attributed the Pentateuch to the great lawgiver. Eupolemus, a Greek historian, who lived a century and a half later, states that Moses was the author of the book of the Law. Manetho, a learned Egyptian of the age of Hecataeus, ascribes to Moses the formation of the Jewish code. To these might be added Tacitus, Juvenal, Longinus, and many other classic writers, all of whom ascribe to Moses the institution of that code of laws which we find in the Pentateuch. 'These authors cover a period extending from the time of Alexander, when the Greeks first became curious on the subject of Jewish history, to that of the emperor Aurelian, when the literature of the Jews had been thoroughly sifted by the acute and learned Alexandrians. They constitute not the full voice of heathenism, but only an indication of what that voice was. Here then we have a mass of sound historical evidence for the genuineness and authenticity of the Pentateuch such as no other ancient writings can supply.'

portions, composed in the spirit, or with the design, of mere secular history. There are indeed notices of the origin of the arts, of the founding of cities, of the wars of some ancient tribes, but all these are referred to in a way which plainly shows their entire subordination to the sacred object of the narrative. The whole history of the Cainites, for instance, is disposed of in ten verses (Ge. 4. 16-26), while the particulars referred to are adduced as indications of the character of this rejected family, and of the sources whence they looked for happiness. The wars of the eastern kings, too, are only noticed on account of the part Abraham took in rescuing Lot; and to introduce the interview of the patriarch with Melchizedec. The object, then, of the Pentateuch was not to give a full or systematic history either of the physical or political world, but simply to notice such facts in connection with both as tended to show in what relation the universe and man stand to God; what duties God requires of man; and what provision God has made for man's temporal and eternal welfare. Whatever is calculated to throw light on these subjects is narrated—all else is excluded. This I take to be the key to the narratives in the Pentateuch. This shows why incidents in the personal and family histories of the patriarchs are minutely related, why conversations, dreams, and visions are recorded with great fulness of detail; while the rise of dynasties and kingdoms is barely mentioned. This shows, too, why the account of the creation of man occupies such a large space, while the most stupendous creations and arrangements of the material universe—the countless orbs of heaven, the strata of the earth's crust, the air, the ocean, the trees, the grass, the flowers, the multitudinous forms of animal life—are either passed over or despatched in a word or two. In fact the Pentateuch looks at, and speaks of, the whole of this world, and the whole material universe, merely in its relation to a creating and governing God, and to man as a moral and immortal being. The opening words of the Pentateuch may be regarded as intended to show the relation of God to the physical universe. The next part his relation to the whole human race—that in him they live, and move, and have their being; that to him they are responsible; that by him they will finally be judged. All that follows—the great body of the Pentateuch, and indeed of the Bible—was designed to show the special and peculiar relation of God to his church and covenant people. They are his by a double ownership. He watches over them with a double interest and care.

The grand design, therefore, of the Pentateuch is to show God as the Creator and Ruler of the universe; to show when, and for what purpose, the present terrestrial economy was instituted; to show that mankind is one fraternal tribe, protected, guided, and provided for by the care of a Father, the only and omnipotent Creator; to show the object for which man was created, and the destiny in store for him; to show the provision made for man's spiritual as well as his temporal wants, in the promise of a MESSIAH; and to show the way in which God selects, governs, and redeems his church. All the historic facts, all the incidental allusions, all the scientific notices, are subservient to one or other of these objects. The Pentateuch is a system of divine truth grafted on a series of physical and historical events. It is this characteristic which makes it so infinitely superior to all the so-called sacred books in the world. The Pentateuch is not a collection of poems more or less beautiful; it is not a philosophical speculation on the origin of the universe; it is not an unintelligible jumble which expositors can twist at pleasure from a cosmological essay into a treatise on ethics. It is a sacred history; but a history designed to show God's relation to the universe as Creator and Sustainer; and especially God's dealings with man, and man's duty to God. It is only when viewed in this light we can understand why the history of the fall is given with such minuteness; and why the biographies of three patriarchs occupy whole chapters, while the histories of the mightiest nations and potentates are dismissed in a single sentence. It was to the patriarchs God revealed himself; to them the promise of the Messiah was given; and hence to those wandering chiefs attaches a grandeur and an interest greater far than that of the Babels and the Nimrods of the world.

In the remaining historical books the history of the people of Israel, which was begun in the Pentateuch, is carried on continuously from the death of Moses to the re-establishment of the Jews in Palestine after the captivity, under the leadership of Ezra and Nehemiah. They thus cover a period of a little more than a thousand years. They may be divided into two groups. The first group begins with Joshua and ends with 2 Kings. The history is continuous. The book of Joshua closes with his death, after narrating the partition of Palestine among the tribes, and the overthrow of the most formidable of the Canaanitish kings. Judges embraces the history of Israel from the death of Joshua to the death of Samson. The books of Samuel continue it down to the close of David's reign; and the two books of Kings narrate the history of the Jews to the Babylonish captivity. The second group begins with Chronicles and ends with Nehemiah. The history here is also continuous, but to a large extent it overlaps the former group. The books of Chronicles begin with genealogical tables which extend back to Adam, and reach onward to David, where the narrative is taken up, and a history of the kingdom of Judah given down to the captivity. Malachi closes the history of the Jews in the Old Testament.

GENERAL REMARKS ON THE HISTORICAL BOOKS.

ascertained. Joshua doubtless wrote the greater part of the book which bears his name; and Samuel may have been the author of Judges and a part of the books of Samuel. Ezra and Nehemiah probably composed those books which have been called after them; but more than this we cannot say. Another and much more interesting question presents itself to the thoughtful reader. Whence did the authors obtain their information? It could not have been in all cases from personal knowledge, for the book of Judges embraces the history of about five hundred years; Samuel of more than a hundred years; Kings of four hundred and fifty years; and Chronicles of a still longer period. Direct revelation from God was, of course, possible. Some of the facts and truths recorded were confessedly obtained from that source; but we have no evidence that ever ordinary history was revealed. The analogy of Scripture is altogether opposed to such a theory. Whatever came within the sphere of ordinary observation was recorded in the ordinary way. There was no new revelation of it to the mind of the historian; and there was no supernatural power exerted farther than was necessary to enable fallible man to write observed facts with infallible accuracy.

In the book of Genesis we have some incidental evidence of the source from which Moses obtained his information. Close observation shows to even the ordinary reader traces of distinct narratives, or documents; sometimes overlapping each other, and recording events from different points of view, and with different details. These documents generally begin with some set phrase, such as, 'These are the generations of the heavens and the earth,' Ge. 2. 4; 'This is the book [or writing] of the generations of Adam,' ch. 5. 1; 'These are the generations of Shem,' ch. 11. 10; 'Now these are the generations of Esau,' ch. 36. 1. The details of facts, of genealogies and lists of names, and of long conversations, are given with a minuteness and circumstantiality which indicate an actor or eye-witness. The words and phrases used, and the general style, show distinctive individuality. My belief is that the leading personages in primeval history—Adam, Seth, Enoch, Abraham, Jacob, Joseph—each recorded the events which transpired in his own times; and that the records thus prepared were handed down from generation to generation, until at length they were embodied by Moses, under the infallible guidance of the Holy Spirit, in one continuous history.

In addition to the documents which Moses appears to have used in the preparation of the book of Genesis, he mentions and quotes from a separate work, 'The Book of the Wars of the Lord,' Nu. 21. 14, 15. The title and the quotation show that this must have been a collection of odes, composed at different periods, to celebrate the wars waged by Israel, under the guidance of Jehovah. They may have been so connected by brief annals as to form a continuous history, comp. Nu. 21. 17, 18; 27. 3. The authors of the succeeding historical books of the Old Testament seem to have made full use of national records and contemporary annals. Joshua (ch. 10. 13) and the author of 2 Samuel (ch. 1. 18) quote from the Book of Jasher, which appears to have contained a collection of odes on some of the most remarkable events of Israelitish history. At the close of the reign of Solomon, the sacred writer refers for a fuller history of the events of that important period to the Book of the Acts of Solomon, 1 Ki. 11. 41; and the character of the reference implies that the writer was himself largely indebted to that book. In regard to the history of King David the author of 1 Chronicles says:—'Now the acts of David the king, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of Samuel the seer, and in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the seer; with all his reign and his might, and the times that went over him, and over Israel, and over all the kingdoms of the countries,' ch. 29. 29, 30. In one or other of the historical books, reference is made to the following works: 'The Prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite,' 2 Ch. 9. 29; 'The Visions of Iddo the Seer against Jeroboam the Son of Nebat,' 2 Ch. 9. 29; 'The Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah,' 1 Ki. 14. 19; 'The Book of the Kings of Israel and Judah,' 2 Ch. 27. 7. The two last are probably identical, and are referred to very often both by the writers of Kings and Chronicles. The work must have been large, and was perhaps an official or national record of the leading events which occurred both in the northern and southern kingdom. Mention is likewise made of histories or annals written by Jehu the son of Hanani, 2 Ch. 20. 34; by Isaiah the prophet, 2 Ch. 26. 22; by Hosai (rendered in the English version 'the Sayings of the Seers,' 2 Ch. 33. 19); and of 'The Chronicles of King David,' 1 Ch. 27. 24. All these were probably contemporary works, from which the sacred writers extracted, under divine guidance, the facts which they wove into Bible history.

It has been objected to the view given above with regard to the original sources of the book of Genesis, that the art of writing was unknown in those primeval times. If this can be proved, the theory of written documents is untenable. But recent discoveries have dissolved this argument, and have established the fact that the art of writing with ink upon papyrus was known in Egypt long before the days of Moses. A number of Egyptian papyri, written in the hieratic character, are now in the British Museum, all of which are of the age of Moses or anterior to it. There is one in the Bibliothèque Impériale at Paris, which appears to have been written two centuries before Abraham migrated to Palestine. Recent discovery has achieved still greater triumphs on behalf of divine revelation. Away in the midst of a parched desert, near the banks of the Euphrates, are great mounds covered with dust and sand. They mark the site of Abraham's native city, Ur of the Chaldees. Some of them have been excavated, and bricks, cylinders, and other monuments have been dug up, bearing inscriptions dating back from the time of Abraham to the period of the confusion of tongues. Thus it is that some of the very earliest monuments in the world bear inscriptions which are still legible; and this fact, taken in connection with incidental allusions in the book of Genesis, seems to indicate that He who first taught the human tongue to articulate intelligible sounds, taught at the same time the human hand to trace intelligible characters.

The foregoing considerations give an additional antiquarian interest to the historical books of the Old Testament. We recognize in them not merely the earliest specimens of literature, but venerable records handed down from periods when most of us have been accustomed to think the means for forming a literature did not exist. It seems to me highly probable that to Adam the revelation of God's creative work was first made, and by him it was recorded; and that to him we are indebted for the striking narrative of his converse with God in Eden, and for the whole account of the fall. Noah was the natural historian of the deluge. Abraham was his own biographer, and we find in his life just such simple and graphic details of facts, incidents, and conversations as an eye-witness would record. Jacob alone could have written so fully the story of the dream at Bethel, the romantic incidents of Padan-aram, and the meeting with Jehovah at Mahanaim. Joseph was probably the last whose personal memorials Moses embodied in his history.

To some this view may appear strange; it may perhaps run counter to their early impressions, or to what may be called traditional theory. But does it detract one iota from the authenticity of the sacred history? Does it contradict one single passage in God's Word? Does it tend in the least to contravene the truth of the Mosaic authorship or plenary inspiration of the Pentateuch? It seems to me that it tends to encircle this venerable book with a yet brighter halo of glory, and to give it if possible a yet higher claim upon the attention of the Christian scholar and antiquary. We can see in it not merely a connected history drawn up by Moses; but we can recognize, embodied in that history, the sublime story of creation written by Adam in Eden; we can recognize there Noah's own account of the deluge, perhaps composed in the ark; we can recognize fragments of the autobiographies of Abraham, Jacob, and Joseph. We can see besides the infinite wisdom of God pervading each fragment as well as the combined history—giving life-like reality to its characters, giving perfect accuracy to its details, giving infallible certainty to scientific developments, and investing with absolute historic truth its wondrous and cheering prophecies and promises. # THE BOOK OF JOB.

By whom the book of Job was written is uncertain, and conjecture is useless. It is, for the substance of it, a true history of real facts. Job is represented as really existent as Noah or Daniel, Eze. 14. 14, 20; and as a patient sufferer who obtained a joyful deliverance, Ja. 5. 11. It is an ancient history. The length of Job's life; the rare use of the divine name of JEHOVAH, and frequent use of SHADDAI, or Almighty and All-sufficient; the remarkable remains of religion in the land of Uz and the places about; the mentioning of no other idolatry but that of worshipping the sun and moon; the never making any plain allusion to the dividing of the Red Sea, or to the appearance of God to the Israelites in the wilderness, which lay at no great distance from the land of Uz; strongly tempt one to think that Job's distress might be about the time when Moses lived in the land of Midian, or perhaps a hundred years before. We have here, (1) The history of Job's sufferings and his remarkable patience under them, issuing in a sad mixture of human weakness in his cursing the day of his birth, ch. i. ii. iii. (2) A hot dispute between him and Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar, his friends, Whether remarkable judgments be certain tokens of the wickedness of those upon whom they are inflicted? The aim of Job is to bewail his own affliction, complain of its weight, justify himself from gross wickedness or hypocrisy, and prove that wicked men often prosper in this world while the godly are exposed to manifold calamities. The scope of his friends is to prove that no good man is subjected to extraordinary calamities, but that the most wicked men ordinarily are; and hence to condemn Job as a hypocrite, because of his uncommon troubles, iv.-xxxi. (3) A decision of the dispute; by Elihu, then by JEHOVAH. The aim of Elihu is to leave Job's state undetermined, or even to admit it to be good; and only to charge him with his misbehaviour under his trouble, as too arrogant and self-justifying, especially when he had to do with a God of infinite sovereignty, greatness, power, wisdom, and justice. The scope of Jehovah's speech is to convince Job of his meanness, and of his own infinite power, greatness, and extensive influence; and thereby lead him into a sense of his iniquity in insisting so much upon his own justification, and complaining so unguardedly of the providence of God:— and at last he justifies him, in opposition to his three friends, in his character and sentiments, xxxii.-xlii. (4) The whole issues in Job's great honour and redoubled prosperity, xlii. In this book we have at once a most noted encouragement to patience, and a system of the most ancient believers' apprehensions and faith concerning the wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and sovereignty of God; and concerning his works of creation and providence; concerning the original and actual corruption of mankind; concerning redemption by Christ and the usefulness of good works; and, in fine, concerning the resurrection of the dead and eternal life.

[The age of the book of Job is a subject of deep interest to the biblical scholar. We have no direct evidence bearing upon it. Jewish tradition assigns to it a very high antiquity. The critic, however, must depend for his arguments mainly on the character of the book itself—on its language and style; on the manners and customs it portrays; and on its reference to, or silence regarding, the great facts and personages of sacred history. All are agreed that the language of the book is of the oldest type found in the Bible. It has certain peculiarities. It has a closer affinity to the Arabic than any other of the inspired writings, arising from the close connection of Job with the nomads of the Arabian desert. There are besides many Aramaic words and phrases in it; but these are of an archaic form, entirely different from those found in the later Hebrew writings. The style of the book—its terse, rugged, and highly poetic language—resembles portions of the book of Genesis, the song of Deborah, and the Proverbs of Solomon, and is characteristic of a primitive and imaginative people. 'The language,' says a recent writer, 'belongs altogether to a period when thought was slow, but profound and intensely concentrated; when the weighty and oracular sayings of the wise were wont to be engraved upon rocks with a pen of iron and in characters of molten lead. It is truly a lapidary style, such as was natural only in an age when writing, though known, was rarely used, before language had acquired clearness, fluency, and flexibility, but lost much of its freshness and native force.' The manners and customs so clearly developed are those of a simple and primitive people. The vast flocks and herds, the semi-nomad, semi-agricultural mode of life, the profuse hospitality, the sudden and sweeping reverses of fortune, are all characteristic of the earliest patriarchal age. The nearest approaches to them are in the histories of Abraham at Beersheba and Laban in Mesopotamia. This book affords a very graphic and full picture of the manners and customs, domestic, social, and political, of the period. Yet there is no straining in it—no aiming at effect; all is easy, natural, simple, affording clear proof that the writer was personally familiar with the scenes he depicted. The free, vigorous, and wild simplicity of the life portrayed in the book of Job bears the stamp of a hoar antiquity; and the style of the narrative shows that the author must have been contemporary with the events. Another consideration leads to the same conclusion. The book is silent regarding the Mosaic law. Its peculiar enactments and institutions, which gave a tone and distinctive character to all the subsequent literature of the Jewish nation, were manifestly unknown to the author of this book, as well as to all the actors introduced into it. The book is silent too regarding the Egyptian bondage, the exodus, the wilderness journey, and the entrance into Canaan. This silence can only be accounted for by the supposition that the date of the book was anterior to those events. 'The sanctions and penalties of the law, if known, could scarcely have been passed over by the opponents of Job, while the deliverance of Israel and the overthrow of the Egyptians supplied exactly the examples which they required to silence the complaints and answer the arguments of Job.' The forms of law, the system of worship, the illustrations and allusions of the book are those of the patriarchal age. Everything therefore in this book tends to show that it 'stands apart from all other productions of the Hebrews, belongs to a different epoch, and, in accordance with the surest canons of criticism, to an earlier age.' —“There was a man in the land of Uz whose name was Job; and that man was perfect and upright, and one that feared God and eschewed evil.” Ibn er Rabi, as quoted by Lawrence Oliphant in his Land of Gilead, says: “To the prophets buried in the region of Damascus belong Job, and his tomb is near Nawa in the district of Hauran.” Mohammed el Makdeshi, on page 81 of his Geography, as also quoted by Oliphant, says: “And in Hauran and Batanæa lie the villages of Job and his home. The chief place is Nawa, rich in wheat and other cereals.” The Hauran is the store-house of Damascus. It is a highly productive and thickly populated region. The artist who took these pictures and the writer were in Damascus when the first train went out from Damascus seventy miles into the Hauran. We give as illustrating this the court-yard of Shiek Islam in Damascus.

cations. And when God, for holy ends, lengthens Satan's chain against his own people, how inexpressibly forward is he in carrying on mischief to the utmost extent of his permission! There is need then in our happiest estate to rejoice with trembling. How heavy are sore troubles when they come from every quarter and on everything, one upon the neck of another; and the last the most dreadful. Happy is it when we are graciously weaned from created comforts, of which we may be so quickly and in so awful a manner deprived. But no affliction should indispose us for God's worship. The more trouble we feel the more need we have of his grace to support us. And the views of our death should wean us from perishing things. All that we have is God's gift, lent or given to us: and whatever we lose, enough is left to deserve our thankfulness. Nay, a spirit of meekness bestowed is a greater blessing than all that God can take from us. But, nevertheless, how powerful are the influences of God's grace, that can render his people composed and heartily resigned to his will under the sharpest trials! In all my troubles let me view God's hand and acquiesce in his will: and let them all drive me into the arms, the bosom of my God.

Ver. 8. [Sitting in ashes is a sign of deepest humiliation and sorrow. It is still practised in the East. I have witnessed it on more than one occasion. Any sudden and heavy calamity often drives the afflicted one not only to sit down on the heap of dust and ashes, but to sprinkle them over the whole person. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How restless, impudent, steady, and active is the devil in prosecuting his malice against the saints! Disappointment but sharpens his rage, and makes him return more furious to the attack: and though proved a liar he persists in his accusations. It is honourable and necessary to resist him steadfast in the faith. But above all, great is the mercy that we have Jesus as our advocate to repel his bold accusations. To what astonishing extent doth God, for his own wise ends, permit Satan to afflict his dearest saints; nay, his Son! But glorious conquerors are they whose mind, in humble abasement, corresponds with their lowest or most loathsome circumstances of body. Heavy indeed is the trial when those who ought to be our sympathizing directors in trouble become our tempters to the most horrid sins;—to rage and disquiet; to blaspheme; to curse God and his saints; to curse the day of their birth, and to wish themselves dead. Let then no health but what Christ is, no friend but God in him, be the trust, the boast of my soul! In the time of need all others take to themselves the wings of the morning and fly away. Miserable comforters, nay ensnaring tormentors, are they all.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1, 2. After these seven days were finished, Job gave vent to that grief which had so long stupified him, in the most bitter lamentations, and in imprecating mischiefs upon the day of his conception and birth. 3. Let, said he, the day of my birth, and the night of my conception, be utterly forgotten as if they had never been. 4. Let that unhappy day be covered with horrible darkness, and turned into night. And never let one ray of daylight appear thereon. 5. Let the most frightful darkness, and the most extensive and thick clouds, wholly possess it. Let black burning vapours, and the most fearful disasters, render it terrible to men. 6. Let gross darkness, or absolute extinction, seize upon the night of my conception. 7. But after he begins this unparalleled wailing, and proceeds with his argument against his friends, this favourable testimony is never repeated. On the contrary (ch. 42. 6), he accuses himself heavily, and proclaims his deep abasement and repentance. It will be evident when Elihu appears (ch. xxxiii.) that both Job and his friends are in some degree in error, and their several statements are therefore to be received under the correction of those principles by which Elihu expounds and defends the principles of the divine government.—C.

did not refuse to give me suck! 13. For thus should I have lain still as a ship at anchor; I should have felt none of those miseries which I now endure: but had lain quiet and undisturbed in the grave; 14. Equal to kings and great men, who lie alone in the tombs which they built for themselves; 15. And to princes, who in their life had heaped up riches and wealth; 16. There, in the grave, the most wicked can hurt no one; and they who had been restlessly tossed and worried with violence, enjoy the profoundest safety and rest. 18. There the condemned prisoners and enslaved captives enjoy the most perfect ease, and do not so much as hear the voice of an oppressor or exacter of labour. 19. There every person is on an equal level of power and greatness; and the servant is as free as his master. 20. Is it not strange that a man should be forced to live when his miserable condition makes him heartily abhor it; 21. Who in vain wishes for death, and seeks it more eagerly than the greatest riches; 22. And who would more gladly leap into his grave than the covetous miser can meet with a rich vein of silver; 23. Being so oppressed and shut up with God's indignation that he knows no other way to turn himself? 24. For my meat doth but sustain a miserable life, which is filled up with heart-sinking sobs and loud roarings, on account of my troubles. 25. For whatever dreadful things I fear they immediately come upon me, notwithstanding all my care to prevent them. 26. In my prosperity I never securely trusted in my riches, nor indulged myself in carnal ease; yet that has not preserved me from being miser-

The loud lamentations, the rending of their garments, the throwing of dust on their heads, and the seven days and nights of blank silence, were all, by the wasted and heart-broken sufferer, interpreted, and, as the sequel shows, rightly interpreted, in the light of insults rather than sympathy. The visit of the three friends was probably a part of Satan's work; and if so, it was surely his masterpiece. To assail the isolated, exhausted, agonized man with hypocritical professions of sympathy, with illogical arguments, and finally with coarse and cruel invective, was enough to drive him to despair. We can scarcely wonder that, under such circumstances, even the patience of Job was exhausted, and that he broke forth into those passionate utterances, of which an example is given in this third chapter. Ver. 14. [Desolate places. No country is more remarkable for its splendid and desolate tomb-palaces than the land of Edom, where Job resided. See Laborde or any other descriptions of Idumæa, especially of the city of Petra. C.]

Ver. 26. [This sublime and pathetic, and yet humiliating speech, must be regarded as the commencement of Job's 'sin with his lips.' Hitherto his outward conduct and language had been pure and perfect; now under unparalleled trial and temptation he bursts forth into passionate exclamations. What a sad comment is this on his noble declaration: 'The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!' P.]

bid it welcome. To quarrel with the life which God bestows, is to sin against our own mercies. Fretfulness and impatience at our lot can only aggravate our sufferings. And to reflect on God's providence is to accuse himself. It is our happiness that our time is in God's hand. The more irksome this life is we should be the more solicitous to prepare for a better. And they only are fit to die who are content to live, and, satisfied under every burden, wait cheerfully the Lord's pleasure.

CHAPTER IV. Then Eliphaz, a descendant of Esau, replied, ver. 2. Thou wilt doubtless be incensed by the slightest attempts to offer a reply: but who can restrain himself from speaking the truth upon such a pressing occasion? 3. Behold, in former times thou hast, with great pains and success, instructed many under trouble and corrected their mistakes; and by thy kind and pertinent advices hast mightily encouraged the dispirited. 4. By thy discourse thou hast encouraged and supported those whose hearts were ready to sink; and hast settled them who trembled under the burdens of their adversity. 5. But now, when fallen into their condition, thou canst not practise thy own lessons, but faintest and art struck with consternation. 6. Is not this the time to exercise thy piety, thy confidence in God, thy hope of blessings, and thy integrity of conversation? Or shall all thy religious appearances turn out a mere nothing? 7. Too good reason thou hast to suspect thyself a hypocrite: for think if thou canst remember 26 I<sup>k</sup> was not in safety, neither had I rest, neither was I quiet, yet trouble came.

CHAPTER IV.

9 By the blast of God they perish, and by the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.

10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion, and the teeth of the young lions, are broken.

11 The old lion perisheth for lack of prey, and the stout lion's whelps are scattered abroad.

12 Now<sup>1</sup> a thing was secretly<sup>7</sup> brought to me, and mine ear received a little thereof.<sup>8</sup>

13 In <sup>m</sup>thoughts from the visions of the night, when <sup>n</sup>deep sleep falleth on men, 14 Fear<sup>o</sup> came upon me,<sup>9</sup> and trembling, which made all my bones<sup>1</sup> to shake.

15 Then a <sup>p</sup>spirit passed before my face; the hair of my flesh stood up:

16 It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof: an image was before mine eyes; there <sup>q</sup>was silence, and I heard a <sup>r</sup>voice, saying, prehend, amidst profound silence all around, say, 17. Shall a wretched man be more righteous than God, or justified before him? or even the most excellent man be pure before his Maker? 18. Behold! he put no firmness in his heavenly ministers, and can put no trust in them; and in his angels he has placed no ground of boasting, and can perceive defect of service and readiness to slide. 19. How then can he perceive perfection in mortal and sinful men, whom he can crush as easily as, or before the face of, a moth? 20. They are pricked and bruised in a mortar of trouble through their whole life and quickly perish for ever, without any oppressing them or regarding their fall. 21. Is not all their power and excellency a plucked-up nothing, is it not destroyed together? They pine and melt away for want of, and without ever attaining, wisdom, or any solid and well-connected good. And though their dignity be ever so great, and their posterity ever so numerous, they die like so many beasts which have no understanding of their latter end.

Ver. 1. [Teman is closely connected with Edom, and must have been a province of it, or have bordered upon it, Je. 49. 7, 20. In one passage it is included in the same curse with the capital of Edom, Am. 1. 12. Habakkuk joins it with Mount Paran, and this may indicate that it embraced that section of Edom which lay opposite to Kadesh, Hab. 3. 3. Probably as the northern section of Edom was called Gebal, the southern may have been called Teman. P.]

Ver. 6. [Delitzsch's translation brings out what appears to be the true meaning:—'Is not thy piety thy confidence, thy hope? and the uprightness of thy ways?' That is, Dost thou not rely on thy presumed innocence before God? P.]

Ver. 9. [The argument is this: What a man sows, that shall he reap—if he sow wickedness, by the blast of God he will perish; but you, Job, are suffering by that blast, therefore it is evident you have been secretly wicked. So dark is the understanding, so uncharitable the judgment of man! But to the believer 'it is a small thing to be judged of man's judgment—he that judgeth is the Lord,' 1 Co. 4. 3, 4. C.]

Ver. 17. [How blessed the truth that notwithstanding ruption of our nature, it is far easier to give good counsel than to take it. Extremely trying is the situation when Satan employs the saints' godly friends to make them raise their hopes and acknowledge themselves hypocrites. The charge of hypocrisy is most frequently laid against the people of God, and is one of the hardest to be borne. But exceeding sinful is the indulgence of a censorious spirit. We must never judge of a man's state from a particular failing or from his outward lot. Though tyrannical oppressors and other sinners be recompensed in this life, yet no man knows either love or hatred by all that is before him. What singular intimacy with God might saints enjoy if duly weaned and withdrawn from the things of this life! Were our tempers duly holy, even our dreams might be means of our noted fellowship with God. O how men's spirits shrink under visits from the other world! What then must be the terrible majesty, infinite holiness, and equity of God himself! Insignificant and impure are all creatures in comparison of him. Mean are men while they live; and wretched in death if driven away in their sins. But for senseless, sinful, dying worms to impeach the wisdom, goodness, or equity of JEHOVAH's dispensations of providence, or to plead their own wealth and excellency in his presence, is the boldest presumption. How strange is it that amidst so many and remarkable warnings of an entrance into eternity, most men should live entirely unconcerned about it! And scarcely less strange that even good men should so often wrest God's oracles to serve their own humours. This oracle which Eliphaz heard gave ground to rebuke Job for his murmuring, but none to condemn him as a hypocrite.

CHAPTER V. Call now if there be indeed any that will answer this oracle in thy favour! And to which of the saints canst thou turn as an advocate for thy cause, or as an example of thy condition? 2. For the just judgment and holy jealousy of God shall destroy foolish and wicked men: and their own rage at Providence and envy of other men's happiness shall render them miserable. 3. Even when I have seen in iniquity, and abandoned to gross impiety, shall not long flourish on the earth; but if, as born in it, a man be obstinate in gross wickedness, the flaming thunderbolts of God's judgment shall fly aloft to destroy him.

3. Truly, therefore, were I in thy place, I would humbly address myself unto God and refer myself to his disposal. 9. I would refer myself to God, who works so many things, the nature, causes, and immediate ends of which we do not understand, and so is able to help or punish as he pleases: 10. To God, who waters the earth with rain, and who causes the fountains to spring, and rivulets to run along the streets and fields; 11. That by plentiful crops he may enrich and dignify men of low condition, and exalt those that mourn in sordid baseness and misery to an extended happiness and safety: 12. To God, who defeats the craftiest designs of subtle men to raise or enrich themselves, that it is not in their power to execute the schemes which they have most cunningly contrived: 13. Who makes their own devices to produce what they studied to avoid, and to hurry them, contrary to their expectation, into dreadful ruin. 14. So that when everything seems plain and prosperous, they suddenly stumble into mistakes and misery; and in the very midst of their wisdom and felicity unexpected danger seizes upon them. 15. By which means God delivers those who fear his name from the open fury and from the treacherous flatteries and calumnies of these powerful oppressors. 16. That by observation and experience of this the poor and oppressed may be encouraged to hope in God for help and deliverance, and wicked men may be confounded and silenced.—17. And, moreover, God makes all the afflictions of his people to work remarkably for their good; therefore never complain of his corrections, but esteem them as a distinguished favour. 18. For he not only makes us grieved and pained with trouble for our good, but quickly removes his rod and bestows his comforts. 19. When manifold troubles are inflicted on others thou shalt escape if thou refer thyself to God's disposal. Nay, be thy own troubles as many as they will, they shall do thee no real hurt. 20. God shall supply thee with food in times of famine, and protect

20 They are <sup>destroyed</sup> from morning to evening: they <sup>perish</sup> for ever without any regarding <sup>it</sup>.

man is born unto trouble, being immersed, as it were, in an atmosphere of sin, of which the consequence is inevitable misery. And as the sparks are ever exhausted so long as the fire burns, so trouble and sorrow continue to be the only sure inheritance to which man is born, to which he is guilty of sin.—C.

REFLECTIONS.—The best of men quickly grow confident in their own mistakes. And it is the greatest discouragement to one in sore trouble to find no saint in his case or sentiment. But how foolish and silly are the greatest of sinners! Their own wickedness fearfully corrects them, and their backslidings ruin themselves, their families, or property. It is posterity very numerous, prosperous, and beautifully connected. 26. And when thou hast arrived at an uncommon age, thou shalt enter into thy grave with an easy smile and shouts of joy, as one fully ripened for the glories of heaven. 27. Doubt not of this; for we have thoroughly examined the point, and find it as I have said. Hear, consider, and practise it, for thy present and everlasting advantage.

ascription of all chastisements to his will and power, ver. 11—14. C.]

Ver. 7. [Misfortune does not grow like weeds out of the ground; it is rather established in the divine order of the world, as it is established in the order of nature that sparks of fire should ascend.] It is a beautiful sentiment, and characteristic of an age of piety and thoughtfulness. P.]

CHAPTER VI.

Job sheweth that his complaints are not causeless. 8 He wisheth for death, wherein he is assured of comfort. 14 He reproveth his friends of unkindness.

BUT Job answered and said,
2 Oh that my grief were thoroughly weighed, and my calamity laid<sup>1</sup> in the balances together!

3 For now it would be heavier than the sand of the sea:<sup>2</sup> therefore my words are swallowed up.

4 For the arrows of the Almighty are within me, the poison whereof drinketh up<sup>3</sup> my spirit: the terrors of God do set themselves in array against me.

5 Doth the wild ass<sup>4</sup> bray when he hath grass?<sup>5</sup> or loweth the ox over his fodder?

6 Can that which is unsavoury be eaten without salt? or is there any taste in the white of an egg?

7 The things that my soul refused to touch are as my sorrowful meat.

8 Oh that I might have my request; and that God would grant me the thing that I long for!<sup>6</sup>

9 Even<sup>7</sup> that it would please God to destroy me; that he would let loose his hand, and cut me off!

10 Then should I yet have comfort; yea, I would harden<sup>8</sup> myself in sorrow: let him not spare; for I have not concealed the words of the Holy One.<sup>9</sup>

11 What<sup>10</sup> is my strength, that I should hope? and what is mine end, that I should prolong my life?

12 Is<sup>11</sup> my strength the strength of stones? or is my flesh of brass?<sup>12</sup>

13 Is not my help<sup>13</sup> in me?<sup>14</sup> and is wisdom driven quite from me?

17 What time they wax warm, they vanish: when it is hot,<sup>4</sup> they are consumed<sup>5</sup> out of their place.

For when blessed of God they are remarkably advantageous. They but open God's way for bestowing his distinguished favours. And those who dwell under the shadow of the Almighty shall enjoy the surest protection, inward quietness, peace with God and his creatures, comfort in their families and seed, and joy and honour in their death. Let us then attend to and profit by every truth we hear.

CHAPTER VI. But Job replied to Eliphaz: 2. O that my oppressive trouble, allotted me in God's indignation, and my extensive, unavoidable, and sinking calamity and sorrow, were but impartially and thoroughly weighed! 3. It would be found so heavy as to hinder and far surpass complaints: therefore are my words full of burning rage and tossing disquiet.

afforded me for comfort but your loathsome and empty discourses. 8. O that God would quickly fulfil my request for death, and grant me that which I earnestly hope and long for! 9. Even that, without leaving me to languish in this miserable condition, he would, with one effectual stroke, put an end to my present life. 10. The near views of this would comfort my spirit and strengthen me to endure the severest pains; to obtain this I would gladly endure what he pleases; as I am conscious that I have not hypocritically denied, disregarded, or concealed his truths. 11. My strength is so spent that I can neither hold out nor expect recovery. I neither have nor hope for comfort in this life that I should desire it; nor do I apprehend any hurt in death that I should fear it. 12. My strength is quite incapable of bearing such troubles; nor can I but feel their terrible pressure. 13. And though I cannot deliver myself, am I therefore destitute of solid

Just so are ye deceitfully disappointing me in my adversity, when I most need your help. Instead of comforting me, you, seeing my distress, shrink from me, as if you were afraid I should prove burdensome or disgraceful to you. 22, 23. But since I never asked aught of you either my subsistence or deliverance, can you not afford me a few comfortable words! 24. If you can convince me of any mistake, I shall submit, cease my complaints, and hearken to your counsels: 25. For solid arguments have a marvellous power to convince and persuade; but your reproofs are to no purpose, as they proceed wholly on mistakes. 26. MILITARY ROAD, DAMASCUS—SETTLED BY UZ, THE SON OF ARALI, AND SAID BY THE ARABIAN HISTORIAN, MUGIR-ED-DIN-EL-HAMBELI, TO HAVE ONCE BEEN THE PROPERTY OF JOB. [Job, viii. 1.]—Wetzstein, Oliphant thinks, clearly shows that the land of Uz, mentioned in Jeremiah, xxxv. 20, "And all the mingled people, and all the kings of the land of Uz," cannot refer to Edom, but must have reference to a region near Damascus. While Josephus, in his Antiquities (i:3-4), states that the Arameans, whom the Greeks called the Syrians, were descended from Aram. Uz, who was a son of Aram settled Trachonitis and Damascus. The historian, Mugir-ed-din-el-Hambeli, in the chapter on the legends of the prophet, says: "Job came from El-Es Uz (?), and the Damascene province of Batanzza, which included Hauran, was his property." And Dr. Porter, one of the contributors to this Self-Interpreting Bible, says that he visited a town in the Hauran whose people claimed that Job was king of Batanzza. We give as illustrating this a view of the Military Road in Damascus.

CHAPTER VII.

1 Job excuseth his desire of death. 12 He complaineth of his own restlessness, 17 and God's watchfulness.

IS there<sup>a</sup> not<sup>b</sup> an appointed time to man<sup>1</sup> upon earth? are not his days also like the days of an hireling?<sup>2</sup>

2 As a servant earnestly desireth<sup>3</sup> the shadow,<sup>4</sup> and as an hireling looketh for the reward of his work;

3 So am I made to possess months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.

4 When I lie down, I say, 'When shall I arise, and the night be gone?'<sup>5</sup> and I am full of tossings to and fro unto the dawning of the day.

5 My<sup>6</sup> flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dust; my skin is broken, and become loathsome.

6 My<sup>7</sup> days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope.

7 O remember that my life is<sup>8</sup> wind: mine eye shall no more<sup>9</sup> see good.<sup>6</sup>

8 The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: 'thine eyes are upon me,' and I am not.<sup>8</sup>

9 As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away; so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more.<sup>9</sup>

10 He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Therefore I will not refrain my mouth; I will speak in the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.

12 Am<sup>1</sup> I a sea, or a whale, that thou settest a watch over me?

—The onager and the ox never complain while they have the food of their choice. Give them other food unsuited to their taste, and their braying or lowing will soon give proof of hunger. Even so, before me is set a table covered with sorrowful meat which my soul refuses to touch. I have lost all taste and relish for the world, the world is become insipid and unsavoury to me; why should I not then complain if the lower animals are so privileged? If their Maker indulge their craving appetites, why may I not call upon the death that I long for? See ver. 8. C.]

Ver. 19. [Troops of Tema. The companies of Tema, a city of Arabia, so called from Tema a son of Ishmael (Ge. 25.15), searched for these brooks in their thirst, but they had vanished, leaving nothing but a dry channel, a circumstance frequent even with considerable rivers in warm climates like Edom. C.—In travelling once across the Arabian desert my Arab guides had determined to spend the night at a well-known watering-place, a desert stream, but they found it dry.

REFLECTIONS.—How insupportable is inward trouble, either felt or feared; and of all our evils none more intolerable than a sense of God's wrath! They, in general, are partial judges of other men's troubles who live in ease and plenty themselves. And it adds greatly to afflictions to meet with nothing under them but uncharitable censures and insipid comforts from our Christian friends. It is difficult to keep either heart or lips aright under such complicated troubles. Ungoverned passion grows more violent when it meets with rebukes and checks. But it is most unbecoming when it gets into our very prayers to God, and by our folly turns them into sin. There is great need of always living faithful for God, since we know not how soon troubles may render us weary of our life. And those who are by grace prepared for another world, can see little in this to make them fond of staying in it. But it is not self-hardening, but humility under trouble, that makes us ripe for deliverance. Alas! how often dejected spirits preach despair to themselves, and refuse to be comforted; forgetting how God can strengthen or recover for his own glory as he pleases! It is a mercy then to have wisdom and grace that will remain with us in the very worst of times. Unjust, yea, impious, is the want of compassion to those who are under heavy afflictions. And it is bitter to find the friends on whom we depended prove faithless. Yet created comforts commonly disappoint us, and become gall and wormwood when we come to have most need of their encouraging and supporting influence. Upright souls are averse to be a burden to their friends. And the impertinency of want often provokes the abuse with the toils of the day desires a place of refreshment, and as a hireling looks for the end and reward of his work, so I long for death, to deliver me from my miseries and bring me to my glorious reward. For I have now allotted me for my portion months of wretchedness and vanity without any solid comfort; and in the night, when others rest from their sorrows, I can but restlessly increase mine. 4. I am scarcely laid down on my bed when, through agony and pain, I wish to be up again; and I am continually tormented both in body and mind. 5. For my body is overspread with ulcers, filled with worms, and crusted over with scabs, which have made such clefts in my skin that I am become loathsome to myself. 6. My happy days have quickly run over in a moment, and there is no hope that I shall recover them. 7. Remember, O God, how short and unsubstantial my life is, though once it was pleasant; and when once dead, I shall never return to my possessions and worldly prosperity. 8. My friends shall never more see me in this mortal state. Thou dost but frown upon me and I vanish out of this world. 11. Since there is no hope that my condition will be better in this world, therefore I will give some vent to the extremity of my sorrow by complaining. 12. Am I so strong and unruly that nothing but such strong chains of affliction can tame, rule, or restrain me? 16. Either cease from afflicting me or from preserving me in life; for my days have no need to be made more miserable and fading than they are of themselves. 17. What is man that thou shouldest honour him so much as to contend with him, and set thyself against him in tenderness, like a lion against a lamb?—C.] with! Surely then we ought to be humble, whose infirmities are so vile, and our days so empty and short?

O sweet must the heavenly rest be to those who get there through so much tribulation. It is proper therefore to die with affections quite weaned from this world and set on things above. But if the saints' afflictions can be so terrible, so constant on earth, what hell will be to the wicked for evermore! How terrible to be driven thither in our wickedness! to fall into the hands of an angry God! The views then of near approaching death ought to animate our con-sciences of sin, our cries for pardon of it, and deliverance from it. It is a mercy that the blood of Jesus cleanses from all sin, the most unadvised and obstinate expostulations with God not excepted; and knocked with this, we may cheerfully bid adieu to the valley of tears and sorrows.

integrity, it matters little though men esteem us as hypocrites. God often gives his people indirect hints of the kindness which he intends for them, by words never intended for that purpose by the speakers. And the knowledge and experience of others ought carefully to be improved for our instruction and comfort. What a common sin among professors is hypocrisy and dissimulation! What a sad source of it is forgetfulness of God! But the hope of hypocrites will put the most fearful cheat upon themselves. Though it flourishes awhile, it perishes at last. And the things of nature around us suggest the most important admonitions, did we but consider them aright. The most precious truths are often abused through the misapplication of them, to make the heart of the righteous sad, and the souls of the wicked to triumph. Let me therefore never be a harsh judge of others, and never too mild with respect to myself. Let me never judge of people's character by their outward lot. It is not time, but the last judgment and eternity, that will reduce all things to apparent order.

CHAPTER IX. Immediately Job replied, 2. I know indeed that God is righteous, and that he ordinarily punishes the wicked and favours the godly. But what frail man can, in your sense, be just before God? 3. If God please to call him to a strict account he cannot answer for one of a thousand of his thoughts, words, or actions. 4. And while God is infinitely righteous, his knowledge, wisdom, and power are so unbounded, that it is impossible for any to harden himself in rebellion against him and peacefully prosper. 5-9. Against him who can in a moment remove and overturn the largest mountains—who can shake the earth out of its place, and shatter its rocky foundations—who can at pleasure forbid the rising of the sun or shining of the stars—who at pleasure

CHAPTER IX.

1 Job, acknowledging God's justice, sheweth there is no contending with him. 22 Man's innocency is not to be condemned by afflictions.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I know it is so of a truth: but how should man be just with God?<sup>1</sup>

3 If he will contend with him, he cannot answer him one of a thousand.<sup>2</sup>

4 He is wise in heart, and mighty in strength: who hath hardened himself against him, and hath prospered?

5 Which removeth the mountains, and they know not; which overturneth them in his anger;

6 Which shaketh the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof tremble;

7 Which commandeth the sun, and it riseth not, and sealeth up the stars;

8 Which alone spreadeth out the heavens, and treadeth upon the waves of the sea;

9 Which maketh Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades, and the chambers of the south;<sup>5</sup>

10 Which doeth great things past finding out; yea, and wonders without number.

11 Lo, he goeth by me, and I see him not: he passeth on also, but I perceive him not.

12 Behold, he taketh away, who can hinder him? who will say unto him, What doest thou?

13 If God will not withdraw his anger, the proud helpers do stoop under him.<sup>6</sup>

14 How much less shall I answer him, and choose out my words to reason with him?

15 Whom, though I were righteous, yet would I not answer, but I would make supplication to my Judge.

16 If I had called, and he had answered me; yet would I not believe that he had hearkened unto my voice.<sup>7</sup>

17 For he breaketh me with a tempest, and multiplieth my wounds without cause.<sup>8</sup>

6 ch. 6. 24; 16. 6, 16; ver. 15, 16. Ps. 32. 3-5.

18 He<sup>b</sup> will not suffer me to take my breath, but filleth me with bitterness.

19 If I speak of strength, lo, he is strong: and if of judgment, who shall set me a time to plead?

20 If I justify myself, mine own mouth shall condemn me: If I say, I am perfect, it shall also prove me perverse.

21 Though I were perfect,<sup>9</sup> yet would I not know my soul; I would despise my life.

22 This is one thing, therefore I said it, He destroyeth the perfect and the wicked.

23 If the scourge slay suddenly, he will laugh at the trial of the innocent.

24 The earth is given into the hand of the wicked: he covereth the faces of the judges thereof; if not, where, and who is he?<sup>1</sup>

25 Now my days are swifter than a post; they flee away, they see no good.

26 They are passed away as the swift ships; as the eagle that hasteth to the prey.

27 If I say, I will forget my complaint, I will leave off my heaviness, and comfort myself;

28 I am afraid of all my sorrows, I know that thou wilt not hold me innocent.

29 If I be wicked, why then labour I in vain?

30 If I wash myself with snow-water,<sup>4</sup> and make my hands never so clean;

31 Yet shalt thou plunge me in the ditch, and mine own clothes shall abhor me.

32 For he is not a man, as I am, that I should answer him, and we should come together in judgment.

33 Neither is there any daysman<sup>6</sup> betwixt us, that might lay his hand upon us both.

34 Let him take his rod away from me, and let not his fear terrify me:

35 Then would I speak, and not fear him; but it is not so with me.<sup>8</sup>

CHAPTER X.

1 Job, taking liberty of complaint, expostulateth with God about his afflictions. 18 He complaineth of life, and craveth a little ease before death.

MY soul is weary<sup>2</sup> of my life: I will leave my complaint upon myself: I will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

punishments, the most proud, powerful, and fierce helpers and avengers must yield to his influence, and confess their inability to relieve us. 14. How then can I, a poor, weak, unbefriended wretch, answer him in judgment; or choose, give sense to, and order my words in debating with him! 15. Though my case were ever so just, nothing would become me but to make humble supplications to my tremendous and omniscient Judge who contends with me. 16. And if holliness would make me condemn myself: and though I be no hypocrite, my attempts to justify myself before him would prove me perverse. 21. Though I were ever so perfect I durst not, on my own consciousness, debate the matter with him, nor insist that my soul were really such in his view; but I would undervalue, disapprove, and loathe my practice before his infinite holiness; and would rather lose my life than dare to contend with one of boundless majesty. 22. All that hurried down the rapid stream, or the hungry eagle alights upon his prey. 27, 28. If I attempt to forget my calamities, lay aside my mournful looks, pluck up my spirits, and cause my face to shine with a smile, my tormenting pains and sorrows terrify my mind: and I find by experience that thou, O God, wilt not remove my trouble as if I were innocent. 29. I see that I shall be held and punished as one that is wicked—

2 I will say unto God, Do not 'condemn me; 'show me wherefore thou contendest with me.

3 Is it good unto thee<sup>3</sup> that thou 'shouldest oppress? that thou shouldest despise 'the work<sup>4</sup> of thine hands? and 'shine upon the counsel of the wicked?

him, in my own vindication; for I am not such a hypocrite as you allege. But, alas! sorrows and fears oppress my spirit.

Ver. 1. [Job admits the truth of the principle enunciated at the close of Bildad's address; namely, that God's acts and judgments are always right and just. He goes on to show that it would be impossible for man to dispute this; for if God should even condescend to enter into controversy with man, he would not be able to give him information on one of a thousand subjects that might be brought into discussion. Fear would awe him; his finite and fallible mind would utterly fail before the infinite and infallible Jehovah. To discuss or question God's dealings would therefore be mere presumption. P.]

Orion.—Aben Ezra concludes it to be Antares, a star in the constellation Scorpio. Pleiades, a cluster of stars in the constellation Taurus. Of these some additional remarks will be required on ch. 38. 31. C.]

Ver. 14. [Job's conception of the nature and attributes of God is clear and full. He was totally free from false and imperfect views which we discover even in the most distinguished of heathen philosophers. Here God is represented as a Spirit of infinite wisdom, power, and justice. All things are admitted to be subject to his direct control. The universe which he created he governs. P.]

Ver. 22. [He afflicts and cuts off both good and evil men, therefore outward calamities are no certain indications, as you suppose, of the sufferer's profligacy and of God's displeasure. C.]

Ver. 23. [If the scourge (the wicked oppressor) slay suddenly, the innocent will also be allowed to perish through false witness and unjust judgment, and thus come to the same end as the wicked. C.]

Ver. 24. [Covereth the faces of the judges. Gives up not merely the innocent to trial and condemnation, but righteous judges to have their faces covered; that is, to be themselves tried and condemned for their righteous administration of the law. See Es. 7. 8. C.]

Ver. 26. [Job gathers images of swiftness from earth (the posts), from water (the light ships of reed or papyrus, such as float swiftly on the Nile), and from the air (the eagle), to describe the swiftness of his afflictions.

both God and man, and brings them together so as to make an atonement. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—O the infinite goodness of God! And what is man, so mean, so sinful, that he should be mindful of him! How incapable of advancing a justifying righteousness before him! Dreadful is the case of those devils and men who harden themselves against him. His excellencies are plainly marked in his works of creation and providence. Happy are they whose God is JEHOVAH! and inexpressibly miserable his most powerful and proud opposers! Incontestable goodness he often afflicts the righteous and prospers the wicked. And it is hard to complain much of our troubles without mingling somewhat reproachful to God. Let therefore the thoughts of my own meanness, sinfulness, and mortality keep my mind low and silent before him. It is his mercy, not my merits, that must be my only plea. Conceit of my sinless perfection, and of the worth of my righteousness, will but manifest my ignorance of the spirituality of his law and of my own corruption. Let me always stand in awe of him and the power of his wrath. Let me tenderly pity such as are wounded in spirit, and earnestly pray for them, as they can sometimes scarcely pray for themselves. Let me always entertain kind and honourable thoughts of God; as hard thoughts of him are inlets to much sin and sorrow. But above all, let me bless him that Jesus Christ is the Mediator between himself and me, and that my soul is not under extreme anguish and disquiet. And while I walk in the light of the Lord, let me rejoice therein, but rejoice with trembling. Who knows what change a night or a day may bring forth!

CHAPTER X. My soul bursts asunder with weariness of being detained in the cords of natural life. I will therefore permit my complaints to vent themselves freely, be the issue what it will. I will speak fervently in the bitter anguish of my soul. 2. I will say to God, Do not condemn and punish me as a wicked man, but cause me to know for what sin or reason I am so peculiarly afflicted. 3. Is it either pleasant, profitable, or honourable to thee, or is it just and equal, that thou shouldst spoil me of all I had, and thus load me with tormenting troubles: or that with an enraged mind thou shouldst condemn the work of frame: and wilt thou, as a raging lion, utterly tear me asunder and swallow me up? 9. Remember that thou, as my Potter, hast formed me out of the clay; and wilt thou, in this sudden and fearful manner, so quickly reduce me to dust by death? 10. Didst thou not, in the womb, purify my substance as milk, and curdle and compact the liquid matter of which my body was framed? 11. Didst thou not cover my inward parts with skin and flesh, and curiously fence and weave me together with bones and sinews? 12. Didst thou not grant me the entrance and continuance of life? And hath not thy providential care and kindness preserved me from dangers and death? 13. And, notwithstanding, hadst thou a secret purpose thus to afflict me?—I find, by experience, that it was then determined with thee, 14. That if I should sin, thou wouldst watch over me to punish me, without the least patience, pardon, or pity. 15. That if I should be wicked, fearful judgments should fall upon me; and though I should live holy and innocent, I should nevertheless be oppressed with trouble. I am full of confusion and shame on account of my uncommon circumstances; therefore look with pity on my inexpressible misery. 16. Shall my trouble still increase and exalt itself over me? Wilt thou follow me close with plagues, as a fierce lion hunteth his prey? Wilt thou, by repeated strokes of judgment, set me up as a distinguished spectacle of thy marvellous power and wrath to all around me? 17. Wilt thou bring fresh plagues upon me as witnesses of thy continued displeasure? Wilt thou still afflict me more and more? Shall nothing but diverse forms and multitudes of trouble assault me? 18. Why then didst thou bring me out of the womb at all? Why did I not die in the womb, without ever being seen on this wretched earth? 19. Or die in the birth, that I might have been carried from the womb to the grave? 20. Shall not the momentary duration of my life quickly cease? Shall I not then be allowed a short reprieve from trouble, 21, 22. Before I go to the dark region of the grave, where there is no orderly succession of day and night, summer and winter, labour and rest, but one perpetual night of gross darkness?

Ver. 2. ['Do not condemn me' thus to suffer under thine own hand, and then under the unjust accusations

Zophar sharply reproveth Job.

JOB XI.

God's counsels are unsearchable.

17 Thou renewest thy <sup>1</sup>witnesses<sup>4</sup> against me, and increasest thine indignation upon me; changes<sup>9</sup> and war<sup>5</sup> are against me.

18 Wherefore<sup>1</sup> then hast thou brought me forth out of the womb? Oh that I had given up the ghost, and no eye had seen me!

19 I should have been as though I had not been; I should have been carried from the womb to the grave.

body, it supplies the necessary repairs or increase to bone, muscle, and every other part of the frame. C.]

Ver. 11. [The whole process of the growth of the human body is here described by a few graphic touches, which show an extent of anatomical and physiological knowledge that may well surprise the thoughtful student. The last clause is particularly striking:—'Thou hast woven me, intertwined me about with bones and sinews.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—To be weary of life before God sends us our discharge, is to be unfaithful to the post which he hath given us to maintain. In suffering times we should inquire into their cause that we may answer their end; and chiefly plead for the removal of our sin and of the condemnation on account of it. But those who are awed by the majesty of God often attempt easing their mind in sinful resentments. And under extraordinary troubles it is hard to forbear impeaching the goodness or equity of God by sinful murmurings. The most humble prayers are often mingled with the most peevish and proud expostulations. Neither the forts short, death and its darkness near, let us give ourselves unto prayer. Every trouble is a call from God; and every moment of reprieve from death is an opportunity to prepare for it.

CHAPTER XI. Then Zophar the Naamathite replied, 2. Dost thou think to stop our mouths with a multitude of words, or by thy talkativeness to persuade us thou art innocent? 3. Must no one confute thy false allegations concerning thine own innocence or God's dispensations of providence? And when thou hast so insolently scoffed at God and thy friends, must none expose thee to shame, by pointing forth thy wickedness? 4. Wilt thou dare pretend to God himself that thou art quite pure and unspotted in thy principles and practice? 5. Truly my earnest wish is that he would fully and freely debate the cause with thee, and confute thy mistakes; 6. And that he would show thee the hidden methods of his providence, and reasons of his wise counsels, which infinitely transcend thy conceptions, and which thou art too ignorant to that men overlook. 12. Let then the dull and self-conceited pretender to knowledge, who just now spoke, be endued with solid wisdom; and let him who appears as rude and blockish as an ass be formed into a man of understanding. 13. If thou art truly wise, forbear disputing; and in the exercise of faith and hearty repentance, apply thyself to humble supplication. 14. Reform thyself and family from whatever wickedness thou hast indulged. 15. Thus shalt thou be quickly delivered from thy loathsome disease and lamentable condition, and be firmly established in holiness and happiness. 16. The greatness of thy prosperity shall make thee forget all thy present trouble as if it had never been. 17. The remainder of thy life shall be filled up with the most glorious and ever-increasing felicity. Thy present labour, under confounding trouble, shall issue in a fresh, clear, and pleasant morning of prosperity. 18. Thy mind shall be quiet and free from terrors, in the well-grounded confidence of God's favour and protection.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Job maintaineth himself against his friends that reprove him.
13 He acknowledgeth the general doctrine of God's omnipotency.

AND Job answered and said,
2 No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you.

3 But I have understanding<sup>1</sup> as well as you; I am not inferior to you:<sup>2</sup> yea, who knoweth not such things as these?<sup>3</sup>

4 I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth upon God, and he answereth him:<sup>4</sup> the just upright man is laughed to scorn.

5 He that is ready to slip with his feet is as a lamp despised in the thought of him that is at ease.

6 The tabernacles of robbers prosper, and they that provoke God are secure; into whose hand God bringeth abundantly.

7 But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee:

8 Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee; and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.

9 Who knoweth not in all these that the hand of the LORD hath wrought this?<sup>5</sup>

10 In whose hand is the soul<sup>m</sup> of every living thing, and the breath of all mankind.<sup>6</sup>

11 Doth not the ear try words; and the mouth<sup>n</sup> taste his meat?

12 With the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days understanding.

8 All the creatures of God manifest design, and hence Job infers there must be a designer. No one is so foolish as to conclude that a complicated machine was ever made by chance; and when it is seen performing its work with more than the precision of rationality, the conclusion is inevitable, that it was designed for that end. But the body of a beast, a fowl, or a fish is a far more curious and more complicated machine, and answers hundreds of purposes that no work of man could accomplish; the conclusion is again inevitable, that the several parts of the creature were designed for their several functions.—C.

13 With him is wisdom and strength, he hath counsel and understanding.

14 Behold, he breaketh down, and it cannot be built again; he shutteth up<sup>1</sup> a man, and there can be no opening.

15 Behold, he withholdeth the waters, and they dry up; also he sendeth them out, and they overturn the earth.

16 With him is strength and wisdom; the deceived and the deceiver are his.

17 He leadeth counsellors away spoiled, and maketh the judges fools.

18 He looseth the bond of kings,<sup>2</sup> and girdeth their loins with a girdle.

19 He leadeth princes away spoiled, and overthroweth the mighty.

20 He removeth way the speech of the trusty,<sup>3</sup> and taketh away the understanding of the aged.

21 He poureth contempt upon princes, and weakeneth the strength of the mighty.<sup>4</sup>

22 He discovereth deep things out of darkness, and bringeth out to light the shadow of death.<sup>5</sup>

23 He increaseth the nations, and destroyeth them: he enargeth the nations, and straiteneth them again.

24 He taketh away the heart of the chief of the people of the earth, and causeth them to wander in a wilderness where there is no way.

25 They grope in the dark without light, and cruel to deal harshly with them whose spirits the Lord has wounded. Harsh censures readily exceed the bounds of truth. Such as are forward in giving the lie to others are ordinarily too guilty of falsehood themselves; and none are more forward in making their appeals to God than they whose cause is bad. How little we know of God's unbounded excellencies, or of the mysteries of his wisdom and will! men often talk well concerning them to serve a bad purpose. But surely it is very unreasonable to complain under troubles, when we have not only a God of deep counsels and unsearchable perfections to deal with; but, in providence, have a mixture of undeserved mercy in the most severe afflictions we meet with. Men often proudly imagine they know much when they are amazingly ignorant; and the more ignorant they are, so are they the more unsettled and ungovernable. But in trouble there is need of a thorough reformation of ourselves and families. Yea, to have our nature changed, our heart lifted up to God in holy desires and self-dedication, and our practice rectified. And the most holy confidence towards God; holy composure in our own mind; comfortable reflection on troubles; and joyful expectation of peace, joy, and honour, attend upon sincere and gospel repentance. If God establish us we shall not fail; nor need we fear what all the powers of hell and earth can do against us. Though we may for a little suffer an eclipse, we shall at last, without spot, shine forth in the kingdom of our Father. If the anchor of

has been the common lot of upright men to be made the butts of derision by their wicked neighbours. 5. The best of men, when reduced to the point of perishing, are generally contemned and hissed at by those who wallow in worldly ease and affluence. 6. But it is certain that the most wicked and mischievous persons often prosper remarkably in this world. 7, 8. The beasts and fowls which they live upon, or are served by, can teach you pretenders to wisdom this: the earth, that affords them her plentiful and delicious fruits; and the fishes of the sea, which gratify their appetites, plainly manifest this. 9, 10. And even the most stupid of mankind must know that this is ordered by the providence of God, who is the Creator, Preserver, and Governor of both animals and men. 11, 12. Cannot our mind distinguish truth from falsehood as exactly as the palate can do sweet from bitter? And the older we grow the more wise we ought to become. 13. Much more with the eternal God is there wisdom to know all, and strength to do everything. He never mistakes in his conceptions, nor miscarries in his purposes. 14. Behold, he destroys cities, families, persons, and things; and none can restore them. He shuts up men in prisons or troubles, and none can bring them out. 15. At one time he withholds rain, or restrains the springs, and the waters dry up. Anon he sends forth the rains and fountains with unbridled liberty, and the torrents of water overturn the strongest banks. 16. Nor is his wisdom inferior to his power. Of this providence; and advances such as were poor, obscure, condemned, or imprisoned, to liberty and glory, to honour and wealth. 23. At his pleasure he increases nations in number, power, wealth, and honour; and anon diminishes them by famine, war, and pestilence. He enlarges their boundaries, and anon shuts them up into corners. 24. Princes, magistrates, and others, he deprives of courage and wisdom; and throws them into such confusion that they know not which way to turn themselves. 25. Without either sense or success, they seek for ways to help themselves and their people out of trouble; but by his providential influence they are quite uncertain in their counsels, and doubtful what course to take.

Ver. 2. [Wisdom shall die with you. Were this a mere irony, as many interpreters assume, then would not Job immediately claim equal wisdom for himself (ver. 3), but plead comparative ignorance, to make the irony effective. But irony is not a figure for deep and poignant affliction. The phrase is not therefore irony, but a simple acknowledgment that his learned friends were wise, and would be accompanied with wisdom to the grave. C.]

Ver. 5. [Ready to slip—to fall through the exhaustion of losses and weight of troubles. A lamp despised—a lamp that is dying out, whose former light is ungratefully forgotten. C.]

Ver. 6. [The tabernacles of robbers prosper. Of this Job reproveth his friends, and he maketh them to stagger<sup>6</sup> like a drunken man.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Job reproveth his friends of false reasoning and partiality. 14 He professeth his confidence in God: 20 and entreatheth to know his own sins, and God's purpose in afflicting him.

LO, mine<sup>a</sup> eye hath seen<sup>b</sup> all this,<sup>1</sup> mine ear hath heard and understood it.

2 What<sup>b</sup> ye know, the same do I know also: I am not inferior unto you.

3 Surely I would speak to the Almighty, and I desire to reason with God.<sup>2</sup>

4 But ye are<sup>c</sup> forgers of lies,<sup>3</sup> ye are all physicians of no value.

5 O that ye would altogether hold your peace, and it should be your wisdom.

6 Hear<sup>d</sup> now my reasoning, and hearken to the pleadings of my lips.

7 Will<sup>g</sup> ye speak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully<sup>h</sup> for him?

8 Will ye accept his person?<sup>5</sup> will ye contend for God?

9 Is it good that he should search you out? or as one man mocketh another, do ye so mock him?<sup>6</sup>

10 He will surely reprove you, if ye do secretly accept persons.

11 Shall not his excellency make you afraid? and his dread fall upon you?

12 Your remembrances are like unto ashes,<sup>7</sup> your bodies to bodies of clay.

27 Thou puttest my feet also in the stocks, reproaches. Mankind are rarely able to give things of importance a fair trial. Those who are fast running to hell often get large portions of earthly things, even the most delicate, in their way to it. But their abuse of God's creatures in this world shall witness against them, and will but increase their torments in the next. The most instructive lessons concerning God are afforded us in the volumes of creation and providence. But how mad and criminal is it to attempt contending with him who hath all possible excellence in possession, and doth according to his will in the armies of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth! No king so high but he can bring down; no politician so crafty or eloquent, but he can infatuate; no plot so well laid, but he can frustrate; no nation so mighty, but he can destroy with his nod; no general so brave, but he can intimidate. Be thou wise, my soul, to observe these things; so shalt thou understand the loving-kindness of the Lord.

CHAPTER XIII. Behold, all these things I know from my own experience and observation, or have learned from others; whereby you may see that I need none of your instructions on these points. 3. It is with God himself that I wish to debate my own integrity, and to answer his objections against it; 4. For ye are all forgers of false doctrines and accusations against me; you unskillfully and unfaithfully prescribe bad remedies for my affliction, and misapply good ones. 5, 6. It would be more agreeable to me, and show more wisdom in you, if ye would never cease to

11. Should not his infinite majesty, holiness, and awful justice make you afraid to deal unjustly, even on his behalf, or to speak rashly of his ways and counsels? 12. Ye yourselves are but mean worms, sprung out of the dust before him; and your boasted remonstrances on his behalf, and your bulwarks of arguments, are worthless and weak, as heaps of dirt or clay. 13. Keep silence therefore, and do not interrupt my speech; let me but speak out my mind, be the penal issue of it what it will. 14. I am so conscious of my integrity, that I must wonder why I suffer such enraging miseries, and am exposed to such evils; and I could risk all danger to obtain a thorough reasoning with God. 15. Lo! should he utterly cut me off, and not leave me the least glimmering of hope, I would, to the last gasp, maintain mine integrity. 16. Nay, I am confident that he himself, with whom no hypocrite dare lodge his appeal, will in due time vindicate me, preserve me in or deliver me from trouble; and save me with an everlasting salvation. 17, 18. Hear me then with care and attention: I have formed a process against myself, and digested what I have to say for myself; and I know that, in the issue, I shall be cleared from every charge of hypocrisy, and manifested a righteous person. 19. What impartial person dare charge me with hypocrisy, or can prove his point? If he could, I should be silent, die with shame, and be strangled with grief. But when it is otherwise, it is death to me to neglect my own just vindication. 20-22. Do thou afflicting me with the most tormenting troubles, bringest to my mind, and punishest me for, the crimes which were committed before I well knew what I did. 27. Thy fearful judgments compass me in so close and tormenting a manner that I cannot escape. They follow me at the very heels; the tokens of thy wrath are engraven on the very soles of my feet. 28. And under these my frail carcass gradually rots into death.

Ver. 1. [This is not in the original, and the sense would be better expressed by its omission: 'Lo, mine eye hath seen all,' i.e. all that you have seen. My knowledge is as extensive as yours, consequently my judgments and views are deserving of as much credit as yours. P.]

Ver. 7. [Wickedly—wrongfully accusing me with the view of honouring him. Deceitfully—fallaciously, sophistically. C.]

Ver. 12. [Delitzsch translates as follows:—'Your memorable words are proverbs of dust, your strongholds are become strongholds of clay.' The meaning is that their proverbs have no bearing on the questions at issue, and are therefore as ashes; their 'strongholds,' or 'choice arguments,' are weak and worthless as ramparts of clay. P.]

Ver. 14. [Job may literally have taken his 'flesh in his teeth' to alleviate some torturing pain, as in the mercy of God pressure sometimes affords relief. Put my life in my hand—freely offering it back to the Giver, hoping and

CHAP. XIV.

1 This chapter should begin with the last verse of the preceding. 'And he, as a rotten thing, consumeth as a garment that is moth-eaten. Man that is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble.' A melancholy history, but needful to admonish youth, thoughtless of death and of eternity, and to shake that confidence in health, and humble that pride of life, which betray so many to forget God.

11 As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up;

12 So man <sup>i</sup>lieth down, and riseth not: <sup>j</sup>till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their <sup>k</sup>sleep.<sup>9</sup>

13 Oh that thou wouldest <sup>l</sup>hide me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me secret, until thy wrath be past; that thou wouldest <sup>m</sup>appoint me a set time, and remember me!

14 If a man die, <sup>n</sup>shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time<sup>1</sup> will I wait till my <sup>o</sup>change come.

15 Thou shalt <sup>p</sup>call, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands.

16 For now <sup>q</sup>thou numberest my steps: dost thou not watch over my sin?

17 My transgression is <sup>r</sup>sealed up in a bag, and thou sewest up mine iniquity.

18 And surely the mountain falling cometh to nought,<sup>2</sup> and the rock is removed out of his place.

20 Thou <sup>u</sup>prevailest for ever against him, and he passeth: thou <sup>v</sup>changest his countenance, and sendest him away.

21 His sons come to honour, and he <sup>w</sup>knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

22 But his <sup>x</sup>flesh upon him shall have pain, and <sup>y</sup>his soul within him shall mourn.

in love to me, call me up from the grave, and I will gladly obey. 16. But now thou wrathfully observest all the steps of my life, and, as it were, greedily markest the smallest trips of my conduct in order to punish them. 17. The least of my sins of infirmity is as carefully preserved in thy remembrance against me as if it were a precious treasure; and thou huntest after forged calumnies to add to my sin and punish me for it. 18.

19. But there is no more hope of men's recovery from death, or of me from this calamity, than that fallen mountains should raise themselves up, or removed rocks resume their place, or worn stones should grow again; or that which is carried away by a flood should be brought back and the devastations repaired. 20. None can resist thy deadly stroke, but must pass into eternity whenever thou requirest. Thou wrathfully changest his countenance, spoilest his beauty, and expellest him as a leper from thy camp on earth. 21.

And then whatever glory, power, or honour, or what ever debasement, disgrace, or misery, his posterity meet with, he neither knows nor regards it. 22. But his body, after pains in death, shall corrupt in the grave; and his soul, imbibed in death, often removes to an eternal anguish in hell.

Ver. 4. [As water cannot by its own gravity rise higher than its fountainhead, neither can I rise higher than my sin.]

the stocks were, as we have supposed, clogs, the allusion may be to some peculiar mark upon the heel, whereby a runaway culprit might be distinguished and traced. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Hot disputants generally magnify themselves and undervalue their opponents; and too seldom do they adhere to truth with proper exactness. There is great need then to pray that the Lord would mortify our pride, and keep us from the way of lying; and so far as is for his glory, keep us out of temptation. Deliberate lying is of all things most infamous. But what insignificant physicians are all but Christ to a sin-sick or wrath-sick soul! It is singularly criminal to manage the cause of God in a wicked and deceitful manner. What men call pious frauds are with God impious cheats; and devout persecutions are but horrid profanations of his name. Strict will be the scrutiny, and severe the rebukes of God, with respect to those found guilty of these things! No good intentions, no pious pretence, will avail at his awful bar. Let us then stand in awe of his perfections. Never let us, who are so mean and mortal, dare to contemn or trample on our neighbour. Never let us dare to exhibit weak and carnal remonstrances on God's behalf. But how supporting is it under trouble to have the testimony of a good conscience! and it is relieving to get our minds vented in kindly complaints. It is glorious, in the extremity of trouble, to be strong in the faith, giving glory to God, and coming forth victorious.

when he puts on the appearance of an enemy. Let me firmly expect the performance of his promises, even when all the ways leading to it are seemingly shut up. Let me rejoice in the Lord when he hath left me nothing else; and in dying moments let me derive from him my ever-living consolation.

CHAPTER XIV. Man that is born of a poor, weak, frail woman, through whom he derives guilt, curses, corruptions, and infirmities, is of few days, and so surfeited with troubles that he needs pity rather than a violent hand to cut him off. 2. He makes a sparkling and fair show for a few days or hours, and then is cut down by an untimely death, or gradually, and without substantial happiness, passes through age into the eternal state. 3. And wilt thou, O God, debase such an insignificant creature, or to hale to thy tribunal and execute strict justice upon me! 4. How is it possible for such as are sinfully corrupted themselves to am by nature no worse than others, be so peculiarly punished? 5, 6. Since the period of every man's life is unalterably fixed by thy purpose and providence, why shouldst thou now torment, and not let me alone, till I have contentedly accomplished my appointed service, and obtained the wished-for repose?

REFLECTIONS. If human life be so short, so sinful, and so wretched; if death and an awful eternity be so near; why should any be proud? Why unconcerned about spiritual, about eternal happiness? Why not live on that gracious God who hath a feeling of our infirmities; and look and long for that rest which remaineth for the people of God! Awful and awakening, though comfortable and heart-composing, are believing views of death and of the resurrection from the dead: and happy is the thought that while my body, as precious dust, sleeps in Jesus' arms of kindly care, my soul shall retire to sit with him on his throne, and there wait till my great, my last change come! If grace has changed my heart, death hath changed its nature to me: and the hope of a glorious resurrection is enough to support me under every human trouble. Everything around admonishes me of death: and nothing can resist it when God gives it the commission. Sharp are its pains and strange is the change it makes! It separates the chiefest friends! In view of it, to render me always content, let me maintain kind thoughts of God and a deep sense of my sin. And at last let it find me weaned from this perishing world, disengaged from all but a God in Christ; and singing, O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory!

while, by pretences of respect to God, thou attemptest to cover thy impious principles and practices. 6. I need produce no evidence of thy impiety; thy own words sufficiently manifest and prove it. 7. Wast thou formed before every other creature that thou pretendest to be wiser and better than other men? 8. Hast thou been acquainted with the most secret counsels and mysteries of God that thou shouldst engross all wisdom to thyself? 9. What secrets hast thou learned that we do not fully comprehend? 10. Among us, and on our side in this debate, we have the most aged and experienced men. 11. Darest thou to condemn the divine admonitions and comforting promises which we have suggested, and undervalue our kind and consoling discourses, as if thou knewest some better way of comfort? 12. Why do thy inward lusts thus violently transport thee into such pride, fury, and scornful contempt. 13. That thou shouldst dare to rage against the Most High, and insolently arraign the equity of his providence? 14. Can the corrupted child of a sinful parent be innocent or righteous before an infinitely holy God? 15. 16. When the loftiest angels are not without their mutability and comparative imperfections, how inexpressibly and universally abominable must the man be who, with greediness and delight, commits the most criminal impieties? 17-19. Listen carefully while I clearly declare and demonstrate unto thee what I myself have observed, and which the wisest, most powerful, and wealthy princes of former ages have observed, professed, or believed, and informed their children of. 20. The wicked tyrant is never free from inward torment; he lives in continual dread of disasters, death, and damnation, never knowing how soon they may overtake him. 21. Consciousness of guilt keeps him in perpetual terror of approaching mischiefs. And never is the destroyer more ready to attack him than when he is in the height of his prosperity. 22. In trouble he despairs of deliverance: in the night he rich, powerful, and successful, his only care is to pamper himself, and wallow in ease and luxury; 28. Dwelling in cities and stately houses, from whence he had driven, or murdered, the righteous proprietors; and which, by the curse of God, for his sake shall be quickly reduced to heaps of ruins, and he be obliged to shift for himself in the most miserable manner. 29. The riches and glory which he hath gotten by violence and oppression shall neither be lasting, complete, nor firmly rooted. 30. Having once entered into terrible and confounding troubles he shall never get out of them. The lightning, like flames of God's wrath, shall destroy his flourishing family and substance; and he himself shall be ruined and driven to hell by the threatened judgments of God, amidst his proud boasting. 31. Let therefore no one who is seduced to wicked or carnal security, trust in the uncertain profits, pleasures, or honours of this world, for vexations, losses, disappointments, and troubles shall be all he will get by them. 32, 33. These shall come upon him far sooner than he thinks. His riches, hopes, or children shall scarcely make their appearance, when, blasted by the justice of God, they shall all be reduced to ruin. 34. Thus suddenly and fearfully shall the stock and numerous family of hypocrites be utterly destroyed; and some terrible judgment of God shall consume the house built up by or stored with ill-gotten goods. 35. With no small pains such wicked men plot and practise mischief against others; but in the issue it usually brings ruin upon themselves.

Ver. 10. [The argument from experience is a good one; that from mere age is nothing. To give experience weight, there must be, (1) Capacity to observe; (2) Right disposition of heart towards God and man; (3) Light of truth, light of the Spirit (1 Jn. 5. 6) to guide; (4) Memory accurately to recollect, 1 Co. 15. 21; and (5) Sound judgment to compare and decide, 2 Tim.

23 He 'wandereth abroad for bread, saying, Where is it? he 'knoweth that the day of darkness is ready at his hand.

24 Trouble<sup>a</sup> and anguish shall make him afraid; they shall prevail against him, as a king ready to the battle.

desolate his cities, and scatters his ill-gotten wealth. The verification of which may be specially seen in the ruined cities of Edom, where we believe Job dwelt; the ruins, the very tombs of which are now inhabited by such a wretched race—wretched in poverty and wickedness—as Job here describes. C.—It would appear that two distinct classes of sin are here traced, both of which eventually entail punishment:—1. Arrogant opposition to God, described in ver. 25–27. Rebellion, insolence, defiance, and carnal security are the developments of this arrogance. 2. Callous and proud contentment on the ruins of the prosperity of other men, as set forth in ver. 28. Here the powerful sinner is represented as taking possession, with haughty carelessness, of those cities and houses which had been desolated by the judgment of Heaven; and which were intended to remain as perpetual monuments of God's wrath. P.]

Ver. 33. [The olive-tree only bears fruit fully every second year. But it blossoms with equal luxuriance every year. In those years in which it does not bear the blossoms fall off; no berries are formed. How graphic, therefore, is the language of this verse! P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Men too often hold fast the false principles which they have once imbibed: and it is much easier to treat an adversary with contempt than to answer him with reason. Disputants often turn revilers rather than reasoners; and charge their opponents with things which they utterly abhor. And none are more ready to indulge pride and self-conceit in themselves than those who rage against it in their neighbours! Old men often rather boast of their knowledge and wisdom than possess it. But surely it is a humbling sight to see men so corrupt in nature, so abominable in practice; and amazing that God should love any such, and deliver them from the pit of corruption! In the study of true knowledge the experience and observation of others, as well as our own, are an excellent help. But how unbounded is the patience of God that can bear with wicked monsters so long! Yet little external happiness have they even in this world. Their seemingly purest prosperity is mingled with gall and wormwood. But if they are miserable.

and restrain my lips from uttering a single sentence of consolation;—though I hope I should rather attempt to encourage, strengthen, and comfort you. 6. But now, indeed, whether I boldly defend my innocence and pour forth my complaints, or whether I forbear, my frightful sores and griefs are nothing eased. 7. This terrible trouble has quite tired me out, and made my life a burden to me. Thou, O God, hast, with thy thunderbolts and fiery tempest, utterly destroyed my large family and all that pertained to me. 8. While others murder my character and torment my spirit, thou, by plagues and griefs, hast so wasted and disfigured my body that it testifies my great affliction, and is employed against me as a witness of my great wickedness. 9. Meanwhile my pretended friends, who indeed implacably hate me, tear my reputation and torment my spirit with their speeches. They reproach me in the most spiteful and outrageous manner; and while their eyes sparkle with anger, they cruelly set themselves to spy out every, even the least, occasion to calumniate me. 10. They behave like wild beasts, gaping to devour or deride me; they treat me with the most cruel and abusive scorn and contempt; they have met together to satisfy their infernal malice in tormenting me. 11. And God hath quite abandoned me, chained me up, and dreadfully cast me down into the hands of these and other wicked men, to be abused by them as they please. 12. Great was my former happiness and prosperity; but now God has trodden and bruised me in the press of his wrath, and made me, as it were, to boil over with dregs of trouble and desperate complaints. In the most tormenting manner he has ruined my soul, body, my children, and all that I had: he has set me up as a distinguished butt of his fearful indignation. 13. Devils, wicked men, calamities and diseases, as the instruments of his judgment, compass me round about. Without mercy he torments me with the most exquisite pains in my body, anguish of mind, and terrors of conscience. 14. As a battering-ram he breaks through me with breach upon breach, still adding one dreadful plague to another: he furiously rushes upon me with the almighty force of his wrath, which I

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Job reproveth his friends of inhumanity toward him. 7 He showeth the pitifulness of his case. 17 He maintaineth his innocence.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I have heard many such things; 'miserable comforters are ye all.

3 Shall 'vain words have an end? or what emboldeneth thee that thou answerest?

4 I also 'could speak as ye do: if your soul were in my soul's stead, I could heap up words against you, and 'shake mine head at you.

what need these imprecations when even now the all-seeing God, who dwells in the lofty regions of heaven, is the ear and the eye witness of my virtue and true piety! 20. My companions mock and scoff at me as a hypocrite; but my soul, with floods of tears, earnestly appeals to God and begs, 21. That he would thoroughly and clearly examine my cause, and give a decision between me and my reproaching friends; 22. Since, if it be not done quickly, my troubles will soon make an end of me, and then it will be too late.

Ver. 4. [It is worthy of remark that this signal of contempt was used against our Lord upon the cross, Mat. 27.39; Mar. 15.39. But like all other visible signs of thought or feeling, it may have various significations, but usually those of doubt, sorrow, dissatisfaction, or scorn. C.—Job's anger is now kindled by the reproaches and false accusations of his 'vexatious comforters.' He shows his anger in his bitter and passionate retort. His anger not only leads him to sinful excess in replying to his assailants, but even to assume something like a tone of irreverence toward God. P.]

Ver. 7. [Turning from his accusers Job here directs his words to God, whom he regards as the cause of all his sufferings. It is now painful to hear Job's repinings and complaints. P.]

Ver. 15. [Horn. The horn of an animal is often both its defence and ornament. Hence the horn has been employed in Scripture as the emblem of power and glory, De. 33.17; Ps. 132.17. Job's losses, though great, had still left him the possession of his lands; but he had laid down all his emblems of authority, and humbled himself in the dust. C.]

Ver. 18. [These are words of deep pathos and great power. Yet they show that Job was not yet conscious of his true state as a sinner. He dares even to appeal to Heaven for a testimony of his innocence, and consequently, to some extent, of the injustice dealt out to him. His faith, however, has not yet deserted him. For life he has no hope, but he looks beyond it. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Often much is said, and yet nothing to the purpose: and miserable comforters to a

MILL ON JERUSALEM ROAD, DAMASCUS—THE TRADING POINT OF THE HAURAN WHERE JOB LIVED. [Job xvi:1.]—The traditions of the Arabs which make the Hauran in the neighborhood of Damascus, the home of Job, are not to be despised. In no part of the world have the native races undergone so little change as in this region. To this very day the descendants of the contemporaries of Job, and perhaps his own, live on the same plains once occupied by their ancestors. This gives to the tradition that fixed the home of Job in the Hauran a very different value from what it would have in a country where the people were continually changing. Chrysostom, speaking of pilgrimages in his day, said: "Many pilgrims come from the ends of the earth to Arabia in order to seek for the dung hill on which Job lay, and with rapture to kiss the ground where he suffered." We give as illustrating this traditional history concerning the land of Uz a picture of the mill on the Jerusalem Road at Damascus.

Job sheweth the pitifulness of his case.

He appealeth from men to God.

5 But I would strengthen you with my mouth, and the moving of my lips should assuage<sup>1</sup> your grief.

6 Though I speak, my grief is not assuaged; and though I forbear, what am I eased?<sup>2</sup>

7 But now he hath made me weary: thou hast made desolate all my company.<sup>3</sup>

8 And thou hast filled me with wrinkles, which is a witness against me: and my leanness rising up in me beareth witness to my face.

9 He teareth me in his wrath who hateth me: he gnasheth upon me with his teeth; mine enemy sharpeneth his eyes upon me.

10 They have gaped upon me with their mouth; they have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully, they have gathered themselves together against me.

11 God hath delivered me<sup>5</sup> to the ungodly, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked.

12 I was at ease, but he hath broken me asunder: he hath also taken me by my neck, and shaken me to pieces, and set me up for his mark.

13 His archers compass me round about; he cleaveth my reins asunder, and doth not spare: he poureth out my gall<sup>6</sup> upon the ground.

14 He breaketh me with breach upon breach; he runneth upon me like a giant.

15 I have sewed sackcloth upon my skin, and defiled my horn in the dust.

16 My face is foul with weeping, and on my eyelids is the shadow of death;

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Job appealeth from men to God. 6 The unmerciful dealing of men with the afflicted may astonish, but not discourage the righteous. 11 His hope is no longer in life, but in death.

MY breath is corrupt,<sup>1</sup> my days are extinct, the<sup>a</sup> graves are ready for me.

2 Are there not mockers with me? and doth not mine eye continue<sup>2</sup> in their provocation?<sup>3</sup>

3 Lay down now, put me in a surety with thee; who is he that will strike hands with me?

4 For thou hast hid<sup>4</sup> thine heart from understanding, therefore shalt thou not exalt them.

5 He that speaketh flattery to his friends, even the eyes of his children shall fail.

6 He hath made me also a by-word of the people; and aforetime<sup>5</sup> I was as a tabret.

7 Mine eye also is dim by reason of sorrow, and all my members<sup>6</sup> are as a shadow.

8 Upright men shall be astonished at this, and the innocent shall stir up himself against the hypocrite

9 The righteous also shall hold on his way;

I became as one in whose face they spit; that is, an utter abomination. The parallelism shows that this is the true meaning of the Hebrew word tophet. P.]

Ver 13. [Job gives way to despair. His comforters had become tormentors. They had shown utter ignorance of his state, his sufferings, and his wants; and now he resigns himself to his fate:—'If I hope, it is for the grave as my house; in darkness I make my bed.' P.]

Ver 16 [Job's only hope of relief is in death. He believes his disease to be incurable; his life is miserable; he longs for its close; and in the grave alone does he see rest from trial and sorrow. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are those who have spiritual breath which cannot corrupt; life that can never fail; who have their portion in eternal blessedness, and are ready for their grave! If cruel friends exasperate my spirit and drive sleep from mine eyes, let Jesus, as my surety and redeemer, be the ground of all my hope and the source of all my joys. God can easily infatuate the wisest when they abuse his gifts. And it is mad to pursue honour and advancements by sinful methods, particularly in employing the wisdom which he has given against his cause and interest. Vain is the inconstant applause of men. While

God to appeal to as their judge and friend. Their tears shall be put into his bottle and marked in his book; and death, but destitute of its sting, shall soon set the prisoners free into a glorious eternity.

CHAPTER XVII. My spirit is maimed, broken, and confounded with trouble; and my breath stinks, as in dying persons: the days of my life are thunderstruck, shortened, and debased: nothing but the grave remains for me. 2. O God, do not my friends bitterly mock and deride me as a wicked hypocrite? And does not my mind so dwell and pore on their proud, insolent, and exasperating speeches that I cannot sleep nor mine eyes refrain from tears? 3. Come then, give me undoubted assurance that thou wilt take my cause in hand and do me justice; or give me an impartial man like myself, who in thy stead shall debate the matter with me. 4. For as for these my friends, thou hast withheld from them a common capacity to understand thy providential dispensations, therefore they can never be honoured to judge my plea. 5. He who flatters friends in their wickedness because of their prosperity, or who manifestly makes a prey of them, his posterity shall pine away in disappointment and misery. 6. Alas! both God and my friends now combine to expose me to the common contempt of the people, though lately I was their darling and the matter of their conversation.

Whatever hopes you give me of recovering my wonted prosperity, I find I am a dying man, and all my designs, even the most fixed and dear, are at an end. 12. My tormenting pains and anxious thoughts keep me awake through the whole night; or if I get any moments of ease, it is but little and soon over. 13. I expect, I wait for nothing now but an entrance into the state of the dead; and I have prepared for and expect speedily to lie down in the grave. 14. In the form of my trouble, and in the exercise of my mind, I have contracted a relation to and familiarity with death, corruption, and worms. 15. The future prosperity with which you attempt to flatter me, and the temporal happiness you would have me expect, are a mere imagination. 16. These hopes shall quickly appear buried in the grave along with myself.

Ver. 1. [The graves are ready for me. The sepulchres of Edom are generally in extensive chambers, scooped out in the rocks. In these are numerous niches or shelves ready to receive the dead bodies. C.]

Ver. 3. ['Lay down now, be bondsman (or surety) for me with thyself; who else should furnish surety to me?'] This is a very remarkable passage. God is conceived of by Job in a double capacity; as a judge, who tries and condemns Job for his sins, and as a bondsman or surety, who takes the place of the guilty and he that hath 'clean hands <sup>m</sup>shall be stronger and stronger.

13 If I <sup>r</sup>wait, the <sup>r</sup>grave <sup>is</sup> mine house: I have made my bed in the darkness.

15 And where <sup>is</sup> now my <sup>r</sup>hope? as for my hope, who shall see it?

5 Yea, <sup>3</sup> the <sup>d</sup> light of the wicked shall be put out, and the spark of his fire shall not shine.

6 The <sup>r</sup>light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and his candle <sup>4</sup> shall be put out with him.

7 The <sup>r</sup>steps of his strength shall be straitened, and his <sup>r</sup>own counsel shall cast him down.

8 For <sup>h</sup>he is cast into a net by his own feet, and he walketh upon a snare. <sup>5</sup>

9 The <sup>r</sup>gin shall take <sup>him</sup> by the heel, and <sup>the</sup> robber <sup>6</sup> shall prevail against him.

10 The snare <sup>is</sup> laid <sup>7</sup> for him in the ground, and a trap for him in the way.

14 His <sup>r</sup>confidence shall be rooted out of his tabernacle, and it shall bring him to the king of terrors.

really intends for them. Happy are they who rest in Christ here—they shall rest in death and in heaven for ever and ever!

CHAPTER XVIII. In no small heat of spirit Bildad replied, <sup>2</sup> How long wilt thou cast forth such confused, double-meaning, and unintelligible words, as if you wanted to entrap us? Declare plainly what you intend, and after that we shall deliver our minds with the utmost clearness, freedom, and boldness. <sup>3</sup> For to what purpose is it to talk with one who looks upon us as a company of dull beasts, into whom nothing of wisdom can enter! <sup>4</sup> With impatient rage you tear and torment yourself. Must God, to humour thee, suspend or cease his government of the world, and leave everything to chance: or must he alter his immutable counsels or the fixed laws of his providence? <sup>5</sup> But say what thou wilt, though the wicked man may prosper for a while, all his splendour and apparent happiness shall quickly come to an end. <sup>6</sup> The wealth and honour of his family shall be turned into misery, contempt, and sorrow, together with himself. <sup>7</sup> His bold and resolute attempts to increase or maintain his prosperity shall be unsuccessful and involve him in insurmountable difficulties, and his own devices shall prove the means of his overthrow. <sup>8</sup> His own wiles and works bring him into inextricable difficulty and distress; and every step he takes in prosecution of his designs, or in the way of pleasing himself, is attended with perpetual danger and farther ensnares him. <sup>9</sup> While ruinous snares take hold of and entangle him, they who thirst for his blood, wealth, or honours shall prevail against him. <sup>10</sup> Even when he neither foresees nor fears it, he is always in danger of some sudden mischief. <sup>11</sup> Unexpected and overturning terrors exemplary judgment, like that of Sodom, shall destroy it. <sup>16</sup> His whole estate, habitation, and family shall be irrecoverably ruined. <sup>17</sup> And the very name of him shall be buried in everlasting infamy and forgetfulness. <sup>18</sup> He shall be driven from his prosperity and life into misery and death, and chased out of the world as a nuisance into eternal woe. <sup>19</sup> None of his descendants or kindred shall long survive him to keep up his remembrance. <sup>20</sup> They, on every side, who behold, and they who afterward read or hear of the fearful justice of God upon him, shall be astonished and terrified at it. <sup>21</sup> This, indeed, is a just description of the miserable condition of the wicked at last; and thus shall those who dishonour God be abased.

Ver. 4. [Bildad in the first member of the sentence addresses his friends, describing Job; in the second he addresses Job: 'Shall the earth be forsaken for thee?' shall God leave off the care of all his other works to attend to thy vain complaints, and anticipate the final judgment to gratify your sinful impatience? C.—The meaning of the passage is:—Dost thou imagine that by thy vehement conduct, by which thou art become enraged against thyself, thou canst effect any change in the established divine order of the world? It is a divine law that sufferings are the punishments of sin; thou canst no more alter this than that at thy command, or for thy sake, the earth, which is appointed to be the habitation of man, will become desolate; or that a rock will remove from its place. P.]

Ver. 10. [Delitzsch translates as follows:—'The trap holdeth his heel fast, the noose bindeth him. His snare lieth hidden in the earth; his nets upon the path.' This brings out pretty clearly the sense of the passage. P.]

Ver. 13. [First-born of death. Who or what is this?

were never intended. They even torment themselves—their pride and passion proving hurtful to both soul and body. But to what terrible judgments of God, in time, in death, and chiefly in eternity, are the wicked exposed! Short-lived and unsubstantial is their prosperity, and heavy the curse that is upon them! Being abandoned of God, Satan first ensnares and afterwards torments them. Agitated by their lusts they rush headlong into ruin; till death in all its stings and terrors devours them! Then friends, physicians, and all human supports are vain. Their glorious prosperity is quickly turned into everlasting shame and contempt.

CHAPTER XIX. Job replied, Will ye never cease tormenting my soul, and bruising me as in a mortar, with your senseless revilings! <sup>3</sup> Ye have too often wounded me with the vilest reproaches. Ye have been shamelessly obstinate in your rebukes and cruel usage of me. <sup>4</sup> If I indeed had been mistaken in my opinion or practice, I have sufficiently smarted for it in my own person and estate, and so am a fit object of pity rather than of your reproach. <sup>5</sup> If you will still insolently declaim against me, and allege my debasing calamities as a proof of my impiety, <sup>6</sup> Know that I am sensible that it is God who hath in this fearful manner cast me down from my prosperity, and compassed me about with unavoidable miseries. <sup>7</sup> And my case is the more pitiable, that while friends abuse me with reproach, God, to whom I have repeatedly committed my cause, refuses to redress my wrongs or vindicate my innocence. <sup>8</sup> Nay, his plagues so surround me on every side that I can find no way of escape: and I am so overwhelmed with perplexity that I know not whither to turn myself. <sup>9</sup> He has deprived me of all my dignity, authority, wealth, and family. <sup>10</sup>

Job complaineth of his friends' cruelty.

JOB XIX.

His pitiful condition.

it is none of his: 'brimstone shall be scattered upon his habitation.<sup>4</sup>

16 His 'roots shall be dried up beneath, and above shall his branch be cut off.

17 His 'remembrance shall perish from the earth, and he shall have no name in the street.

18 He<sup>1</sup> shall be driven from light into darkness, and chased out of the world.

19 He "shall neither have son nor nephew<sup>5</sup> among his people, nor any remaining in his dwellings.

20 They that come after him shall be 'astonied at his 'day,<sup>6</sup> as they that went before<sup>7</sup> were affrighted.<sup>8</sup>

21 Surely "such are the dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him that "knoweth not God.

CHAPTER XIX.

<sup>1</sup> Job, complaining of his friends' cruelty, sheweth there is misery enough in him to gratify it. <sup>21</sup> He craveth pity; <sup>23</sup> professeth his belief in a future resurrection; <sup>28</sup> and warneth his friends not to persecute him.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 How 'long will ye 'vex my soul, and break me in pieces with words?

3 These 'ten times have ye reproached me: ye are not ashamed that ye make yourselves strange to me.<sup>1</sup>

4 And be it indeed that I have erred, mine error remaineth 'with myself.

The very children, and ignorant people about, following the example of the rest, despise me, and treat me with the most abusive language. 19. The very men whom I had trusted with my secrets, and who had received the most distinguished tokens of my affection, abhor and hate me. 20. I am wasted with afflictions till I am little more than skin and bone; I am bruised till the teeth have fallen out of my head; and I have scarcely left me a mouth to complain. 21. O my friends, have pity upon me, when God's afflicting hand has so grievously smitten and wounded me! 22. Why do ye persecute and harass me, as if ye were an avenging God? Why, as if unsatisfied with my external calamities, do ye cruelly torment my spirit?—23. O that my protestations of uprightness, and appeals to God, were in the most legible and indelible manner registered in a book of public records, for my vindication, and for the encouragement of other upright persons under sore troubles! 24. O that they were registered in the most indelible manner in some marble rock or pillar, to continue legible to all generations! 25. For, notwithstanding these present miseries, I by faith know, and am firmly persuaded, that Jesus Christ, my Kinsman-Redeemer, liveth, having life in himself; and shall victoriously stand as the last Adam, upon the dust of the earth, in his incarnation, resurrection, and appearance to judgment. 26. And though these vermin, bred or breeding in my afflicted body, should quickly devour the whole of it, yet even in this body, when fashioned like unto his glorious body, shall I see God in my nature. 27. When I shall positors to stand for many times. This loose method of speaking seems, however, rather inconsistent with the unparalleled and necessary accuracy of Scripture, as a divine revelation. Is not the expression ten times literally true? Job now had spoken five times (ch. 3. 1; 6. 1; 9. 1; 12. 1; 16. 1), and his friends five times (ch. 4. 1; 8. 1; 11. 1; 15. 1; 18. 1), in all, ten times. C.]

Ver. 6. [Job's visitors had traced all his calamities to sins which, according to them, he had hypocritically concealed. Job, however, indignantly denies that in this respect he is guilty. He traces all his sufferings to God; he can assign no cause for them; he leaves the impression on the mind that he is hardly, if not unjustly, dealt with. Job's friends were unquestionably in error, and they were harsh and cruel; but Job himself was far from the truth. P.]

Ver. 17. [In aggravated forms of elephantiasis, the mouth and throat become ulcerated; breathing is difficult, and the breath is foul. In fact, as the disease progresses the limbs decay, and the half-putrid members emit a most offensive odour. P.]

Ver. 22. [The meaning of this reproachful question is, that Job regarded his persecutors as usurping to themselves a judicial divine authority over him. They were at best only his equals; they were not infallible; they might be mistaken; they had no right therefore to condemn him. P.]

Ver. 25. [From the depth of his affliction and despair, so far as regards earthly happiness and even life, the faith of the patriarch rises clear and triumphant, and finds utterance in these noble words:—'And I know, my Redeemer (my Lord) liveth, and I shall see God in my nature. 27. When I shall them, such as characterize the most ancient literature of the Shemitic race:—'And after my skin (after its decay—after death), thus destroyed (rent and torn by the ravages of my loathsome disease), and without my flesh (in a disembodied state, when my soul is freed from this vile body), I shall see God (I shall see him with my spirit); whom I shall behold for myself (for my good, for my vindication from the unjust and cruel accusations of those now before me), and mine eyes shall see him and no other (no accuser, no stranger, but my own redeeming God)—my reins consume within me (i.e. I languish and pine here for that glorious vision). P.—Not another—not estranged as you, my friends, nor ashamed to call me brother, He. 1. 11. C.]

Ver. 29. [There is a threat implied in this verse. God, in whom Job trusts, and who will in the end vindicate him, will prove a judge to those who now persecute him. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Hard is the trial when inward vexation and outward reproach meet together; and distressing the situation when those who ought to comfort us, again and again reproach and disquiet us; and especially when men abuse us with revilings, and God shuts out our prayer, and loads us with trouble! But when God strikes a saint, almost every person and thing is ready to second his blow; and then the sparing of his relations becomes a heavier cross than the removal of them by death. It is hard to discern God's love and endeared affection amidst many and heavy strokes of paternal wrath. But here

I entreated for the *children's sake of mine own body.<sup>6</sup>

18 Yea, *young children despised me; I arise, and they spake against me.

19 All *my inward friends<sup>7</sup> abhorred me; and they whom I loved are turned against me.

20 My *bone cleaveth to my skin and<sup>8</sup> to my flesh, and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.<sup>9</sup>

21 Have *pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched *me.

22 Why do ye *persecute me as God,<sup>1</sup> and we not satisfied with my flesh?<sup>2</sup>

23 Oh that my words were now written!<sup>3</sup> oh that they were printed in a book!<sup>4</sup>

24 That they were graven with an *iron pen and lead in the rock for ever!

25 For *I know that my *Redeemer liveth, and that he shall *stand at the latter day upon the earth:

26 And though after my skin worms destroy this *body, yet *in my flesh shall I see God:<sup>5</sup>

27 Whom I shall see *for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another;<sup>6</sup> though my reins be consumed *within me.<sup>7</sup>

28 But ye should say, Why *persecute we him, seeing the root of the matter is found in me?<sup>8</sup>

29 Be ye afraid of the sword: for wrath bringeth the punishments of the sword, *that ye may know there is a judgment.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Job sheweth that even in the judgment of man he hath reason to be grieved. 7 Sometimes the wicked do so prosper that they are tempted to despise God. 16 Sometimes their destruction is manifest. 23 The happy and unhappy are alike in death. 27 The judgment of the wicked is in another world.

BUT Job answered and said,

2 Hear<sup>a</sup> diligently my speech, and let this be your<sup>1</sup> consolations.<sup>1</sup>

3 Suffer me that I may speak; and after that I have spoken, mock on.

4 As for me, <sup>4</sup>is my complaint to man? and, if it were so, why should not my spirit be troubled?<sup>2</sup>

5 Mark me,<sup>5</sup> and be astonished, and lay your hand upon your mouth.

6 Even when I remember I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold on my flesh.

7 Wherefore<sup>h</sup> do the wicked live, become old, yea, are mighty in power?

shall be cursed to him, and quickly lost along with his unjust gain; and he shall have no comfort in anything he has. 19. Because he furiously oppressed the poor till he rendered them destitute, and violently seized houses which he built not. 20. Therefore shall he have no solid satisfaction in his own mind, but be in pain, as a travelling woman; and shall be deprived of all his desirable things. 21. He shall scarcely have wherewith to sustain himself in life, and shall have no goods left for any to look after. 22. In the very height of his prosperity he shall be terribly distressed; and even his fellows in impiety shall concur to render him miserable. 23. Whenever he shall attempt to satisfy himself in what he has, some extraordinary judgment shall of a sudden overtake him. 24. When he shall attempt to avoid one danger, another more dreadful shall overtake him; 25. And terribly shall the judgments of God torment and destroy him. Horrors of conscience shall seize upon him, as one who cannot live, and who dares not die. 26. Every kind of fearful calamities shall be reserved for him as his treasure, and shall follow him wherever he thinks to hide himself. Some awful judgment, which comes none knows how, shall consume him. His posterity and family shall, for his sake, be cursed of God, and entirely wasted and ruined. 27. God, by remarkable judgments of thunder, lightning, or the like, shall discover his notorious wickedness; and all creatures on earth shall exert themselves for his ruin. 28. His estate, which he had got by the labour of his family, shall quickly be taken from him, or destroyed, in the day when God manifests his wrath against him. 29. This is the portion and reward which God has allotted to impious and insolent sinners.

fall into the pit of destruction shall be the more dreadful. What terrible consequences have the often unthought-of sins of youth! Bitter are the issues of those sins which are reckoned sweet; and inexpressible the loss of those which are reckoned gainful. Where God's curse lies there can be no real felicity. But dreadful shall it be to the wicked when all their dreams of happiness shall be disappointed, their secret sins revealed, and the wrath of God shall take an everlasting hold of them! Let the sound of destruction—terrible destruction—everlasting destruction, that is in my ears, drive me to Jesus Christ, and the everlasting redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of my sins, according to the riches of his grace.

CHAPTER XXI. Job immediately replied, 2. Instead of pretending to comfort me, patiently and attentively hear my speech. 3. Permit me freely to declare my mind without interrupting me; and when I have finished my pertinent reasoning mock on as long as you please. 4. I have made my appeal to God; and had it been to man, I could not but be vexed to find myself thus interrupted, reproached, and abused. 5. To see in me a religious and upright man so fearfully afflicted, might overwhelm you with the most confounding astonishment at the awfully dark providence of God, and at least make you willing to hold your peace while I speak. 6. For truly, when I think on it, I am filled with the most terrifying awe of his awful judgments. 7. But if wicked men always meet with such fearful calamities as you have pretended, whence is it that many of them, for a long time, flourish in uncommon prosperity and power? 8. Nay, live to see their children and children's children.

with them in their impiety; 17. But let facts speak for themselves. How often are wicked men's shining prosperity and honour extinguished by fearful judgments and justly merited destruction? How often does God, as by lot, distribute to them entangling bonds of trouble and sorrow in his anger? 18. How often are they of a sudden fearfully carried away before the sweeping whirlwinds of his awful judgments? 19. How often are either wicked men's children or themselves rewarded with fearful punishments? 20. How often do wicked men on earth experience the distinguishing judgments and hot burning wrath of the Almighty? 21. And though their children should prosper, what pain, care, or pleasure can they have about their house and family when they are cut off by an early death? 22. Dare any of you pretend to teach God how to govern the world, and whom to prosper and whom to destroy or to prescribe rules by which he must judge men, who, even the highest, are in death but the food of worms? 23. 24. Some men, both good and bad, die in the very prime of their life, and height of their prosperity, and in a very easy manner. 25. Others die amidst torments of body and anguish of mind, without ever partaking of earthly happiness or pleasure: 26. They lie down together in the same condition in the grave, and the vermin make an equal prey of both; so that none can tell who is good or who is bad by any external events. 27. I can indeed easily foresee what you, in your reproachful speeches and imaginations, will think and say. 28. You will ask, What is become of my own once princely family and of the dwellings of my children? And if Providence hath not plainly marked us out for wicked by the fearful judgments

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Eliphaz sheweth that man's goodness profiteth not God. 5 He accuseth Job of divers sins. 21 He exhorteth him to repentance, with promises of mercy.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2 Can<sup>a</sup> a man be profitable unto God,<sup>1</sup> as he that is wise may be profitable<sup>b</sup> unto himself?

3 Is it any pleasure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous? or is it gain to him, that thou makest thy ways perfect?

4 Will he<sup>c</sup> reprove thee for fear of thee? will he enter with thee into judgment?

5 Is not thy wickedness<sup>d</sup> great? and thine iniquities infinite?

6 For<sup>e</sup> thou hast taken a pledge from thy brother for nought, and stripped the naked of their clothing:<sup>2</sup>

7 Thou<sup>f</sup> hast not given water to the weary to drink, and thou hast withheld bread from the hungry.

8 But as for the mighty man,<sup>3</sup> he<sup>g</sup> had the earth; and the honourable<sup>4</sup> man dwelt in it.<sup>5</sup>

9 Thou<sup>h</sup> hast sent widows away empty, and the arms of the fatherless have been broken.

10 Therefore<sup>i</sup> snares<sup>are</sup> round about thee, and sudden<sup>j</sup> fear troubleth thee;

11 Or<sup>k</sup> darkness, that thou canst not see; and abundance of waters cover thee.

12 Is not God in the height of heaven? and behold the height of the stars,<sup>6</sup> how high they are!

13 And thou sayest, How<sup>7</sup> doth God know? can he judge through the dark cloud?

27 Behold, I know your<sup>k</sup> thoughts, and the devices which ye wrongfully imagine against me.

28 For ye say, Where<sup>l</sup> is the<sup>m</sup> house of the prince? and where<sup>n</sup> are the dwelling-places of the wicked?<sup>3</sup>

29 Have ye not asked them that<sup>o</sup> go by the way?<sup>4</sup> and do ye not know their tokens,

32 Yet<sup>s</sup> shall he be brought to the grave,<sup>7</sup> and shall remain in the tomb.<sup>8</sup>

33 The clods of the valley shall be<sup>t</sup> sweet unto him, and every man shall draw after him, as there are innumerable before him.<sup>9</sup> future happiness? And why doth the vilest prevarication, inconsistent with the cause of God or your duty, continue to be the whole sum of your discourses?

Ver. 7. [Job here meets his accusers on their own ground. He shows them that the patent facts of the divine government do not harmonize with the principles laid down by them. According to their theory the wicked alone are judged and punished. But Job points them to the case of wicked men who, notwithstanding notorious wickedness, are yet rich, prosperous, joyous, and full of children. P.]

Ver. 19. [God layeth up his iniquity for his children. Not an unjust, but a most merciful dispensation of God; for many who disregarded themselves have been moved to conversion by seeing the evil consequences their wicked examples and principles were entailing upon their offspring. C.]

Ver. 22. [High. He ruleth those that are on high, the principalities and powers in heaven; who then on earth shall instruct him in its government? C.]

Ver. 26. [All this being true—the wicked, whether the best of men, the last judgment will make all clear and plain. What a certain fact, and often a sad stumbling-block to the godly, is the prosperity of wicked men! It often hardens them in presumptuous impiety to their own destruction; but it will never reconcile a tender saint to their manner of life. It entails upon themselves and families at last the greatest misery. And however different their lot on earth or the manner of their death, or pompous their burial, everlasting punishment in hell shall be their final portion. Let therefore their heart, their counsel, their practice, be far from me. And while I adore the high wisdom of God in his providence, let me never comfort myself with vain words! Where there is no truth there can be no solid comfort.

CHAPTER XXII. Imagining that Job had accused God of injustice, in suffering the wicked to prosper and the righteous to be afflicted, Eliphaz, in great anger, replied, 2. Darest thou imagine that God is a gainer by our virtue, as we ourselves are, and so bound to

9. Thou hast spoiled widows of their just property, and cruelly oppressed, broken, and crushed the orphans, depriving them of all their supports and comforts. 10. Therefore entangling troubles and dangers are everywhere round about thee, and sudden fears and terrible judgments affright thee. 11. Fearful troubles and perplexities so overwhelm thee that thou hast neither a comfortable sense nor hope of relief left; and multitudes of afflictions have with violence burst forth upon thee. 12. Is not God higher in place and dignity than the loftiest stars which thou observest? 13, 14. But like an atheist, you seem to think that God cannot know, or doth not care, what is done upon earth, but merely amuses himself in walking round the heavens. 15. Hast thou not eagerly followed, rather than prudently observed, the conduct or fate of those companions of vanity and wickedness who lived before the flood? 16. To whose horrid impieties God put a stop, by destroying them before their time, and carrying them off the earth by an overflowing deluge. 17. Who, in the most insolent manner, wished to have 15 Hast thou marked the 'old way which wicked men have trodden?

18 Yet he 'filled their houses with good things: but 'the counsel of the wicked is far from me.<sup>1</sup>

19 The 'righteous see it,<sup>2</sup> and are glad; and the innocent laugh them to scorn:

20 Whereas our substance<sup>3</sup> is not cut down, but the remnant<sup>4</sup> of them the 'fire consumeth.<sup>5</sup>

21 Acquaint<sup>6</sup> now thyself with<sup>6</sup> him,<sup>7</sup> and 'be at peace: thereby 'good shall come unto thee.

22 Receive,<sup>8</sup> I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and 'lay up his words in thine heart.

23 If<sup>9</sup> thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shalt 'put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles.

24 Then 'shalt thou lay up gold as dust,<sup>8</sup> and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the brooks.

25 Yea, the Almighty shall be thy 'defence, and thou shalt have plenty<sup>9</sup> of silver.<sup>1</sup>

26 For then shalt thou 'have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt 'lift up thy face unto God.

27 Thou 'shalt make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee, and thou shalt pay thy vows.

28 Thou shalt also 'decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee; and the 'light shall shine upon thy ways.

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Job longeth to appear before God, 6 in confidence of being heard with mercy and acquitted. 8 God, though invisible, obserreth our ways. 11 Job's innocency. 13 God's decree is immutable.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 Even 'to-day is my complaint 'bitter: my 'stroke<sup>2</sup> is heavier than my groaning.

3 Oh<sup>3</sup> that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat!

4 I 'would order my cause before him, and fill my mouth with arguments.

5 I 'would know the words which he would answer me, and understand what he would say unto me.

6 Will<sup>4</sup> he plead against me with his great power? No; but he would put strength in me.

7 There<sup>5</sup> the righteous might dispute with him; so should I be delivered for ever from my judge.<sup>3</sup>

8 Beho'd, 'I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him:<sup>4</sup>

9 On the left hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: he hideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him.

10 But 'he knoweth the way<sup>5</sup> that I 'take: when he 'hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold.

11 My 'foot hath held his steps; his way have I kept, and not declined.

12 Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips; 'I have esteemed<sup>7</sup> the peated supplications; receive peace from him; and quietly submit to him by an unfeigned repentance. Thus shall all manner of blessings, temporal and eternal, come to thee. 22. Receive, and duly meditate on, the instructive revelations which he may be pleased to afford thee. 23. If by a true faith and sincere repentance thou turn to the Lord, thou shalt be again advanced to thy former honours and prosperity; and the punishment which thy sins have brought upon thee shall be removed far from thee and whatever belongs to thee. 24. Then shalt thou lay up gold, and fine gold, in such amazing plenty, and with such ease, as if they were the most common things. 25. For the all-sufficient and almighty God shall be thy portion and the protector of thy treasures; and thou shalt have astonishing heaps of silver. 26. Thou shalt delight thyself in the enjoyment of God's love and favour; and shalt with confidence and comfort present thyself at his throne of grace, and hope for his eternal felicity. 27. With sweet pleasure shall he hear thy prayers; and thou shalt pay thy vows of gratitude to him with the warmest affection. 28. Whatever thou hast purposed shall be accomplished: and divine direction pose that thou art righteous, wouldst thou thus be conferring a favour on God? No; by righteousness a wise man is profitable to himself. But I affirm that thou art not righteous, and that thou art injuring thyself by unrighteousness' (Wordsworth). P.] Ver. 6. [This being a grievous and direct charge, it is probable that Job, in the midst of his charities which his friends cannot deny (ch. 29. 15; 31. 16-22), had, as a man of business, been careful of his rights, righteous exacting being to the poor themselves frequently better than promiscuous and inconsiderate giving, and that Eliphaz now exaggerates this carefulness and justice into this hideous picture of unfeeling oppression. C.] Ver. 7. [A charge of inhospitality, one of the most grievous in the estimation of the Arabians and their kindred nations. C.] REFLECTIONS.—Nothing can be more absurd than to imagine that we can make God our debtor by anything which we can do. We have nothing good in us, or done by us, but what is God's gift. None are too great for God to humble. And if he spare the wicked, it is not for fear of them, but in patient pity towards them. FURTHER ship with him, the satisfaction even in managing outward affairs, the safety in times of common calamity, and usefulness towards others—that knowledge of and peace with God, spiritual improvement of God's word, and sincere repentance do produce! CHAPTER XXIII. Job replied, 2. Notwithstanding all your pretended advices and comforts, I have as much reason for bitter complaints as ever; and my sufferings far exceed my expressions of grief. 3. O that I were admitted into God's own immediate presence, and allowed to present myself before his judgment-seat! 4. I would, in an orderly manner, set the justice of my cause before him, and fully support it with arguments, vindicating myself, and confuting your reproachful allegations. 5. I would insist for his decision whether I be a hypocrite or not; and that he would show me plainly why he hath so afflicted me. 6. Would he employ his infinite power and majesty to bear me down? No; but would mercifully strengthen and encourage me to plead with him. And suppose he should plead against me in the multitude of his words of his mouth more than my "necessary" food.

13 But he is in one mind, and "who can turn him? and what his soul desireth, even that he doeth.

14 For he performeth the thing that is appointed for me: and "many such things" are with him.

15 Therefore "am I troubled at his presence: when I consider, I am afraid of him.

16 For God "maketh my heart soft," and the Almighty troubleth me:

17 Because I was not cut off "before the darkness, neither hath he covered the "darkness from my face."

swerving from them. 12. I have never apostatized from his doctrines nor precepts; and have more earnestly sought, more highly prized, more heartily delighted in, and more carefully stored up his words of revelation, than my necessary food, or most valuable and precious things. 13. But his purposes are unchangeable, and he immovably persists in afflicting me, and does whatever he pleases, without giving to any a reason for his conduct. 14. Whatever trouble he has intended for me he will inflict: and in his purposes and providential conduct there are many instances of deep mystery, of which, though both wise and just, we cannot see the reason. 15. In consideration of his infinite majesty and wondrous and infinite power, I am troubled at the tokens of his anger; and when I leisurely consider his hard dealings with me I am afraid of him. 16. For in his infinite power he hath quite broken and melted my heart with fiery tribulations; and I am in perpetual terror of his inflicting still heavier strokes. 17. For he keeps me still alive under these terrible troubles and perplexities, and refuses me the favour of dying by his fearful and confounding strokes.

REFLECTIONS.—Our groanings should never be heavier than our strokes. God allows us to complain of our troubles, but never to murmur at them. It is becoming for saints to be earnestly desirous of close dealing with God; and to be particular and importunate in their requests at his throne of grace. However men abuse us, God will not only deal in equity, but even in great mercy, with his people. And it is proper always to keep up kind and exalted thoughts of him. They who fasten upon the afflictions which in himself, in Christ he is infinitely engaging. Let us therefore always acquiesce in his works and delight in himself. There is no reason rashly to wish for death when God can so quickly render life a comfort to us and a service to his church.

CHAPTER XXIV. But if God always punishes the wicked in this world, as you pretend, why are not particular seasons of it fixed by him? And why do not those who are best acquainted with him observe those days of judgment of his enemies? 2. Certain it is that in this world some are notoriously covetous and unjust, and even open robbers. 3. They cruelly oppress widows and fatherless children. 4. They harass, terrify, or even imprison the meek, poor, and afflicted. 5. In the most unconcerned manner they carry on their oppressions, and by rapine and violence maintain themselves and families in the desert. 6. They reap fields and gather vintages not their own. 7, 8. They force from the poor whatever they have, till they reduce them to absolute misery, in a state similar to that of wild beasts. 9-11. While they inhumanly deprive infants of their provision, that the enslaved mothers may work, and deprive their poor underlings of the meanest necessities of life, they force them to labour in the hardest services. 12. Those whom they have oppressed, wounded, or unjustly condemned, mightily cry to God for judgment against them; yet he punishes them not, even in the slightest manner. 13. They sin impudently in the face of the sun, and against the light of nature, conscience, and revelation: they do not approve, delight in, or observe God's laws:

but their crimes are quickly and altogether forgotten. 21, 22. They abuse barren women, injure widows, and with great activity, craft, and cruelty oppress everybody around. 23. And though men give them presents, that they may have their protection and friendship, they still watch for opportunities to injure these dependants. 24. After being exalted a while they come to their graves as seasonably in appearance, and as easily, as their neighbours. 25. But if you will insist that the wicked are always fearfully punished in this life, I dare challenge the whole world to find me the person who can disprove the facts which I have now stated.

N.B. Ver. 18-20, 23, 24, may be interpreted as a representation of the miserable state of wicked men after all their prosperity.

Ver. 5. [The wild ass—intractable, untamable, rejoicing in its freedom—is an emblem of the nomad Ishmaelite of the Arabian desert. Such too as are poor, who are driven from settled habitations by oppression, seek a refuge in the wide and free desert. It is often the case in the present day that those who are ground down by the tyranny and avarice of Turkish rulers, desert their homes in the agricultural districts of eastern Syria, and escape to the wilderness. P.—Go they forth. Who? Not the poor (ver. 4), but the unjust oppressors described in ver. 2, 3, &c., whose work becomes the robbery of the caravans in the wilderness, as it has continued downwards through all their generations. C.]

Ver. 18. [The general idea here is the quickness with which the wicked man passes away. True he may live to an old age; yet at length he and though their crimes should be concealed on earth, they will be openly discovered at last and punished for ever. Amidst the perpetration of crimes terror often seizes them; but how much more in sharing the certain, the fearful, the eternal punishment of them!

CHAPTER XXV. Bildad replied, 2. To God belongs that supreme authority over all things in heaven and earth, and that infinite majesty which strikes every beholder into solemn awe. In perfect quietness and order he rules all the luminaries in the firmament, and all the angels and glorified saints above. Why then darest thou pretend to find fault with him? 3. His creatures are absolutely innumerable to us, and every one shares of his light, his benefits of nature or grace;—why then contend with him? 4. And how then can a poor wretched man stand as righteous before God? And he that is born of a sinful woman be pure before him? 5. In his view the bright luminaries of heaven are spotted and dark. 6. How mean and vile then must the frail and dying children of a corrupted progenitor and federal head be in his sight!

Ver. 6. [This closing speech of Bildad is beautiful and true, but it does not touch the point at issue. The friends had argued that Job was punished because of his sin—his sin was great, though concealed beneath a cloak of hypocrisy, therefore his punishment was great. In reply Job affirmed a great fact, namely, that the ungodly often live happily and prosperously; and from this he argues with conclusive force that punishment does not always overtake the sinner. Consequently the fact of his being greatly afflicted was no certain proof of his having grievously sinned. P.—Worm.] This word rather signifies a maggot, a creature bred of filth.

love hath the Father bestowed on us in thus sending forth his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, that we, sinful worms, might, through his blood, become the sons of God!

CHAPTER XXVI. To this Job, in a derisive manner, answered, 2. To what purpose serve these hints, either to support the cause of the Almighty, or to direct him in his government of the world, or to comfort a dispirited and instruct an ignorant soul? Who can be a whit bettered by aught you have so confidently uttered, that is quite foreign to the point in hand? 4. Do you imagine that I need to be instructed in these points? or that you, as one inspired of God, can by such hints revive and refresh my spirit? 5. I myself can discourse to far better purpose concerning God. While terrible monsters, minerals, pearl, coral, and the like, are formed in the bottom of the sea or heart of the earth, and fishes and animals on the surface of it, the departed ghosts tremble and travail in pain in the deep and dark regions of misery. 6. The whole state of the dead, whether of soul or body, is perfectly obvious to God's all-seeing eye; and all the depths and miseries of hell are perpetually visible to him. 7. He spreads the heavens over the apparently empty regions of air; and so balances the earth by his power, that it hangs like a ball in the air supported by nothing. 8. He binds up large collections of water in the clouds (by which he covers his glory, and on which he rides in majesty) as in firm bags, till he please to make them distil in dew, rain, snow, or hail. 9. He conceals his own glorious abodes; he firmly fixes the visible heavens, and spreads his veiling collection of clouds over them, to conceal his glory and restrain the

CHAPTER XXV.

Bildad asserteth the sovereignty of God, before whom man cannot be justified.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said, 2 Dominion<sup>a</sup> and fear are with him; he maketh peace in his high places.<sup>1</sup>

3 Is there any number of his armies? and upon whom doth not his light arise?<sup>2</sup>

4 How then can man be justified with God? or how can he be clean that is born of a woman?

1 Job, reproving the uncharitable spirit of Bildad, 5 acknowledgeth the power of God to be infinite and unsearchable.

BUT Job answered and said, 2 How hast thou helped him that is without power?<sup>1</sup> how savest thou the arm that hath no strength?

3 How hast thou counselled him that hath no wisdom? and how hast thou plentifully declared the thing as it is?

4 To whom hast thou uttered words? and whose spirit came from thee?

Ver. 5. [The mighty dead (the giants of the antediluvian world, Ge. 6:4) are laid open from below, and the (living) inhabitants thereof 'are naked before God.' C.—Job's object in this sublime speech is to show that his view of the power, wisdom, and goodness of God is far more comprehensive than that of Bildad. God's dominion is not confined to the heavens, it extends to the grave, to the world of spirits:—in universal nature, in fact, Jehovah reigns supreme. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Sometimes self-conceited persons may be ridiculed out of their notions when reasoning is not effectual: and in disputes much is ordinarily said that is not to the present purpose; and not the edification of their neighbour, but victory over him, is the great aim of the disputants. Little is it remembered, that not the displays of God's highness, but of his grace in Christ, can give occasion to glory.

JOB XXVIII.

The hypocrite is without hope.

6 <sup>1</sup>Hell<sup>3</sup> is naked before him, and destruction hath no covering.

7 He stretcheth out the north<sup>4</sup> over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

8 He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds; and the cloud is not rent under them.

9 He holdeth back the face of his throne,<sup>5</sup> and spreadeth his cloud upon it.

10 He hath compassed the waters with bounds,<sup>6</sup> until the day and night come to an end.<sup>7</sup>

11 The pillars<sup>8</sup> of heaven tremble, and are astonished at his reproof.

12 He divideth the sea<sup>9</sup> with his power, and by his understanding he smiteth through the proud.<sup>1</sup>

13 By his Spirit he hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed the crooked serpent.

14 Lo, these are parts of his ways: but how little a portion is heard of him? but the thunder of his power who can understand?<sup>2</sup>

CHAPTER XXVII.

11 The blessings which the wicked possess are sometimes turned into curses.

2 As God liveth, who hath taken away my judgment;<sup>3</sup> and the Almighty, who hath vexed my soul;

3 All the while my breath is in me, and the spirit of God is in my nostrils;

4 My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit.

5 God forbid that I should justify you: till I die I will not remove mine integrity from me.

6 My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go: my heart shall not reproach me so long as I live.<sup>4</sup>

7 Let mine enemy be as the wicked, and he that riseth up against me as the unrighteous.

8 For what is the hope of the hypocrite,

21 Seeing <sup>a</sup>it is hid from the eyes of all living, and kept close from the fowls of the air.<sup>1</sup>

22 Destruction<sup>2</sup> and death say,<sup>3</sup> We have heard the fame thereof with our ears.

23 God<sup>4</sup> understandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the place thereof.

Ver. 7. [Let mine enemy be as the wicked. This is not an imprecation of evil, but a description of character, and assertion of Job's total want of sympathy with the wicked or unrighteous, as the only persons he counted his enemies. C.]

Ver. 18. [As a moth. The moth builds the most beautiful but the most frail mansion, of which the silk-worm is a remarkable example. Neither does any moth remain long in its house, for it soon undergoes a change, and casts aside its useless covering. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Appeals to God ought to be necessary, deliberate, serious, and in matters of importance. Prevarication or concealment is as much perjury before God as direct falsehood asserted. But how often our high praises of God are mingled with something unkindly and disparaging! Not our most solemn vows, but Jesus' blood and Spirit, must chiefly maintain our purity of conscience and integrity of life. And while he enables to exercise a conscience void of offence towards God and men, we ought never to believe either devils or men suggesting that we are hypocrites. But it is best to refute the calumnies cast upon us by living well. Miserable indeed are hypocrites, whose hopes will never be crowned with enjoyment, their prayers never accepted nor graciously answered, and whose religion is neither comfortable nor constant! And yet, alas! how many such, amidst a glare of profession, continue with hearts unrenewed! Miserable is the condition of the wicked, even at its best, in this life: and what then must it be in hell? When once dead, their riches strangely vanish, and even fall into the hands of the godly, whom they hated: nor is any habitation secure and lasting but that which is not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. And in the most alarming forms of death God often ushers wicked men into eternal fire.

CHAPTER XXVIII. No wonder that I cannot tell you the reasons why God punishes some wicked earth. 5, 6. While the surface of the ground produces herbs and corn for food to animals; lime, brimstone, and such other combustibles are found in its bowels; nay, the most precious stones and gold in some parts of it. 7, 8. So mysterious are the passages of these miners that the most quick-sighted fowls never looked into them, and the most fierce and courageous animals never dared to enter them. 9. But the miners artfully cut their way through rocks of flint, and dig to the bottoms of mountains, to come at the precious metals. 10. They make passages for draining off the water that breaks in upon them, and cleave asunder the veins of ore, and earnestly discover the precious stones and metals. 11. They stop the springs from overflowing their mine, turning them another way, and bring up these precious gems or metals which had been long sealed up in the heart of the earth. 12. But to find out solid wisdom, or obtain the knowledge of God's reasons in his providential conduct, is still more difficult. 13. God hath so disposed it that no man knows the order, method, or importance of his procedure; and no man on earth can attain to it. 14. No search into the depths of the earth or sea can procure it. 15-19. Not all the precious metals or gems in the world can purchase it. 20, 21. No, not the most quick-sighted creatures on earth can point out a method to obtain it. 22. The solid consideration of death and hell are a proper introduction to true wisdom; and yet in death and damnation there are manifold instances of God's wise procedure which are not sufficiently comprehended in the reasons of them. 23-27. God alone—who is infinite in wisdom and knowledge, and who rules and governs all things for the best—who manages winds, waters, rains, and thunders in all their circumstances, degree, time, place, or form—properly understands the reasons of whatever he does, particularly his dealings with men. 28. But what he inculcates and bestows upon men as their proper wisdom is such a knowledge and filial awe of his unbounded excellencies, as makes them to flee to him as their only refuge and portion;

works they undertook, may be seen on the spot to this day; and they are testimonies to the scientific acquirements and enterprising spirit of some great primeval nation. With these or kindred works Job must have been acquainted. P.]

Ver. 4. [Delitzsch's translation of this difficult passage is as follows:—'He breaketh away a shaft from those who tarry above; there, forgotten by every foot, they hang and swing far from men.' Allusion is manifestly made to the operations of the miner, especially in the copper-mines. 'The shaft' is the perpendicular aperture to the mine. Down it the miners are let by a rope, on which they hang and swing unseen by those above. P.]

Ver. 5. [That is, the surface of the earth is heaved up and tossed by the operations of the miner, just as volcanic fire heaves up a mountain. P.]

Ver. 11. [Bindeth the floods. It is probable the reference of Job is to the ingenious methods and gigantic efforts whereby mines were drained in his days; but of the literal binding of the floods, many parts of the Low Countries of the European continent, rescued by embankment from the sea, afford the most striking examples. Roberts in his Illustrations refers the greater part of this chapter to the eastern works for irrigation; but we can see no good reason for supposing them so obscurely combined with the evident reference to mining. See ver. 1, 2. C.]

Ver. 25. [The writer here refers to those great fixed laws which regulate all physical nature. These laws are divine in origin. God appointed them. He appointed to the wind the measure of its force; he distributed the seas and oceans by measure; he appointed to the rains, the lightning, and the thunder their laws. God thus rules the world in every department. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—Alas! how men rack their wits, and toil their members, to obtain riches, which, while enjoyed, are unsubstantial, and which quickly take to themselves wings and fly away, as an eagle towards heaven! Why are we not more industrious in digging

24 For 'he looketh to the ends of the earth, and seeth under the whole heaven;

25 To 'make the weight<sup>s</sup> for the winds; and he weigheth the waters by measure.

26 When 'he made a decree for the rain, and a way for the lightning of the thunder:

27 Then did he see it, and 'declare it; he prepared it, yea, and searched it out.

28 And 'unto man he said, Behold, 'the fear of the LORD, 'that is wisdom; and to 'depart from evil is understanding.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Job calleth to mind his former prosperity and honour, and the worthy use he had made of it.

MOREOVER, Job 'continued his parable, and said,

2 Oh that I were as in 'months past, as in the days when God preserved me;

3 When his 'candle shined upon my head,<sup>1</sup> and when by his light I walked through darkness;

4 As I was in the days of my youth, when the 'secret of God<sup>2</sup> was upon my tabernacle;

5 When the 'Almighty was yet with me, when 'my children were about me;

6 When 'I washed my steps with butter, and the rock poured me<sup>3</sup> out rivers of oil;<sup>4</sup>

7 When I went out 'to the gate through the city; when I prepared my seat in the street!

8 The young men saw me, and 'hid themselves; and the aged 'arose, and stood up.

9 The princes 'refrained talking, and laid their hand on their mouth.

10 The nobles held their peace,<sup>5</sup> and their tongue 'cleaved to the roof of their mouth.<sup>6</sup>

11 When<sup>a</sup> the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me:

CHAPTER XXIX. After another pause, Job proceeded in his spirited vindication of himself, saying, 2. O that God would re-establish me in my former prosperity of person, family, and estate, as in the days wherein he watched over and protected me! 3. When his blessing and favour directed and prospered me in all my affairs, and made me to pass untouched through all the troubles and inconveniences of life, and the various dangers, difficulties, and calamities which befel others around me. 4. When I was in the days of my ripe prosperity, and had the authority, the oracles, and secrets of God with me; 5. When God Almighty continued so kind to and familiar with me, and my children and servants were round about me; 6. When whithersoever I turned myself I abounded in all sorts of the choicest blessings; 7. When I took my seat in the places of judicature and concourse, 8. The young men stood in the most profound awe of me, and the aged stood up in reverence and ceased to speak. 9. To and unexpected deliverances, and the favours which I granted her. 14. In all my sentences I fixed my attention on what was just and upright: and the decisions I gave were an honour to me. 15. I instructed, directed, and assisted such as could not manage their own affairs; and was ever ready to help and comfort such as could not help themselves. 16. I was a kind teacher, provider, and protector to the poor; and carefully inquired into their circumstances, as well as into their difficult and obscure pleas. 17. By proper punishments and restraints I rendered the wicked incapable of oppressing, and forced them to restore that which they had violently extorted. 18. Then I vainly imagined that, after a long life of amazing prosperity, I should die quietly in my own house among my children and friends; 19. That my remarkable happiness should certainly continue, as I had every mean of preserving and securing it; 20. That the honour and respect which I had from others, and my children

Ver. 24. [If I laughed on them, they believed it not. 'If I smiled upon them they became not confident; that is, my utmost familiarity never bred contempt; a result ever difficult to attain, and requiring the most exact tempering of affection with firmness, of condescension with dignity, and of rebuke with tenderness—a result of which polish may produce an imitation, while grace alone can exhibit the original. C.]

Ver. 25. [There is an amount of self-glorification in this passage which would be offensive in western society. The customs and feelings of the East, however, are very different from ours. Such language as

2 Yea, whereto might the strength of their hands profit me, in whom old age was perished?

3 For want and famine they were solitary; fleeing into the wilderness in former time desolate and waste:

4 Who cut up mallows by the bushes, and juniper-roots for their meat.

5 They were driven forth from among men, (they cried after them as after a thief.)

6 To dwell in the cliffs of the valleys, in caves of the earth, and in the rocks.

7 Among the bushes they brayed; under the nettles they were gathered together.

8 They were children of fools, yea, children of base men: they were viler than the earth.

9 And now am I their song; yea, I am their by-word.

10 They abhor me, they flee far from me, and spare not to spit in my face.

11 Because he hath loosed my cord, and afflicted me, they have also let loose the bridle before me.

12 Upon my right hand rise the youth; they push away my feet, and they raise up against me the ways of their destruction.

13 They mar my path; they set forward my calamity; they have no helper.

14 They came upon me as a wide breaking-in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me.

15 Terrors are turned upon me: they pursue my soul as the wind; and my welfare passeth away as a cloud.

16 And now my soul is poured out upon me; the days of affliction have taken hold upon me.

in a state when judges are grave, solemn and impartial helpers to the poor, and terrors to the oppressors; and when people are modest, submissive, and grateful: but when men have great wealth at home, and are regarded as the oracle, the darling sovereign, and comforter of their country, how apt are they to suppose their felicity secured, and to forget the evil day!

CHAP. XXX. But now, alas! the youths, who durst scarcely look me in the face, mock and deride me, even those whose infamous parents I would have disdained to have employed in attending my dogs, or in other of the vilest services; 2. Being indeed so lazy, listless, and weak, that it was in vain to employ them in anything, after they had lived so long abandoning themselves to wickedness; 3–8. Base and beggarly fellows, who, ashamed of their poverty, and to prevent the punishment of their wickedness, had fled into deserts; and there, like wild beasts, lived upon roots and herbs, and lodged in dens, caves, and bushes. 9. But now they triumph over me, and make my calamities the subject of their songs and merry conversation. 10. Heartily abhorring me, they disdain to they insult me in the most noisy forms. 15. Terrors directed by God against me, seize upon me in the most violent and irresistible manner; and my abundant prosperity is quickly, in a moment, over and gone. 16. By reason of my terrible afflictions my courage and resolution are quite exhausted, and the powers of my soul so wasted that I can do nothing but melt into tears and faint away with grief. 17. In the night, when others rest, my bones are, as it were, pierced and bruised with pain; and the worms, terrors, and agonies that torment me never take rest. 18. By their fearful force my boils, which cover me all over, are like an outer garment to me, and gird me round about; and their filthy matter stains my clothes, and glues them fast to my skin, that I can scarcely get them changed. 19. I am fearfully plunged into filthy troubles. My foul sores render me like dust and ashes, and reduce me to the point of death. 20. When I present myself before thee, O God, and continue instant in the most fervent supplications, thou dost but condemn me. 21, 22. Acting as an implacable enemy to me, thou exercisest thy almighty power to destroy me. Thou liftest me up to the wind of thy judgment, and makest me to as a poor distressed object, pine away with grief? 26. For when I firmly expected great and lasting prosperity terrible miseries came upon me. 27. How insupportable are the inward torments of my body and the anguish of my soul! Days of fearful affliction have rushed upon me before I was aware. 28. I spend my days without any comfort; and sadness makes me quite unconcerned about light or any other agreeable object. My trouble forces me to cry out, be as many around me as will. 29. I can do nothing but seek to be alone, and hiss and howl over my dreadful case. 30. The hot moisture my boils has rendered my skin black, and has inflamed all my bones. 31. All my joy and mirth are laid aside; and nothing but weeping and wailing are come in their stead.

Ver. 2. [In whom old age (untaught by experience) had become profligate.—Note, However melancholy be the sight of a thoughtless young man, still there is hope that time may teach him a better lesson; but of an abandoned old man, lost to all experience, what can we hope? Grace alone can teach either the young or the old; but the aged sinner is surely the more frightful picture. C.]

CHAPTER XXXI.

Job maketh a solemn protestation of his integrity in several duties.

I MADE<sup>a</sup> a covenant with mine eyes; why then should I think upon a maid?

2 For <sup>b</sup>what portion of God is there from above?<sup>1</sup> and what inheritance of the Almighty from on high?

3 Is not destruction to the wicked? and a strange punishment to the workers of iniquity?

4 Doth<sup>a</sup> not he see my ways, and count all my steps?

5 If<sup>a</sup> I have walked with vanity, or if my foot hath hastened to deceit;

6 Let<sup>a</sup> me be weighed in an even balance, that God may know mine integrity.

7 If<sup>a</sup> my step hath turned out of the way, and mine heart walked after mine eyes,<sup>2</sup> and if any blot hath cleaved to mine hands;

8 Then <sup>b</sup>let me sow, and let another eat; yea, let my offspring be rooted out.

9 If <sup>c</sup>mine heart have been deceived by a woman,<sup>3</sup> or if I have laid wait at my neighbour's door;

10 Then let my wife <sup>d</sup>grind unto another,<sup>4</sup> and let others bow down upon her.

11 For this is an heinous crime; yea, it is an iniquity to be punished by the judges.

12 For it is a <sup>e</sup>fire that consumeth to destruction, and would root out all mine increase.

13 If I <sup>f</sup>did despise the cause of my manservant or of my maid-servant, when they contended with me;

14 What then shall I do when <sup>g</sup>God riseth up?<sup>5</sup> and when he visiteth, what shall I answer him?

15 Did<sup>a</sup> not he that made me in the womb make him? and did not one fashion us in the womb?<sup>6</sup>

16 If I have <sup>h</sup>withheld the poor from their desire, or have caused the eyes of the widow to fail;

17 Or have <sup>i</sup>eaten my morsel myself alone,<sup>7</sup> and the fatherless hath not eaten thereof;

18 (For from my youth <sup>j</sup>he was brought up with me, as with a father, and I have guided her<sup>8</sup> from my mother's womb),<sup>9</sup>

SO these three men ceased to answer<sup>1</sup> Job, because he <sup>9</sup>was <sup>9</sup>righteous in his own eyes.

3 Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled,<sup>4</sup> because they had found no answer, and <sup>9</sup>yet had condemned <sup>9</sup>Job.

4 Now Elihu had <sup>9</sup>waited till Job had <sup>9</sup>spoken, because they <sup>9</sup>were <sup>9</sup>elder than he.

5 When Elihu saw that <sup>9</sup>there was no answer in the mouth of <sup>9</sup>these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said, I <sup>9</sup>am <sup>9</sup>young, and ye <sup>9</sup>are very old; wherefore I was afraid, and <sup>9</sup>durst not show you mine opinion.

7 I said, <sup>9</sup>Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom.

mark to the legal instruments in the cause, and he means that he would gladly affix his signature to articles of impeachment laid against him, in token of his desire to debate the question of his own integrity' (Wordsworth). Job feels strong in the consciousness of his innocence. He has now put the three friends to silence; and he makes a general appeal to any one who will hear him. He boldly appeals to God himself to try and judge him. Seeing only with human eye, comparing himself only with a human standard, Job forgets man's frail and guilty nature. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How diversified are the forms in which inward corruption breaks forth among mankind! And there is great need of purifying the heart, of solemn dedication to God, of watchfulness over both soul and senses, and of constant, awful, and engaging impressions of God, to promote a holy and circumspect life. It is highly honourable to be followers of those ancient patriarchs who through faith and patience inherited the promises. But, alas! that many things, by them held horrid and detestable, are now become common and fashionable!—What dangerous enemies to our souls are fleshly lusts! And they call for especial watchfulness. If we would keep our heart pure we must be single. However unexceptionable our manity and tenderness is due to servants and the poor, who have the same Maker and God as ourselves: and there is great need of grace to wean our heart from this world and from every rival of God. It is a hard task to forgive injuries without reluctance. But to rejoice in the fall of an enemy is malicious and murderous. The greatest provocation will never justify our revenge. Hypocritically to hide our sins is destructive to our souls. And it is very dangerous to be partakers with other men in their sins. Let us therefore avoid the fear of man, which causeth a snare. Let us never hear a good cause run down without vindicating it, nor see injustice committed without remonstrating against it. In all our conduct let us study to approve ourselves unto God.

CHAPTER XXXII. Ver. 1. He was resolutely bent to justify himself, let them say what they would. 2. He insisted too much upon his own vindication. Yea, not without reflecting upon the severity of God. 7, 8. Old men ought to instruct their inferiors in age in the matters of God. But I find that, whatever advantage old age may give for knowledge and experience, it is chiefly men's own rational soul, and the inspiring Spirit of God, which qualify them to apprehend the heard the whole controversy—alike the charges brought against Job and his reply. He observed both the illogical reasoning and its effect. Job was confirmed in his high idea of his integrity, while the friends were silenced. Elihu waited to the end of the discussion in hopes of hearing something calculated to convince Job of his real error. It was in vain. He heard nothing. The three friends failed to reply to Job; and Job justified himself in the sight of God. P.]

Ver. 8. ['But the Spirit in man it is, and the inspiration of the Almighty, that giveth him understanding.' Whatever opinion may be entertained regarding the person and character of Elihu, there can be no doubt that he here lays claim to divine inspiration. He acknowledges that all wisdom must come from God. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—In angry disputes there is ordinarily much to reprove on both sides. But when the disputants are warm they are loath to own that they have lost the cause. Yet it is much better to say nothing than to talk error and nonsense. When we have fault to find, it should be done before men, not behind their backs. A gracious heart is jealous for the honour of God, and cannot, unmoved, see him slighted. And it is highly commendable to show a

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 Elihu offereth himself instead of God, with sincerity and meekness, to reason with Job. 8 He excuseth God from giving man an account of his ways, by his greatness. 14 God calleth man to repentance by visions, 19 by afflictions, 23 and by his ministers. 31 He inviteth Job to attention.

WHEREFORE, Job, I pray thee, <sup>1</sup>hear my speeches, and hearken to all my words.

2 Behold, now <sup>1</sup>I have opened my mouth, my tongue hath spoken in my mouth.<sup>1</sup>

3 My words shall be of the <sup>2</sup>'uprightness' of my heart; and my lips shall <sup>3</sup>'utter knowledge clearly.'

4 The <sup>4</sup>'Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.

5 If thou canst answer me, set thy words in order before me, stand up.

6 Behold, <sup>5</sup>'I am according to thy wish' in God's stead;<sup>5</sup> I also am formed out of the clay.<sup>6</sup>

7 Behold, <sup>6</sup>'my terror shall not make thee afraid, neither shall my hand be heavy upon thee.

8 Surely thou hast spoken <sup>7</sup>'in mine hearing, and I have heard the voice of thy words, saying.

9 I am <sup>8</sup>'clean without transgression, I am innocent; neither is there iniquity in me.

10 Behold <sup>9</sup>'he findeth occasions against me, he counteth me for his enemy;

11 He <sup>10</sup>'putteth my feet in the stocks, he marketh all my paths.'

12 Behold, in this thou art <sup>11</sup>'not just: I will answer thee, that <sup>12</sup>'God is greater than man.'

13 Why <sup>13</sup>'dost thou strive against him? for he <sup>14</sup>'giveth not account' of any of his matters.

14 For <sup>15</sup>'God speaketh once, yea twice, yet man perceiveth it not.

reignly in the disposal of knowledge or other gifts. Men may have rational souls and yet know little: but they ought to cultivate this distinguished privilege. All the wisdom of fallen men in spiritual matters is but darkness till the Spirit of God enlighten their mind.—And, alas! how often disputes are closed before the question be rightly stated or impartially handled! And hence the issue is so seldom a seeing eye to eye in the truth. They have therefore good right to speak who can set the cause of truth in a more convincing and striking light than had been formerly done. And they who speak for God ought to be earnest in their discourses, inflamed with zeal for his glory and the good of souls; and to be so impressed with his perfections and laws as to regard neither the fear nor the favour of men.

Hence, for their awakening to a proper attention, he severely afflicts them, till they are brought to the very point of death. 23, 24. If then, by the instruction of some faithful minister, and especially by the instruction of Jesus Christ, the unparalleled Angel and Interpreter of the new kingdom, the afflicted man be brought, not only to discern the equity of God in afflicting him, but to discern, and by faith apply, Jesus' blessed righteousness to himself, God intimates to his soul a full and free redemption through that all-inclusive atonement. 25, 26. In consequence hereof not only the man's body and mind recover their wonted health and alacrity, but he is enabled, with boldness and success, to pour forth his requests before God, who allows him the comfortable sense and gracious reward of that righteousness imparted to or implanted in him. 27, 28. Ver. 30. [This is a summary of God's gracious design in all the chastenings and afflictions which he sends upon his elect. It is to redeem them from sin's power. Elihu just develops the same principle which the apostle Paul enunciates; that 'all things work together for good to them that love God.' P.]

REFLECTIONS.—We ought seriously to hear out a discourse before we form a judgment on it. And they who speak for God ought to speak with great deliberation and plainness. Those who are in great trouble ought to be tenderly, as well as convincingly, dealt with. And yet a faithful testimony must be borne against the dishonours which we see or hear done to God by even the greatest of saints. In the rage of temptation or dispute, or in the depth of trouble, they often speak things very unadvisedly; and yet their words are apt to be taken in a worse sense than they meant them. To make us conceive aright of God's providence we must carefully keep in view his infinite greatness, sovereignty, grace, and wisdom. And there to their comforts on earth as well as to their glories in heaven. Departures from God issue in ruin unless he recover us by grace. And so manifold are his admonitions that, if we perish, our ruin lies at our own door. The wiser men are, they are the more humble and willing to learn; and the more desirous to be undeceived if they have been mistaken.

CHAPTER XXXIV. Ver. 2. I appeal to you, O men of sense, and I beseech you seriously to consider what I say. 3. For the mind can judge of the truth or falsehood of doctrines, as well as the mouth can judge of the taste of food. 4. Let us, without any passion or prejudice, thoroughly examine this cause: 5, 6. For Job has uttered some very dangerous expressions in his own justification, as if he could not vindicate himself without accusing God of unjust severity towards him, 7, 8. Did ever a good man deride, not only his friends, but even his God, with such greediness and delight? Did ever a good man under trouble speak and act so like the wicked? 10-12. It is impossible that God can deny justice to any, or punish without cause, or forbear to reward men according to into eternity; and the mightiest princes or warriors are, by his immediate influence, displaced from their station or deprived of their life. 21. His omniscient eye discerns enough in men for which he may justly punish them. 25. He takes a full and exact account of their works; and because they are wicked he rolls a night of destructive judgment upon them; and they are bruised, as in a mortar, under the weight of it. 26. He suddenly, and with shame, hisses away these eminent ones in the open view of unnumbered spectators. 27. Because of their manifest apostasy from and obstinate rebellion against him: 28. That he may encourage mean persons to apply to him for relief; and may graciously hear the plaintive cries of the poor and afflicted. 29. And if he give deliverance, rest, and comfort, none can make trouble. If he withhold his favourable smiles, none can procure help from him. 30. He also punishes wicked men, that their insolence may be controlled, and that their subjects may not be encouraged to imitate their impieties or be perpetually held in the fetters of tyranny and oppression. 31, 32. Instead of quarrelling with God's afflictive providences, we should kindly submit to them, and with holy reso-

LIBRARY OF CÆSAR AUGUSTUS. [JOB xxxv: 16.]—"He multiplieth words without knowledge." The above picture is of a scene on the Palatine hill, known as the Library of Cæsar Augustus. Reference is made in this sixteenth verse of the thirty-fifth chapter of Job to multiplying words without knowledge. It would be very interesting to go back through the centuries and look at the volumes in the library of Cæsar Augustus. We would find, however, by comparing his library with one of the modern period, that the difference between ancient books and modern books consists in the fact that ancient books, especially outside of the range of history, were made up of words without knowledge, while it is characteristic of the books of modern times, that the words they contain must be based upon accurate knowledge of the facts which they describe.

the earth, and maketh us wiser than the fowls of heaven?

12 There <sup>1</sup>they cry,<sup>7</sup> but none giveth answer, because of the pride of evil men.

13 Surely God will not hear <sup>2</sup>vanity, neither will the Almighty regard it.

14 Although thou sayest <sup>3</sup>thou shalt not see him, yet <sup>4</sup>judgment is before him; therefore trust thou in him.

15 But now, <sup>5</sup>because it is not so, he<sup>8</sup> hath visited in his anger; yet he<sup>9</sup> knoweth it not in great<sup>1</sup> extremity:<sup>1</sup>

16 Therefore doth Job <sup>1</sup>open his mouth in vain: he multiplieth words without knowledge.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

<sup>1</sup> Elihu sheweth how God is just in his ways. 16 How Job's sins hinder God's blessings. 24 God's works are to be magnified.

ELIHU also proceeded, and said,
2 Suffer<sup>2</sup> me a little, and I will show thee that I have yet to speak on God's behalf.<sup>1</sup>

3 I will <sup>1</sup>fetch my knowledge from afar,<sup>2</sup> and will <sup>2</sup>ascribe righteousness to my Maker.

4 For <sup>3</sup>truly my words shall not be false: he that is <sup>4</sup>perfect in knowledge<sup>3</sup> is with thee.<sup>4</sup>

5 Behold, God is mighty, and <sup>5</sup>despiseth not<sup>5</sup> any: he is <sup>6</sup>mighty in strength and wisdom.<sup>6</sup>

6 He <sup>7</sup>preserveth not the life of the wicked; but <sup>8</sup>giveth right to the poor.<sup>7</sup>

7 He <sup>9</sup>withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous: but with kings are <sup>10</sup>they on the throne; yea, he doth establish them for ever, and they are exalted.

8 And if <sup>11</sup>they be bound in fetters, and be holden in cords of affliction,

9 Then <sup>12</sup>he sheweth them their work, and their transgressions that they have exceeded.<sup>8</sup>

10 He <sup>13</sup>openeth also their ear to discipline, and commandeth that they return from iniquity.

power and wisdom of God that he never despises any, however mean! 6. He will bestow no solid happiness upon wicked men, but will do justice to the humble, poor, and afflicted. 7. He never ceases his special care of the righteous; but sometimes advances them, however poor, to the highest stations; and continues, establishes, and exalts them therein. 8-10. Or if they be brought into and fixed in sore troubles, he by that means makes them to consider their ways, discern their sinfulness, and turn from it to himself. 11. If their afflictions effect their reformation to piety and virtue, great and manifold shall be the blessings and comforts bestowed upon them here and hereafter. 12. But if, notwithstanding their troubles, they continue obstinate in wickedness, they shall be cut off by some fearful calamity, and shall perish in their ignorance, folly, and sin. 13, 14. Thus hypocrites heap up treaearnestly pleaded the cause of the wicked, and justified their reproachful murmurings against the providence of God: therefore his just indignation has already seized thee, and holds thee fast in bonds of fearful affliction. 18, 19. Since he is manifesting his hot displeasure against thee, take heed lest he cut thee off without remedy; and then no ransom, however great, can redeem thy life again; nor will all the united power and virtue in the world be able to deliver thee, if God resolve to destroy thee. 20. Never wish for a period of awful judgments, in which multitudes of men are often destroyed amidst all their comforts and enjoyments. 21. Never give way to sinning, particularly to rash and intemperate speeches concerning God's providential procedure. Thus shalt thou be chosen in, and plucked out of, the furnace of affliction. But, alas! hitherto thou hast preferred rash censuring of God's ways to a 11 If<sup>1</sup> they obey and serve him, they shall spend their days in prosperity, and their years in pleasures:

12 But <sup>2</sup>if they obey not, they shall perish by the sword,<sup>9</sup> and they shall die without knowledge.

13 But the hypocrites in heart <sup>3</sup>heap up wrath; they cry not when he bindeth them.<sup>1</sup>

15 He <sup>5</sup>delivereth the poor<sup>3</sup> in his affliction, and <sup>6</sup>openeth their ears in oppression.<sup>4</sup>

16 Even<sup>7</sup> so would he have removed thee out of the strait into a broad place, where there is no straitness; and <sup>8</sup>that which should be set on thy table should be full of fatness.

17 But thou hast <sup>9</sup>fulfilled the judgment of the wicked:<sup>5</sup> judgment and justice take hold on thee.<sup>6</sup>

18 Because<sup>1</sup> there is wrath,<sup>7</sup> beware lest he take thee away with his stroke: then a <sup>2</sup>great ransom cannot deliver thee.<sup>8</sup>

19 Will he <sup>3</sup>esteem thy riches? no, not gold, nor all the forces of strength.

20 Desire<sup>4</sup> not the night,<sup>9</sup> when people are cut off in their place.

23 Who<sup>4</sup> hath enjoined him his way? or <sup>5</sup>who can say, Thou hast wrought iniquity?

24 Remember that thou <sup>6</sup>magnify his work, which men behold.

25 Every<sup>7</sup> man may see it; man may behold it afar off.

26 Behold, <sup>8</sup>God is great, and we know him not; neither <sup>9</sup>can the number of his years be searched out.

we can never comprehend it; and such his eternal duration that we cannot search it out. How unfit are we then to judge of and censure his conduct? 27, 28. It is he who exhales from the sea, and forms the drops of rain which fall from the clouds. 29. How incomprehensible are his spreadings of the thick clouds all along the face of the heavens, and the crashing thunder of his cloudy residence! 30. How marvellously he extends the flashing lightning all over the sky, makes it penetrate to the bottom of, or vails it with the rainy waters exhaled from the sea! 31. By such rains, thunder, and lightning, he punishes wicked men for their sins; and by rendering the earth fruitful, makes liberal and magnificent provision for his creatures. 32. By his hollow clouds he conceals the thundering flash as well as the bright and scorching sun, and restrains it by their interposing influence. 33. Its crashing REFLECTIONS.—Plain and important speeches for God deserve the most fixed attention. Faithful souls are always zealous to vindicate God's dispensations from men's foolish and sinful aspersions; and truth and simplicity of speech always become such as profess themselves teachers of God's good ways. It is proper that we should always retain exalted thoughts of God: that he thinks none below his notice, however mean; countenances none of the wicked, however great; is always ready to redress the injured; takes a peculiar pleasure to protect those that are good; and brings special ruin on hypocrites, as the treacherous enemies of his government. If God exalt me to honour, let me exert myself for the welfare of mankind, and prepare for giving my account to him. If he afflict me, let me thankfully believe it done to discover my past sins, and to dispose me to receive his sanctifying instructions; fully persuaded that deliverance and comfort shall appear whenever his merciful end is gained. If my deliverance be delayed, my continued sin is the cause. But if I am not bettered by his rod, let me fear, lest my stupidity and dissimulation should issue in the suffering of his everlasting judgment. In affliction let me never be secure or make light of his stroke. Let me never hope to find out ways of my own to withstand or avoid it. Let me never dare to persevere in self-vindication or quarrelling with God;—never dare to prescribe to him who is an absolute ruler, an incomparable teacher, and unexceptionably just in all his procedure; and with whom neither riches can bribe nor darkness conceal. In the glory of his works let me discern the perfections of his nature. If he makes the clouds fountains to the lower world and vails to the upper, let me view everything formed in them—rain, hail, snow, or thunder—as his workmanship. And while I am here, let me live by faith, not by sight.

ning the noise roars. He thunders with the voice of his majesty: nor will he restrain the storm and rain when the roaring of his thunder is heard. 5. By thundering the mighty God produces many marvellous effects: he does many things in nature which we cannot comprehend. 6. At his command the snow falls, as also the gentle showers and the deluging rains, the impetuous showers and tempestuous storms. By the winter storm he restrains men from labour, and keeps them within doors, that they may have opportunity to consider his works. 8. The very wild beasts are obliged to shut up themselves in their thickets and dens. 9. The whirlwind is generated in the moist clouds of the south as in a chamber; and cold proceeds from the scattering north wind. 10. By God's will and appointment the frost is produced, and the rivers are congealed that they cannot flow. 11. As by pouring down continual showers he wearie the thick cloud, so his clear brightness dispels it; and by his light he disperses the transparent duskiness of the sky. 12. While the clouds are carried hither and thither at his pleasure, he himself, on every side, holds the reins of their motions, that he may accomplish his own purposes by them all over the world; 13. Whether it be for punishing the guilty by pestilential vapours and storms, or for rendering the earth fruitful, or for graciously rewarding his people with remarkable plenty. 14. Stop therefore thy censures of, and murmurings at, the dispensations of God's providence; seriously consider his wondrous works; and think how little thou understandest of the most obvious of them. 15. Knowest thou how God lays his orders or impresses his powerful influence upon them? or how he makes the rainbow-light of the transparent cloud to shine? 16. Canst thou tell how, in his marvellous wisdom, he hangs the clouds in the air, as if balanced by one another? 17. Dost thou know how thy garments wax warm when the earth is calmed by the southern sun and the pleasant gale? 18. Hast thou assisted him in clearing the sky after rain; and in making it to stand fast by its own strength, as a mirror, in which we may behold his admirable wisdom, power, goodness, and glory? 19. Teach us, if thou canst, how to speak to or of God: for by reason of his incomprehensible excellencies, and our great ignorance, we cannot speak of him to any purpose. 20. Nothing which I have said is worthy of his notice or answerable to the subject. If any attempt to describe his excellencies he will be quite confounded by their dazzling glory. 21. And just now men cannot look upon the bright shining of utterance is called his voice, because his will is the moving cause, and the sound is the interpreter of his spirit. So whatever organ the will of God may select is called his voice and mouth, because it speaks to the ear of reason, and interprets the secrets of his Spirit. C.]

Ver. 6. [Great rain. The rains of the tropical and bordering climates, such as that of Edom, are often such torrents, that they are justly characterized as the 'great rain of his strength.' C.]

Ver. 7. [The meaning of this verse is:—He sendeth cold so intense that man cannot perform his ordinary work in the field; and this he does that all men may be taught to see and acknowledge him and his work in everything. P.]

Ver. 9. [Out of the inmost recesses of the south—out of the depths of the great Arabian desert, come the burning sirocco, and the sweeping and destructive whirlwind which often prove fatal to travellers. P.]

Ver. 11. ['Also by watering he wearie the thick cloud'—or, 'He loadeth the dense clouds with water,' maketh them carry it through the air, and scatter it wherever he willeth. P.]

Ver. 15. [It is to the clouds, or vapours, more or less densely commingling with the atmosphere, and not to direct light itself, that we are indebted for the chief beauties of the earth and sky. See Somerville's Physical Sciences, Herschel's Astron., Tomlinson's Nat. Phil. C.]

Ver. 16. [Balancings. So that they ascend and descend in the exact proportion required. C.]

Ver. 17. [Delitzsch translates:—'Those whose garments become hot when the land is sultry from the south (that is, by the influence of the south wind); dost thou with him spread out the sky?' P.]

Ver. 21. [Even now we cannot look at the light when it is resplendent in the heavens, and a wind from the north hath swept along and cleared them. M. Good.]

Ver. 23. ['The Almighty—we cannot discover him; the excellent in power, judgment, and justice, he perverteth not.' This is one of the most sublime passages in the Bible. With equal clearness and beauty the speaker sets forth the majesty, the power, and the perfection of God in government. P.]

Ver. 24. ['In this last speech Elihu's chief aim is to defend God against Job's charge of injustice. He shows how omnipotence, love, and justice are all found in God. When judging of God's omnipotence, we are to beware of censuring him who is absolutely exalted above us and our comprehension: when judging of 7 He 'sealeth up the hand' of every man; that all men may 'know his work.

8 Then the beasts 'go into dens, and remain in their places.<sup>8</sup>

9 Out of the south<sup>9</sup> cometh the 'whirlwind, and cold out of the 'north.

10 By 'the breath<sup>1</sup> of God frost is given; and the breadth of the waters is straitened.

11 Also by 'watering he wearieth the thick cloud: he 'scattereth his bright<sup>2</sup> cloud.<sup>3</sup>

12 And it is 'turned round about by his counsels;<sup>4</sup> that they may do 'whatsoever he commandeth them upon the face of the world in the earth.

13 He 'causeth it to come, whether for correction,<sup>5</sup> or for his land, 'or for mercy.<sup>6</sup>

14 Harken unto this, O Job; 'stand still, and consider the wondrous works of God.

15 Dost<sup>7</sup> thou know when God disposed them, and caused the light of his cloud to shine?

16 Dost thou know the 'balancings of the clouds, the wondrous works of him which is perfect<sup>8</sup> in knowledge?

17 How 'thy garments are warm, when he quieteth the earth by the south wind?

18 Hast thou with him 'spread out the sky, which is strong, and as a molten looking-glass?

19 Teach<sup>9</sup> us what we shall say unto him; for we<sup>b</sup> cannot order our speech by reason of darkness.

20 Shall it be told him that I speak? If a man speak, surely 'he shall be swallowed up.<sup>7</sup>

21 And now men 'see not the bright light which is in the clouds: but the wind passeth, and cleanseth them.

22 Fair<sup>8</sup> weather cometh 'out of the north: with God 'is terrible majesty.<sup>9</sup>

23 Touching the Almighty, 'we cannot find him out: he is 'excellent in power, and in 'judgment, and in 'plenty of justice: he 'will not afflict.<sup>1</sup>

24 Men do 'therefore fear him:<sup>2</sup> he 'respecteth not any that are wise of heart.

Are the dimensions of the earth, with its whole substance and product, perfectly known to thee? 19-21. Dost thou, by thy great experience and long observation, fully understand the orderly returns of light and darkness, day and night? or canst thou direct their motions in a proper manner? 22, 23. Art thou fully acquainted with the collections of snow and hail in the clouds? and canst thou, like me, regularly bring them forth in the winter season or in the seasons of wrathful calamities? 24. How is the light of the sun, moon, or stars so equally and so widely diffused? How is the way prepared for the overflowing rains, or for the lightning and thunder? and how are their motions so regularly directed? 26, 27. Is it by thy direction that the rain waters those places of the earth where no one lives to do it, or which, without seasonable rains, could produce nothing? 28-30. Canst thou form drops of rain or dew; or produce ice or hoar-frost; or tell how they are formed; and how the surface of the waters is congealed into a kind of stone? 31. Canst thou alter the seasons of the year by restraining the influences of the heat and summer-boding stars? or free the earth from the tempestuous influence of the winter and sloth-boding stars? 32. Canst thou make to appear, and lead round, the luminaries of the middle region of heaven

Ver. 1. [No notice is taken of the transition from Elihu, God visible in human form, to JEHOVAH invisible in the whirlwind or stormy cloud. To those who feel any difficulty in identifying Elihu (God himself, see Mat. 1: 23) with JEHOVAH, it may be useful to examine the appearance of JEHOVAH to Abraham, and his familiar converse with him, Ge. 18: 13-33; and afterwards his appearance to Moses, Ex. 3: 2; 19: 9, 16, 18, 21; 20: 18, 22; and recollect that in each case this was the same JEHOVAH variously manifested; and when these facts are compared, the various appearances in Job will be more easily understood as alike manifesting 'the Word that was with God, and was God.' C.]

Ver. 2. [This ought rather to be rendered—'Who then darkeneth counsel,' &c. The words are addressed not to Elihu, who had just concluded speaking, but to Job, who said (ch. 31: 35), 'O that the Almighty would answer me!' And Job applies them to himself in ch. 42: 3. P.]

Ver. 7. [This is a suggestive as well as a beautiful passage. In the lofty imagery peculiar to the East there is embodied the truth that 'the sons of God,' or angelic hosts, existed before the formation of the world in its present state, and rejoiced at the construction great floor-cloth or carpet. The morning light taking hold, as it were, of the whole covering of the earth's surface, shakes off from it all evil-doers. They flee from the light lest their deeds should be seen. P.]

Ver. 14. [The meaning seems to be, that it (the earth) when turned round to the full light of the sun, is like the clay on which the definite impress of the signet-ring is stamped. When all was dark the lineaments upon its surface were invisible, but the light revealed them, and made them stand out in bold relief. P.]

Ver. 15. [Darkness is the light of the wicked. They love it, and work in it. The morning sun dispels the darkness, and the power ('the high arm') of the wicked is then broken. P.]

Ver. 24. [East wind. The east wind of Scripture geography is uniformly that of destruction. See Ge. 41: 6; Job 27: 21; Ps. 48: 7; Je. 18: 17; Eze. 17: 10; 18: 12; Jn. 4: 8. C.]

Ver. 25. [The water-course refers not to river-beds, but to the aerial channel by which the rain descends, when produced by the lightning in the sky; as by passing the electric spark through oxygen and hydrogen gases water is formed. C.]

Ver. 31. [Orion. Kesil in Arabic signifies cold, inactivity, torpor, and seems justly applied by Aben Ezra to the star Antares in the heart of the constellation Scorpio; and it is opposed to Pleiades by nearly half the heavens, and would consequently denote the benumbing influences of winter. C.]

difficult is it to converse with God than is generally thought by those who appeal to him! Infinite is his wisdom who knows all things! and great his power who can do, and has made, and manages all things. All things around us are full of God: all monitors to teach us concerning him, and to stir us up to worship and glorify him! But the boasted knowledge of mankind is vain and scanty, which can everywhere be non-plussed in the most common things of nature. Let me then never contend with God;—never pretend to be a judge of his nature, purposes, or works:—but be always content with things as they are; and to be led by him, as one blind, in the ways which I know not. If he has made all things in nature so well, my new-covenant portion and lot is certainly exactly wise and kind. And if he take such care of the works of his hands, the most ravenous not excepted, it is impossible that he should forget, forsake, starve, or mismanage any of those who believe.

CHAPTER XXXIX. Ver. 1-4. Is it by thy wisdom, power, care, and providence, that the wild goats and hinds are assisted in their painful births, or their young ones so well nourished? 5-8. Or that while the tame ass is so dull and stupid, the wild ass is so nimble, untractable, regardless of mankind, and lodged and maintained in the desert mountains? 9-12. Art thou capable, by all thy power and skill, to tame a wild bull, and train him to the labours of the field performed by the ox? 13-18. Dost thou adorn with wings and feathers the ostrich, that is so careless of her young, that the sun must hatch the former, and him regardless rattle and hiss the arrows of the quiver, the flaming spear, and ruinous lance. With fierceness and rage he gallops over and tears up the ground. For joy he reckons the sound of the trumpet but an encouraging blast: and at the full blowing of the trumpet he dances and sports for joy. He smells the battle afar off, the thunder-like roaring of the princes, and the alarm of war. 26. Is it by thy direction that hawks fly away so strongly, steadily, swiftly, unweariably, and cunningly, to catch their prey; and that they bask in the sun, or remove to warmer climates in the winter? 27-30. Is it by thy direction that eagles fly directly upward, or choose their rocky residence, or spy out and rush upon their prey?

Ver. 9. [The term 'unicorn,' or 'one-horned,' is a misnomer. The Hebrew word is reem, and it is evident from De. 33. 17, where 'the horns of an unicorn' are mentioned, that the animal referred to had two horns. P.]

Ver. 13. [Rather—'The wings of the ostrich vibrate, but are they as the pinions of the stork and the falcon?' The wings of the ostrich never lift her from the earth, yet God compensates this defect by swiftness, so that she is as safe as the soaring falcon. God has deprived her of parental instincts, yet her young are protected by Providence as well as the young of the stork, the example and the emblem of maternal tenderness. C. —This is a very obscure passage. The true meaning of the verse seems to be, 'The wing of the ostrich (renaninim, 'the female ostrich'; so called on account of her peculiar cry) vibrates joyously; but is wing and feather affectionate? i.e. as explained in the context.

requiring no other guide than the halter, when the Arab mare hears the war-cry of the tribe, and sees the quivering spear of her rider, her eyes glitter with fire, her blood-red nostrils open wide, her neck is nobly arched, and her tail and mane are raised and spread out to the wind.' P.]

Ver. 29. [Her eyes behold afar off. The extraordinary far-sightedness of the eagle is well known. It can descry its prey on the ground when, to the human eye, it is perfectly invisible in the clouds; those species that live upon the dead fully realize our Lord's description, Mat. 24. 28, and an animal is scarcely fallen until they appear on the verge of the horizon hastening to its destruction. C.]

REFLECTIONS.—Behold how all things mark the excellencies of their Maker and depend on God! The eyes of all wait on him; and he giveth them their meat in due season. And surely it is absurd for men to boast of beauty, strength, swiftness, or other bodily endowments, when one or more of the brute animals excel them in all these. But, alas! how often are we like them in their worst qualities, like hinds in sinful cowardice; like wild asses in our unsettled temper; like unicorns or wild bulls in untamableness and rage in the net of affliction; like ostriches in stupidity and unconcern about the real welfare of children; like horses in pride and fury; like hawks and eagles in ambition, greediness, and cruelty! But if God feed these, he will never let the redeemed sheep of his pasture want. Lo, in what lofty manner he speaks of these animals! But how much sweeter to my soul are his descriptions of Jesus and his love, Jesus and his work, Jesus and

SOURCE OF THE JORDAN. [Jos. x1:23.]—"Behold, he drinketh up a river, and hasteneth not; he trusteth that he can draw up Jordan into his mouth." Perhaps the two leading sources of the river are found in the Hasbany arm and the Banias tributary. The view we give above was taken at Banias or ancient Cæsarea Philippi. Nothing can be imagined more beautiful than the very vigorous way the Jordan breaks from under the Hermon range of mountains, creating in ancient Cæsarea Philippi a tropical vegetation. This is a very beautiful historic spot. Here is the temple with its Greek inscriptions dedicating the place to Pan and the nymphs of the fountain. Then here is abundance of game. Wild boars, foxes, jackals, gazelles, deer, hare, wolves, hyenas, bears and panthers are said to infest this region.

29 From thence she seeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off.

CHAPTER XL.

1 God challengeth an answer. 3 Job humbleth himself. 6 God calleth upon Job to show by instances of power that he is able to save himself. 15 God's great power is seen in the behemoth.

MOREOVER the LORD answered Job, and said,

2 Shall he that <sup>1</sup>contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? he that <sup>2</sup>reproveth God, let him answer it.

3 ¶ Then Job answered the LORD, and said, 4 Behold, I am vile; what shall I answer thee? I will <sup>4</sup>lay mine hand upon my mouth.

5 Once have I spoken, but I will not answer; yea, twice, but I will <sup>6</sup>proceed no further.<sup>2</sup>

6 ¶ Then answered the LORD unto Job <sup>7</sup>out of the whirlwind, and said,

7 Gird<sup>9</sup> up thy loins now like a man: I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

8 Wilt<sup>8</sup> thou also disannul my judgment? wilt thou condemn me, that thou mayest be righteous?

9 Hast thou <sup>9</sup>an arm like God? or canst thou thunder with a voice like him?

10 Deck<sup>1</sup> thyself now with majesty and excellency, and array thyself with glory and beauty.

11 Cast abroad <sup>4</sup>the rage of thy wrath; and behold<sup>1</sup> every one that is proud, and abase him.

12 Look on <sup>11</sup>every one that is proud, and bring him low; and tread down the wicked in their place.

13 Hide<sup>12</sup> them in the dust together, and bind<sup>13</sup> their faces in secret.

14 Then will I also confess unto thee that thine own right hand can save thee.

15 ¶ Behold now <sup>14</sup>behemoth,<sup>4</sup> which I made with thee; he eateth grass as an ox.

his repentance not being sufficiently full, God further required him to pluck up his spirits if he could, and answer some further interrogations. 8. Wilt thou, in the manner of wicked men, arraign and attempt to overturn my sentence against thee, and my government of human affairs? Wilt thou censure me as unjust in afflicting thee that thou mayest appear innocent? 9. 10. Art thou God's equal in infinite power, majesty, or glory? 11-14. Canst thou, as God, scatter abroad the tokens of thine anger; or exhibit thy frowns for the debasement and destruction of thy most powerful and insolent enemies? If so, I will acknowledge thou canst uphold thyself, and hast some pretence to contend with me; but if not, it becomes thee humbly to submit to my most afflictive providences. 15-24. But destroy him. The mountains afford him pasture, while the other wild beasts securely sport themselves around him. His ordinary residence is under the shadow of trees or reeds, growing in fens or on the banks of rivers. No outrageous overflowing of waters affrights him, or makes him to run off in haste. And while he dives into a river, or drinks excessively, no terror can make him leave off till his thirst be altogether quenched.

To the observers of nature, who have examined the wonderful night lamps afforded by various creatures, both by land and sea, to those who have further examined the terrible electrical powers possessed by others, the existence of an animal whose breath became luminous, and possessed of the electric power of literally sending 'sparks of fire' out of his mouth, will appear never extravagant in supposition nor impossible in fact. Had some ancient traveller spoken of a fish that 'wielded the lightning, and smote to death the wader of its waters,' this, some years ago, would have been pronounced absolutely false, or, at best, figurative; but the student of natural history would now instantly recognize it as a literal description of the gymnotus.

CHAPTER XLII.

1 Job submitteth himself unto God. 7 God, preferring Job's cause, maketh his three friends submit themselves to him. 9 He accepteth and blesseth Job. 16 His age and death.

THEN Job answered the LORD, and said, 2 I know that 'thou canst do every thing, and that<sup>1</sup> 'no thought can be withholden<sup>1</sup> from thee.

3 Who<sup>2</sup> is he that hideth counsel without knowledge?<sup>2</sup> therefore have I uttered that I understood not; things<sup>3</sup> 'too wonderful for me, which I knew not.

4 Hear, 'I beseech thee, and I will speak: I will demand<sup>3</sup> of thee, and declare thou unto me.

5 I have 'heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now 'mine eye seeth thee:<sup>4</sup>

6 Wherefore<sup>5</sup> I abhor myself, and repent in 'dust and ashes.

7 ¶ And it was so, that, after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to 'Eliphaz the Temanite, My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends: for ye have not 'spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath.<sup>5</sup>

8 Therefore take unto you now 'seven bullocks and seven rams, and 'go to my servant Job, and offer up for yourselves a burnt-offering; and my servant Job shall 'pray for you: for 'him will I accept: lest I deal with you 'after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

9 ¶ So Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite 'went, to take a particular view of the strength and well-proportioned parts of the monster which I have mentioned; 13. Who dare strip him of his scaly skin, or put a bridle in his mouth? 14. Who dare open his jaws? The surrounding rows of his teeth are terror itself. 15-17. They, as well as his scales, are closely and inseparably connected. 18. His neesings, while he lies gaping in the sun, make a light to shine, and the water which he spouts up into the air reflects the sunbeams. His sparkling eyes dart, javelin, arrows, or slinged stones can be made to penetrate his body. 30. Without hurt or pain he makes his bed on sharp-pointed rocks, stones, or pieces of ice. 31. When he breathes and tumbles about in the water, he makes it to foam and rage as if it were a boiling pot full of ointment. 32. When he swims along, he leaves the furrows behind him all marked with froth and foam, on the surface of the sea. 33. No animal on earth is referred to. The enormous tail, 'like a cedar,' the impenetrable skin (ver. 7); the great mouth and formidable teeth (ver. 14); his lair among the reeds by the river's brink—all point to the great crocodile. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—If I am so unacquainted with animals, how scanty must be my knowledge of their infinite Maker! If these are a terror to me, how much more ought the Almighty and his infinite majesty! If 10 And the LORD <sup>4</sup>turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the LORD gave Job twice as much as he had before.

11 Then *came there unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house; and they bemoaned *him, and comforted him over all the evil that the LORD had brought upon him: every man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an ear-ring of gold.<sup>7</sup> in his afflictions. Now he fully perceives and faithfully and humbly acknowledges all. P.]

REFLECTIONS.—How serious and humble fellowship with God makes a soul! And it is a great mercy that, when he demands of us answers of obedience, we may freely demand of him knowledge and grace to answer his requirements. If his gracious convictions render us exceeding vile and loathsome in our own view, let us expect that our deliverance is at hand. †Jesus' blood and grace can more than balance our sins. Whom God humbles and pardons he delights to honour and acknowledge as his own. Yea, tenderly he regards his afflicted saints, notwithstanding their peevish quarrellings with him. He resents in the most humiliating manner the injuries done to them by their angry friends: and he often finds them sadly mistaken who were positive of their being in the right. But it is pleasant to see saints reconciled to one another through Jesus' death, in order to their enjoyment of comfortable fellowship with God. And our consolation is certainly approaching when our repentance towards God, faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, and forgiving kindness to and prayer for injurious friends, are become remarkable. God can easily make all things concur for the welfare or enrichment of his people. And it is absurd therefore to despair in distress, when this very book was written for our encouragement in it.—But was not Job a type of our blessed Redeemer? He was infinitely rich and righteous; yet for our sakes he became poor, till he had not where to lay his head. Quickly was he reduced to the depths of abasement: and behold how he lay bearing our sins, and carrying our sorrows, in the stable—in the manger—in the garden—on the cross—and in the grave! Stupendous and amazing were the troubles, the assaults, he suffered from God—from sinners—from saints! How tempted—how reproached—how afflicted and tormented! But marvellous was his faith, resignation, and patience; and undeserved and powerful his intercession; till at last he arose into illustrious and lasting glory and honour; and a great church of Jewish and Gentile saints succeeded and proceeded from his troubles.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

The Book of Psalms is one of the most extensive and useful in Holy Scripture, as it is everywhere suited to the case of the saints. It is at first much mixed with complaints and supplications, and at last issues in pure and lasting praise. That Heman composed Ps. lxxxviii., Ethan the lxxxixth, and Moses the xcth is certain. But whether those under the name of Asaph were mostly penned by him, or only assigned to be sung by him as a master of the temple music, as others were to Jodithun, or to the sons of Korah, or other chief musicians, we cannot determine. Some, as Ps. lxxiv. lxxix. cxxvi. cxxxvii., appear to have been composed after the captivity to Babylon was begun; but by whom we know not. The rest, including those two marked with the name of Solomon, might be composed by David, the sweet Psalmist of Israel.

Twenty-five of the psalms have no title at all; and whether the titles of the rest are of divine authority is not altogether agreed. But when it is considered that these titles everywhere appear in the Hebrew originals, and how often they serve as a key to the psalm, and are sometimes connected with it by the accentuating points, there is no real ground to suspect their authenticity. Nor are interpreters agreed with respect to the signification of some of the Hebrew words standing in these titles. We think that MASCHIL always signifies that the psalm is designed for instruction, Ps. xxxii. xlii. xliii. xlv. lii. liii. liv. lv. lxxiv. lxxviii. lxxxviii. lxxxix. MIGHTAM denotes the precious or golden nature of the psalm; as Ps. xvi. lvi. lx. ALTASCHITH, that the scope of the psalm is to deprecate destruction, Ps. lvii. lviii. lix. MUTHLABBEN, that the psalm was composed on the occasion of the death of his son, or of Goliath the duellist, Ps. ix. AIJELETH SHAHAR, that its subject is Jesus Christ, the hind of the morning, Ps. xxii. JONATH-ELEM-REHOKIM, that David is therein represented as a mute dove among foreigners, Ps. lvi. SHOSHANNIM, SHOSHANNIM-EDUTH, or SHUSHAN-EDUTH, may either signify that Christ and his people, who are lilies, or lilies of the congregation or testimony, are the subject of it; or that it was sung on an instrument of six strings, Ps. xlv. lx. lxx. lxxx., as SHEMINITH denotes an instrument of eight strings, Ps. vi. xii. MAHALATH may either signify the disease, and MAHALATH-LEANOTH the afflicting disease; or MAHALOTH may signify a wind-instrument of music, Ps. liii. lxxxviii. NEGINATH and NEGINOTH denote stringed instruments of music, Ps. lxi. iv. vi. liv. lv. lxxvii. lxxvi. NEHILOTH, wind ones, Ps. v. GITTITH, a musical instrument, or tune invented at Gath, Ps. viii. lxxxi. lxxxiv. ALAMOTH, the virginals, or a song to be sung by the virgins, Ps. xlvii. SHIGGAYON, or SHIGGAYON-ET, a song to be sung by the virgins, Ps. xlvii. SHIGGAYON, or SHIGGAYON-ET, a song to be sung by the virgins, Ps. xlvii.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

xxxii. xxxvii. xlv. lviii. lxxiii. xci. cxxi. cxxv. cxxviii cxxix. IV. PETITIONARY; in which he bewails his own or the church's condition, and supplicates deliverance; as Ps. iii. v. vi. vii. x. xii. xiii. xvii. xx. xxv. xxvi. xxvii. xxviii. xxxv. xxxviii. xli. xlii. xliii. xlv. li. liv. lv. lvii. lix. lx. lxi. lxiii. lxiv. lxx. lxxi. lxxiv. lxxix. lxxx. lxxxiii. lxxxv. lxxxvi. lxxxviii. cii. cxix. cxx. cxxiii. cxxx. cxxxii. cxxxvii. cxl. cxli. cxlii. xviii. Seven of these, in which the psalmist makes confession of his sin, viz. Ps. vi. xxii. xxxviii. li. cii. cxxx. cxliii., are called PENITENTIAL. V. EUCHARISTIC; in which he stirs up himself and others to praise and thank the Lord for his favours; as Ps. ix. xviii. xxx. xxxiii. xxxiv. lx. lxxv. lxxviii. xcv.—c. ciii.—cviii. cxi. cxiii. cxv.—cxviii. cxxii. cxxiv. cxxvi. cxxxiv.—cxxxvi. cxxxviii. cxliv.—cxlviii. cxlix. cl. But indeed historical narratives, doctrinal instructions, prophecies, consolations, supplications, praises, and thanksgivings, are often so pleasantly and profitably connected in the same psalm that it is difficult to assign it to one class rather than to another. And what is HISTORICAL, as it relates to David and the Jewish church, is often TYPICAL and so PROPHEPIC, as it relates to Jesus Christ and the gospel church or heavenly state. Many, too, of the SUPPLICATIONS respecting deliverances from or the destruction of enemies, are to be considered as real PREDICTIONS of the events, they being dictated by the inspiration of Him who can declare the end from the beginning.

To this conclusion the Editor was conducted by a process nearly as follows:—

1. From the confident reference to the Psalms made by our Lord himself.
2. From the equally confident reference of the apostles to the same authority; as, for example, amongst many others, Ac. 13. 33, where a psalm not unfrequently represented as descriptive of the instalment of David on his throne in Israel, is distinctly affirmed by the Holy Spirit to be descriptive of the sitting down of the glorified Saviour upon his throne in heaven.

3. By the evident insufficiency of every other principle of interpretation. Throughout the entire series of Psalms, he found so frequently and so constantly the character of some one so righteous, that to apply it to David would outrage all his history; and which, to apply to any mere man, would gainsay all observation and experience. But this righteous character, in all its various forms of exhibition, he found most exactly to correspond to the evangelical history of Christ: the conclusion was therefore inevitable—this character was that of Christ. It was in contemplating the first psalm that this conclusion first forced itself upon his mind. He had often heard that psalm, by what is called the principle of 'accommodation,' expounded as descriptive of the 'happiness of the godly,' contrasted with 'the misery of the ungodly;' and in this interpretation all ordinary authority induced him to acquiesce. Yet still did he feel himself unable to account for the fact—that the description so far exceeded the reality. 'Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful: but his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season: his leaf also shall not wither: and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper.' In real life he had never seen such a man; he had never read of such a one amongst the most eminent Scripture saints. Why then did the Spirit of God, in full command of all the words of truth, proceed to draw a moral picture so far surpassing the alleged original? This was a question to which no satisfactory answer was ever presented to his mind. Yet this was the very question that never ceased to recur demanding a solution. True he had found some excellent commentators, amongst whom may be recorded the honoured names of Gill, Romaine, and Horne, who had taught that the opening of this psalm was descriptive of Christ; but whereas for this opinion they assigned no obvious principle of interpretation, he found in it no positive satisfaction, because it appeared as much depending upon the principle of accommodation as that from which he was anxious to retreat. It was while thus puzzled between these two forms of authority, in neither of which he could discover any principle of interpretation, that his mind was earnestly turned to inquire whether any such principle actually existed. In human science he readily and clearly perceived its existence. He saw that if a book contained the names and descriptions of a thousand plants, the accomplished botanist might have some search, but no difficulty, in discovering, amidst the thousand, any plant whatsoever, and declaring its name, provided merely that the description were truly and fully drawn. To the inexperienced eye, many of the plants might appear not merely similar but the same; but the distinctive characteristics would, to the eye of the botanist, be as obvious as the sun at noonday. And were there, in the Scriptures, any such simple principle of interpretation as this, how easily might it be applied in directing our inquiries and settling our conclusions. And was there not such a principle, and was not this the very principle—the mere, but exact correspondence of the recorded description with the object described, and its obvious want of such exact correspondence with any other object? Of the existence and application of this principle the Editor soon found numerous examples in the New Testament; for instance, Ac. 2. 29–36. Now in many copies of the Scriptures lying before him he found this psalm distinctly interpreted as primarily descriptive of David, and only in some secondary or derivative and typical sense applicable to Christ. It is remarkable, however, that the apostle makes no such distinction, but directly affirms that it is a prophecy concerning our Lord. Now from what principle of interpretation does he draw this conclusion? From the simple and obvious principle that it is not true concerning David, 'for David (when he speaks) is not ascended into the heavens;' but is literally true concerning Christ, whom God hath 'raised up,' of which fact the apostles 'all are witnesses.' This principle perceived—and perceived it irresistibly commends itself to adoption—the meaning of the first psalm became most obvious. It did not describe any of the mere children of men from Adam, their head, downward. But the moment Christ is discovered, it is found exactly to correspond to the evangelical history of 'the days of his flesh.' It is, therefore, not a prophecy but a description of Christ—a moral, a spiritual picture of his character drawn by the Holy Ghost, by whom the holy men of old being moved did speak; and by which, before he appeared, the church knew what to expect; and by which, when he did appear, she should have instantly recognized her Lord.

The following are accordingly the principal rules of interpretation by which the Editor has been guided, and to which, however unimportant they may appear, he ventures to solicit the earnest attention of the disciples of the Bible.

1. The Old Testament is interpreted by the Spirit speaking in the New Testament; even as the 'perfect day' more clearly exhibits, but does not change, what is dimly seen at the dawn.

2. When one part of a psalm is thus, by the Holy Ghost, applied to Christ, every other part of the psalm must be applied to him in a way consistent with the analogy of faith in the other Scriptures.

3. When one psalm is found, by quotation in the New Testament, to apply to Christ, every parallel psalm must likewise apply to him.

4. When a description in the whole or part of a psalm is found absolutely inapplicable to any of the patriarchs, prophets, apostles, or other saints, but, at the same time, perfectly applicable to Christ, then, according to the principle above developed, that psalm is not to be interpreted of such patriarch, prophet, apostle, or saint, but of Christ in his person, qualifications, trials, warfare, victories, or kingdom.

cxlv. The old and the new meet and blend gloriously in the Psalms;—the old, with its gorgeous but instructive ritual, and its sublime but suggestive imagery; and the new, with its simple but glorious and cheering truths. Thus the Book of Psalms, standing midway between both covenants, and serving equally to the members of each as the handmaid of a living piety, is a witness of the essential identity of their primary and fundamental ideas. The Psalms can never be superseded in the service of the sanctuary. Alike in seasons of deepest sorrow and holiest rapture, the Christian will instinctively turn to them. P.]

PSALM III.

The security of God's protection.

A psalm of David when he fled from Absalom his son.

LORD, how are they increased that trouble me? many are they that rise up against me.<sup>1</sup>

2 Many there be which say of my soul, There is no help for him in God. Selah.

3 But thou, O LORD, art a shield for me; my glory, and the lifter up of mine head.

4 I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah.

5 I laid me down and slept; I awaked: for the LORD sustained me.

6 I will not be afraid of ten thousands of PSALM I. Ver. 1. Blessed is the man. Rather, 'O the blessedness of that man' that man of a thousand, who walketh not in the counsel of the unjust, who withhold God's due of love and obedience; who standeth not in the way of transgressors, to meet them, or converse with them on their own terms; who sitteth not in the seat of the mocker of God's authority and institutions. Has any son of Adam ever realized these three negatives in character but Christ? Is not this then the Christ described by character? C.

Ver. 4. The imagery of the psalm is thoroughly oriental. The 'tree planted by the rivers of water' would not be exposed to the withering influence of a parched soil and scorching sun during the long rainless and cloudless summers. The chaff of the threshing-floor, driven away by the wind from the midst of the rich grain—what a picture of the wicked! P.

Ver. 6. Christ the truth is the way of the righteous to glory, Jn. 14. 6. Satan and lies are the way of the wicked to destruction. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How dangerous is the company of wicked men, and how headlong the progress of sin! They who walk in the counsel of sinners will inevitably PSALM II. Ver. 1. Why do the heathen rage? The heathen nations being madly attached to idolatry and the Jewish people to self-righteousness, united in opposition to Christ, Ac. 4. 26; and for the same reasons all who inherit their principles still persevere in the same opposition. C.

Ver. 2. The kings of the earth set themselves, &c. 'Array or marshal' their hosts—their military power and cruel legal enactments and agents, as in the Jewish and Roman persecutions of the early Christians, or the terrible machinery of the Inquisition in the later days of the Reformation. C.

Ver. 3. The main purpose or object of this psalm is to celebrate the dignity, power, and ultimate triumph of the Anointed One. The ode is divided into four parts of three stanzas each. In the first, the presumptuous rebellion of the princes of the earth is mentioned, ver. 1-3. In the second, the Lord Jehovah expresses his contempt for the rebels, and announces his purpose to overthrow them by the agency of his Anointed One, ver. 4-6. In the third, the Anointed One declares his office, and his resolve to carry out Jehovah's will, and execute vengeance, ver. 7-9. In the fourth, a practical and solemn warning and admonition is given to the whole princes and people of the earth. P.

Ver. 4. LORD. ADONAI, not JEHOVAH, as in ver. 2, 7, 11.

Ver. 5. I will not be afraid of ten thousands of

The agents of hell, Jews and Gentiles, readily drop their private animosities to harmonize in opposition to him! If his cause is to be run down they cordially unite in the work! And not well-grounded fear, but enraged enmity, makes the princes of the earth to oppose his kingdom, which is not of this world. But in vain are all their contrivances and fury. His church, and every believer, is fixed on a rock, against which the powers of hell and earth can never prevail. Jesus' person, as the only begotten Son of God from eternity, and declared to be such in his resurrection from the dead, and the new covenant made with him, are their everlasting foundation. His intercession, and the saving power of his Spirit, endear them to himself. But dreadful is the judgment executed on his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, or other opposers! And if the great are not good they shall receive the deeper dam-

RUINS OF THE SYNAGOGUE AT CAPERNAUM—WHERE CHRIST HEALED THE MAN WITH THE WITHERED HAND. [PSALMS, ii: 7.]—"I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." We give this view of the ruins of the synagogue at Capernaum because it was at Capernaum that our Saviour wrought the majority of his miracles and delivered many of his discourses. The ruins at Capernaum indicate that this was once a place of importance, but now it is in a state of perfect decay and desolation. The ruins extend for half a mile along the coast and as far back into the interior. Here are fragments of ancient walls and foundations. The rank growth of bushes and weeds almost prevent travelers from making careful measurements. There are architectural fragments in the above synagogue which belong to a very ancient period. There are pieces of Corinthian capitals, architraves, elaborate friezes and pedestals.

PSALM IV.

1 David prayeth God to hear him. 2 He reproveth and exhorteth his enemies. 6 Man's happiness consisteth in God's favour.

To the chief<sup>1</sup> musician on <sup>2</sup>Neginoth, A psalm of David.

God favoureth not the wicked.

PSALM V.

1 David prayeth, and professeth to be constant in prayer. 4 God favoureth not the wicked. 7 David, professing his faith, prayeth unto God to guide him, 10 to destroy his enemies, 11 and to preserve the godly.

To the chief musician upon Nehiloth, A psalm of David.

GIVE <sup>1</sup>ear to my words, O LORD; consider my <sup>2</sup>meditation.

2 Harken unto the voice of my cry, <sup>1</sup>my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray.

4 For thou art not a God <sup>1</sup>that hath pleasure in wickedness; neither <sup>2</sup>shall evil dwell with thee.

7 But <sup>1</sup>as for me, I will come into thy house in the multitude of thy mercy; and in thy fear will I worship toward thy holy temple.<sup>6</sup>

Ver. 7. This was never true of David the son of Jesse, hence it must be interpreted of the final victory of David's Lord. The parallelism of this with the second Psalm clearly refers it to Christ. C.—Allusion is probably made to wild beasts, to which David compares his enemies. God disarms them as one would disarm a lion or tiger, by breaking its jaw, or dashing out its teeth. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Whilst I here behold Jesus conflicting, crying, and conquering, and entering into his glory, let me think how often the greatest trials spring from whence we least expected them! from our own house, our near relations! How numerous the seed of the serpent; and how furious their opposition to Christ and his people! But if troubles drive us to our God and our duty, we shall be effectually protected and honourably exalted. Our cries of faith shall be speedily answered from his temple, his heaven, his Christ. Confederacies of foes unnumbered, and savage as wild beasts, shall but enhance and sweeten our salvation and blessings, and shall bring upon themselves fearful and lasting ruin.

PSALM IV. Ver. 6. Who will show us. The word us here discovers the believing church offering the only sacrifices of PSALM V. Ver. 1. Who speaks these words, David or some other? whosoever he be, it appears from ver. 12 that his confidence lies in his being righteous. Now there is none righteous but Christ (comp. Ro. 3. 10; 1 Jn. 2. 1), the conclusion is therefore inevitable: this is a prayer of Christ, the Holy Spirit speaking by the prophet, foreshowing to the church how he would pray, as the same Spirit speaking in the evangelists has recorded for the church how he did pray. See especially Jn. xvii. C.

Ver. 7. The Hebrew word here translated 'temple' was applied to the sanctuary before Solomon's temple was built. Thus it is said Eli sat 'by a post of the temple of the Lord' at Shiloh, 1 Sa. 1. 9. Consequently the use of this word cannot be adduced as a proof that David was not the author of the psalm. P.

Ver. 10. Such petitions against enemies frequently occurring in the psalm have afforded occasion for infidels to object, and even for believers to plead a difference between the spirit of the Jewish and Christian dispensations. With those who sit in the 'seat of the scorners' we may not here plead, but with believers we must. 1. To them we say, By whom spake the prophets of old? by the Holy Ghost (2 Pe. 1. 22), never by their own spirit. 2. Does not God punish rebellious sinners according to this word? Certainly. Then does God ever do what the holiest may not entreat him to do? 3. Do not men, the very objectors, appeal to courts of law for redress of injuries? And may not Christ then appeal to his Father for the destruction of the works of the devil? 1 Jn. 3. 8. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Meditation is the director, fervour the life, faith the presenter, and a reconciled God in Christ as our own, the object, the morning's prayer.

fearful the ruin that awaits them! But their contrivances to dishonour Jesus Christ, and afflict his people, or to deliver themselves, shall be made the means of their aggravated woe.

PSALM VI. Ver. 1. Rebuke me. There is here but one speaker, and that he is Christ will appear from the quotation of ver. 8 in Mat. 7. 23. Let the candid and pious student of Scripture also consult He. 5. 7. C.

Ver. 5. These words are literal facts; God is not remembered by the dead—the dead bodies that lie in the grave, which very death and grave Christ came to conquer and destroy, He. 13. 14; 1 Co. 15. 57. C.

Ver. 7. There is great graphic power, and at the same time deep pathos, in this verse. The eye wasted away—its fire, and brightness, and beauty extinguished by continuous weeping. Dimness as of age creeping over it. All this arising from the unceasing persecutions of his enemies. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Not even kings are exempted from the common miseries of life! But it is hard to support under sore sickness and a wounded spirit at once: and yet God's dearest saints have often the largest shares of them. There is no relief under such a burden but to cast it on God. And when our sins have been great, our castings have been many. The

PSALM VI.

1 David's complaint in his sickness. 8 By faith he triumpheth over his enemies.

To the chief musician upon Sheminith, A psalm of David.

O LORD,<sup>b</sup> rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.

2 Have mercy upon me, O LORD; for I am weak:<sup>d</sup> O LORD, heal me; for my bones are vexed.<sup>1</sup>

3 My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O LORD, how long?

4 Return, O LORD, deliver my soul: oh save me for thy mercies' sake.

5 For<sup>j</sup> in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?

6 I am weary with my groaning; all the night<sup>2</sup> make I my bed to swim; I water my couch with my tears.

7 Mine eye is consumed because of grief; it waxeth old because of all mine enemies.

8 Depart<sup>o</sup> from me, all ye workers of iniquity; for the LORD hath heard the voice of my weeping.

9 The LORD hath heard my supplication; the LORD will receive my prayer.<sup>3</sup>

10 Let<sup>r</sup> all mine enemies be ashamed and sore vexed:<sup>4</sup> let them return and be ashamed suddenly.

PSALM VII.

1 David prayeth against the malice of his enemies, professing his innocence. 10 By faith he seeth his defence, and the destruction of his enemies.

*Shiggaion of David, which he sang unto the LORD, concerning the words<sup>1</sup> of Cush the Benjamite.

O LORD<sup>c</sup> my God, in thee do I put my trust: save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me:

2 Lest he<sup>a</sup> tear my soul like a lion, rending it in pieces, while there is none to deliver.<sup>2</sup>

3 O LORD my God, if I have done this; if there be iniquity in my hands;

4 If I have rewarded evil unto him that was at peace with me; (yea, evil I have delivered him that without cause is mine enemy;)<sup>3</sup>

PSALM VIII.

He seeth the destruction of his enemies.

5 Let the enemy persecute my soul, and take it; yea, let him tread down my life upon the earth, and lay mine honour in the dust. Selah.

6 Arise,<sup>j</sup> O LORD, in thine anger; lift up thyself because of the rage of mine enemies: and awake for me to the judgment that thou hast commanded.<sup>5</sup>

7 So shall the congregation of the people compass thee about: for their sakes therefore return thou on high.<sup>6</sup>

8 The LORD shall judge the people: judge me, O LORD, according to my righteousness, and according to mine integrity that is in me.<sup>7</sup>

9 Oh let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end; but establish the just: for the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins.

10 My defence is of God,<sup>8</sup> which saveth the upright in heart.

11 God judgeth the righteous,<sup>9</sup> and God is angry with the wicked every day.

12 If he turn not, he will whet his sword; he hath bent his bow, and made it ready.

13 He hath also prepared for him the instruments of death; he ordaineth his arrows against the persecutors.

14 Behold,<sup>y</sup> he travaileth with iniquity, and hath conceived mischief, and brought forth falsehood.

15 He made a pit,<sup>1</sup> and digged it, and is fallen into the ditch which he made.

16 His mischief shall return upon his own head, and his violent dealing shall come down upon his own pate.

17 I will praise the LORD according to his righteousness; and will sing praise to the name of the LORD most high.

PSALM VIII.

God's glory is magnified by his works, and by his love to man.

To the chief musician upon Gittith, A psalm of David.

O LORD our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! who hast set thy glory above the heavens.

2 Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained<sup>1</sup> strength because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger.

f The pure air and cloudless sky of Palestine make the starry heaven a scene of wondrous beauty and glory. We cannot in this country form any just conception of the brilliancy of the stars and the soft new radiance of the moon. David was a shepherd. During the mild nights of summer he watched his flocks in the wilderness of Judah. How natural, then, that he, in these noble odes, should celebrate the splendour of the starry skies!—P.

4 What<sup>a</sup> is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?

5 For<sup>b</sup> thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour.

6 Thou<sup>c</sup> madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet:

7 All sheep and oxen,<sup>3</sup> yea, and the beasts of the field;<sup>4</sup>

8 The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas.

9 O LORD our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!

PSALM IX.

1 David praiseth God for executing of judgment. 11 He inciteth others to praise him. 13 He prayeth that he may have cause to praise him.

To the chief musician upon Muth-labben, A psalm of David.

I WILL<sup>a</sup> praise thee, O LORD, with <sup>b</sup>my whole heart: I will show forth all thy marvellous works.

2 I will be glad and rejoice in thee: I will sing praise to thy name, O thou most High.

3 When mine enemies are turned back, they shall fall and perish at thy presence.

4 For thou hast maintained my right<sup>1</sup> and my cause; thou satest in the throne judging right.<sup>2</sup>

5 Thou hast rebuked the heathen, thou hast destroyed the wicked, thou hast put out their name for ever and ever.

6 O thou enemy, destructions are come to a perpetual end:<sup>3</sup> and thou hast destroyed cities; their memorial is perished with them.<sup>4</sup>

7 But<sup>5</sup> the LORD shall endure for ever: he hath prepared his throne for judgment;

PSALM X.

1 David complaineth to God of the outrages of the wicked. 12 He prayeth for redress. 16 He professeth his confidence.

WHY standest<sup>a</sup> thou afar off, O LORD? why hidest thou thyself in times of trouble?

always appears in its full development of such grace as the believer requires under his peculiar circumstances. Thus to Abraham (Ge. 17: 1) it was 'the Almighty God,' when his defenceless state constantly suggested the need of protection. Again to Moses in the solitudes of Horeb (Ex. 3: 14) it was 'I AM,' when the changes of years suggested the excellence of an unchanging God. But to that same Moses, in the midst of the 'thousands of Israel,' the name is expanded, as it were, to embrace all the necessities of the time, and assure the faith of Moses in discharge of his arduous duties, Ex. 34: 6, 7. And when, in the fulness of the time, God hath sent forth his Son (Ga. 4: 4), and the Spirit of his Son (Ga. 4: 6), the excellence of his name is still further manifested in the baptismal title and the apostolical benediction, revealing and glorifying Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, Mat. 28: 19; 2 Co. 13: 14. C.

Ver. 5. A little lower than the angels. The quotation of ver. 5 by our Lord, Mat. 11: 25; He. 2: 6, 7, evidences, beyond all doubt, that it is a description of Christ. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How glorious is the name of our exalted IMMANUEL, and of God in him! Quickly shall his kingdom fill both heaven and earth, however despicable its oracles, ordinances, and professors now ver. 14, proposing to show forth 'all his praise,' and it will be impossible to deny that the psalm is prophetically spoken in the person of Christ. C.

REFLECTIONS.—All success granted by God to us ought to animate us to the most hearty praises and thanksgiving for that and all other deliverances. And while prosperity renders us thankful, our chief joy must be in the God of our mercies. It is himself, as the most High in Christ, that is our infallible security against fear or danger. And though the wicked prosper for a time, they are marked for lasting destruction. And when God begins he will make an end. Thrice happy are they, however poor and oppressed, who have this God of Jacob, this high Sovereign, this righteous Judge for the object of their knowledge and trust! The more they know of him the more they will trust in him. Sweet shall be their songs of deliverance in the church in the ordinances below, but especially in that this psalm is a description of Christ cruelly persecuted by Herod, ungratefully betrayed by Judas, impiously denounced by Caiaphas, and unjustly condemned by Pilate. C.

Ver. 9. The poor, that is, the poor in spirit, whose hearts have been emptied of all vanity and self-righteousness, Mat. 5: 3. C.

Ver. 10. The true meaning of this verse seems to be 'crushed, he sinks down; the poor man falleth under the power of the mighty.' The reference is not to oppressor, but to the oppressed; not to the tyrant, but the victim. P.—Strong ones. Literally exemplified in that affected humility with which the Inquisition was wont to deliver the martyrs of truth to the secular arm, and hypocritically to commend her victims to mercy. C.

Ver. 12. Seeing the tyranny and power of the wicked, and the helplessness of the oppressed, the psalmist appeals to God. He alone, infinite in wisdom and power, can succour and save the poor and needy. P.

Ver. 15. The appeal is here made to God as a righteous ruler. It is justice and not vengeance that the writer asks. There is nothing either harsh or cruel in justice. P.

Ver. 16. Heathen are perished out of his land. This expression refers the fulfilment of the psalm to that time when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, Re. 11: 15, and which shall eventuate in that

2 The wicked in his pride doth persecute<sup>1</sup> the poor: let them<sup>2</sup> be taken in the devices that they have imagined.<sup>3</sup>

3 For the wicked boasteth of his heart's<sup>4</sup> desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the LORD abhorreth.<sup>6</sup>

4 The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God: God is not in all his thoughts.

5 His ways are always grievous; thy judgments are far above out of his sight: as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them.

6 He hath said in his heart, I shall not be moved: for I shall never be in adversity.

7 His mouth is full of cursing, and deceit, and fraud: under his tongue is mischief and vanity.<sup>2</sup>

8 He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages; in the secret places doth he murder the innocent: his eyes are privily set against the poor.

9 He lieth in wait secretly as a lion in his den: he lieth in wait to catch the poor: he doth catch the poor, when he draweth him into his net.

10 He croucheth, and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall by his strong ones.<sup>6</sup>

11 He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten: he hideth his face; he will never see it.

12 Arise, O LORD; O God, lift up thine hand: forget not the humble.<sup>7</sup>

13 Wherefore doth the wicked contemn God? he hath said in his heart, Thou wilt not require it.

14 Thou hast seen it; for thou beholdest mischief and spite, to requite it with thy hand: the poor committeth himself unto thee; thou art the helper of the fatherless.

15 Break thou the arm of the wicked and the evil man: seek out his wickedness till thou find none.

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever: the heathen are perished out of his land.

17 LORD, thou hast heard the desire of the humble: thou wilt prepare their heart, thou wilt cause thine ear to hear;

18 To judge the fatherless and the oppressed, that the man of the earth may no more oppress.<sup>1</sup>

PSALM XII.

1 David, destitute of human comfort, craveth help of God. 3 He comforteth himself in the assurance of God's judgments on the wicked, 6 and in the faithfulness of his promises.

To the chief musician upon Sheminith, A psalm of David.

HELP, LORD; for the godly man ceaseth; for the faithful fail from among the children of men.

2 They speak vanity every one with his neighbour: with flattering lips and with a double heart do they speak.

3 The LORD shall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue that speaketh proud things.<sup>3</sup>

4 Who have said, With our tongue will we prevail; our lips are our own: who is lord over us?

5 For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy, now will I arise, saith the LORD; I will set him in safety from him that puffeth at him.<sup>5</sup>

6 The words of the LORD are pure words; as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times.

7 Thou shalt keep them, O LORD, thou shalt preserve them from this generation for ever.

8 The wicked walk on every side, when the vilest men are exalted.<sup>7</sup>

PSALM XIII.

1 David complaineth of God's delay to help him. 3 He prayeth for preventing grace. 5 He trusteth in the divine mercy.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

2 How long shall I take counsel in my soul, having sorrow in my heart daily? how long

4 Lest<sup>a</sup> mine enemy say, I have prevailed against him; and those that trouble me rejoice when I am moved.

PSALM XIV.

1 David describeth the corruption of a natural man. 4 He convinceth the wicked by the light of their conscience. 7 He glorieth in the salvation of God.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

THE fool<sup>a</sup> hath said in his heart, There is no God. <sup>b</sup>They are corrupt; they have done abominable works; there is none that doeth good.

2 The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God.

3 They are all<sup>c</sup> gone aside; they are all together become<sup>d</sup> filthy; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

4 Have<sup>e</sup> all the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who<sup>f</sup> eat up my people as they eat bread, and call not upon the LORD.

5 There<sup>g</sup> were they in great fear:<sup>2</sup> for<sup>h</sup> God is in the generation of the righteous.<sup>3</sup>

6 Ye have<sup>i</sup> shamed the counsel of the poor, because the LORD is his refuge.

7 Oh that<sup>j</sup> the<sup>k</sup> salvation of Israel were come out of Zion! when the LORD<sup>l</sup> bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

3 The psalm closes with expressions of joy, thankfulness, and triumph. Though it begins with depression and sadness, it ends with joy. This is often observable in the Psalms. In the commencement it often occurs that the mind is overwhelmed with sorrow, and there is earnest pleading with God. Light, under the influence of prayer, breaks in gradually upon the soul. The clouds disperse, the darkness disappears; new views of the goodness and mercy of God are imparted, an assurance of his favour is brought to the soul; confidence in his mercy springs up in the heart; and the psalm that began with sorrowful complaining, ends with the language of praise and joy (Barnes).—P.

PSALM XV.

The proper character of a citizen of Zion.

A psalm of David.

LORD, who<sup>a</sup> shall abide<sup>1</sup> in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?

2 He that<sup>b</sup> walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart.

3 He that<sup>c</sup> backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbour, nor taketh<sup>2</sup> up a reproach against his neighbour.

4 In whose eyes<sup>d</sup> a vile person is contemned; but he honoureth them that fear the LORD. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and<sup>e</sup> changeth not.<sup>3</sup>

5 He<sup>f</sup> that putteth not out his money to usury, nor<sup>g</sup> taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved.

PSALM XVI.

1 David, in distrust of merits, and hatred of idolatry, fleeth to God for preservation. 5 He sheweth the hope of his calling, of a future resurrection, and life everlasting.

PRESERVE me,<sup>a</sup> O God: for in thee do I put my trust.<sup>2</sup>

2 O my soul, thou<sup>b</sup> hast said<sup>3</sup> unto the LORD, Thou art my LORD: my goodness<sup>c</sup> extendeth not to thee;

3 But<sup>d</sup> to the saints that are in the earth, and to the excellent,<sup>e</sup> in whom is all my delight.

4 Their sorrows shall be multiplied that<sup>f</sup> hasten after another god:<sup>7</sup> their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer, nor<sup>g</sup> take up their names into my lips.

by the treachery of an unscrupulous foe, and now they saw opening before them an interminable vista of dangers, which would be the lot of the righteous in a time of anarchy and misrule. But the cowardly fears of his friends, so far from shaking David's trust in God, only gave him an occasion for pouring forth in song the firm and simple faith with which his heart was full. The psalm divides itself into two parts:—the first part (ver. 1-3) contains the questions put to David by timid followers, suggesting flight. The second part contains David's reply, expressing unshaken confidence in God. P.

Ver. 6. So he rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah, which are 'set forth for an example.' Jude 7, and so will he punish the finally impenitent in 'the lake of fire,' Re. 20, 15. C.

REFLECTIONS.—The saints' sorest temptations come as often from carnal friends as from their inveterate enemies; and often the most upright and blameless meet with the greatest malignity on earth. When wicked rulers have once unhinged the fundamental laws of equity, the greatest virtue often exposes men to the greatest danger. But while God is in Christ, in the church, and in heaven, they who trust in him need never despair. Nothing escapes his notice, and nothing shall escape without a due reward. While in his afflicting the righteous he but tries them for their purification and honour, the holiness and equity of his nature demand that his unavoidable judgments should be in a terrible manner reward the wicked.

fill their room. Perilous are the times when piety towards God and integrity towards men cease—when all men seek their own, not the things of Jesus Christ—when hypocrites by fair speeches deceive the simple! But pride must have a fall, either before the throne of grace, or into the depths of hell! And though God for a time may seem to overlook his people, he will never forget, disregard, or cast them off. He best knows when to deliver; and if we have but faith he will never fail. When the saints' night of trouble is at the darkest, and their prayer fervent, their deliverance is near. While God's pure and precious promises stand fast in Christ, no increase, activity, or malice of wicked men shall ever be able utterly to destroy or deceive his people.

PSALM XIII. Ver. 2. The 'Man of sorrows,' who knew no joy but 'the joy set before him,' here speaks while he 'endures the cross,' and bears 'the contradiction of sinners.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—How painful to an exercised believer is the sense of God's absence and frowns! An hour is an age without his love! But the most precious saints are often exercised with long and constant sorrows; and their anxiety and vain contrivances to holiness will be of no avail, unless they have faith in Christ.

ward corruption. And there is great reason to bless God for the riches of his grace, if anything good is implanted in us by his Spirit. How absurdly, and against conscience, must men act when they eat up with pleasure, hate, reproach, persecute, and oppress the people of God, or neglect prayer to him! Or when they attempt to shame and banter poor saints out of their religion and dependence on him! But if God be for us, who can be against us? Secret terrors shall apprehend our most jovial persecutors. How fervent are right desires for salvation through Christ; and how ravishing our enjoyment of it! For now is come Jesus, and his salvation and strength! Let Jews and Gentiles magnify the Lord, and rejoice in God their Saviour.

PSALM XV. Ver. 2. Let him that would search the Scriptures, not to give them a meaning, but to find it, read Je. 17, 9; Ro. 3, 10, 11, 19, and compare them with the character described in this verse, and then say, Is not this certainly the Christ? C.

Ver. 4. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not. Beareth true testimony, even when he knows it will be turned to his hurt. This Christ did when adjured by the high-priest, and, on his own testimony, perverted by the high-priest and council, the righteous was condemned, Mat. 26, 63-66. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Professors of religion have great need to examine themselves. Many have a place in 5 The<sup>a</sup> LORD is the portion of mine inheritance<sup>8</sup> and of my cup: 'thou maintainest my lot.

6 The 'lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, 'I have a goodly heritage.

7 I will 'bless the LORD, who hath given me counsel; my reins also instruct me in the night-seasons.

8 I<sup>a</sup> have set the LORD always before me: because he is 'at my right hand, I shall not be moved.

9 Therefore my heart is glad, and my 'glory rejoiceth;<sup>9</sup> my flesh also shall rest in hope:<sup>1</sup>

10 For 'thou wilt not leave my soul in hell;<sup>2</sup> neither wilt thou suffer 'thine Holy One to see corruption.

11 Thou<sup>a</sup> wilt show me the path of life: 'in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are 'pleasures for evermore.

PSALM XVII.

1 David, in confidence of his integrity, craveth defence of God against his enemies. 10 He sheweth their pride and eagerness to ruin him. 13 He prayeth against them in confidence of his hope.

A prayer of David.

HEAR 'the right,<sup>1</sup> O LORD, 'attend unto my cry, give ear unto my prayer, that goeth not out of feigned lips.<sup>2</sup>

2 Let<sup>a</sup> my sentence come forth from thy presence; let thine eyes behold the things that are equal.

5 Hold<sup>a</sup> up my goings in thy paths, that my footsteps slip not.<sup>5</sup>

PSALM XVI. Ver. 5. The Lord and his fulness, answerable to every need, every desire, is represented as a lot or portion, in allusion to the shares of Canaan, which were divided by lot, Nu. xiv.; and to the shares of liquor in cups at feasts; importing how permanent, unalterable, refreshing, and strengthening he is to the enjoyers.

Ver. 10. Hell, with respect to David or Christ, cannot signify the place of the damned; for thither they never went: but it may include great distress of spirit, the grave, and the state of the dead.

next to fellowship with God that with ourselves is the most excellent and useful. But the more a believer advances in holiness, the more humble thoughts he will have of himself, in view of the pure and all-sufficient JEHOVAH. They who delight in God will delight in those who bear his image as the most excellent on earth. Such as have Jesus Christ as their atonement, and God in him, need no idols or other sacrifices. And if we want to banish idolatry, the most distant appearances of it ought to be avoided and abhorred. But happy are they who have God as their portion.

PSALM XVIII.

David's psalm of thanksgiving for God's mighty deliverances and manifold blessings.

To the chief musician, <sup>a</sup>A psalm of David 'the servant of the LORD, who spake unto the LORD 'the words of this song, in the day that 'the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: And he said,

I WILL<sup>a</sup> love thee, O LORD, my strength.<sup>1</sup>

2 The LORD is my 'rock, and my fortress, and my 'deliverer; 'my God, my strength,<sup>2</sup> in whom I will trust; my 'buckler, and 'the horn of my salvation, and my 'high tower.

3 I<sup>a</sup> will call upon the LORD, 'who is worthy to be praised: so shall I be saved from mine enemies.

4 The<sup>a</sup> sorrows of death compassed me, and the floods of ungodly<sup>3</sup> men made me afraid.

5 The sorrows<sup>a</sup> of hell compassed me about; the 'snares of death prevented me.

soul. It is called supplication, seeking, knocking, inquiring, to denote the humility and earnestness of our petitions. It is represented as a crying, sighing, groaning, and breathing, to signify our great pressures and necessities, and the great earnestness of our desires after relief. It is represented as a looking to, talking with, and taking hold of God, to denote the humble familiarity, importunate earnestness, and patient resignation necessary therein. From the gestures used in it, it is represented as a bowing, kneeling, falling down, or standing before God: and from its 6 In<sup>r</sup> my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried unto my God: <sup>he</sup> heard my voice out of his temple, and my cry came before him, even into his ears.

7 Then <sup>the</sup> earth shook and trembled; the foundations also of the hills moved and were shaken, because he was wroth.<sup>5</sup>

8 There went up a <sup>smoke</sup> out of his<sup>6</sup> nostrils,<sup>7</sup> and fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by it.

9 He <sup>bowed</sup> the heavens also, and came down: and darkness<sup>8</sup> was under his feet.

10 And <sup>he</sup> rode upon a cherub, and did fly; yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind.

11 He* made darkness his secret place; his pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies.

12 At <sup>the</sup> brightness that was before him his thick clouds passed, hail-stones and coals of fire.

13 The* LORD also thundered in the heavens, and the Highest gave his voice; hail-stones and coals of fire.

14 Yea, <sup>he</sup> sent out his arrows, and scattered them; and he shot out lightnings, and discomfited them.

15 Then<sup>b</sup> the channels of waters were seen, and the foundations of the world were discovered at thy rebuke, O LORD, at the blast of the breath of thy nostrils.<sup>9</sup>

16 He<sup>c</sup> sent from above, he took me, he drew me out of <sup>many</sup> waters.

17 He <sup>delivered</sup> me from my strong enemy,<sup>1</sup> and from them which hated me: for they were too <sup>strong</sup> for me.

18 They<sup>a</sup> prevented me in the day of my calamity: but the LORD was my stay.

19 He<sup>b</sup> brought me forth also into a large place; he delivered me, because he delighted in me.

20 The LORD <sup>rewarded</sup> me according to my righteousness; according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.

21 For <sup>I</sup> have kept the ways of the LORD, and have not wickedly departed from my God.

22 For<sup>d</sup> all his judgments were before me, and I did not put away his statutes from me.

<sup>29</sup> There appears to be an acknowledgment here on the part of the psalmist that he had a corrupt nature, that he had a tendency to sin, which, had he not restrained, would have led him into open and grievous violations of God's law. He curbed his evil propensities, and governed his passions; and now he shows that the Lord who had endowed him with restraining grace, had also showered down upon him temporal favours.

<sup>30</sup> Mine iniquity may seem to identify the psalm with David, and disallow its applicability to Christ. But it is said by Isaiah (53.6) that the 'Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all.' Iniquity therefore he calls mine as a burden, though ours as a production.

S STONE CARVED WORK IN THE SYNAGOGUE, CAPERNAUM — WHERE CHRIST HEALED PETER'S MOTHER-IN-LAW AND MANY OTHERS. [PSALMS, XXI:1.]— "The king shall joy in thy strength, O Lord; and in thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice!" This first verse of the twenty-first Psalm is accepted as a prophecy relating to the mission of Christ. We give to illustrate this portion of Scripture a piece of stone work in the synagogue at Capernaum. This view was photographed on Wednesday,

May 9, 1894. It was with difficulty that we reached the site of this synagogue that originally stood in Capernaum, because of the deep tangled mass of weeds and thorn bushes. The relic we see is supposed to have formed part of the synagogue which was found in Capernaum at the time of our Savior, and in which he delivered many of his discourses. Christ performed more miracles in Capernaum than in any other place. We are, as we stand in the presence of this stone, at least upon ground made sacred by the words and deeds of our Lord.

David praiseth God for mercy.

PSALM XXIV.

God's sovereignty over the world.

PSALM XXIII.

David's confidence in God's care and goodness.

A psalm of David.

THE LORD is my shepherd;<sup>1</sup> I shall not want.

2 He<sup>e</sup> maketh me to lie down in green pastures;<sup>2</sup> he leadeth me beside the still waters.<sup>3</sup>

3 He<sup>d</sup> restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

4 Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod<sup>4</sup> and thy staff they comfort me.

5 Thou<sup>a</sup> preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest<sup>5</sup> my head with oil;<sup>6</sup> my cup runneth over.

6 Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the LORD for ever.<sup>7</sup>

PSALM XXIV.

1 God's sovereignty over the whole world. 3 The citizens of his spiritual kingdom. 7 The solemn entrance of the Lord into his sanctuary.

A psalm of David.

THE earth is the LORD's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.<sup>1</sup>

2 For<sup>b</sup> he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods.

3 Who<sup>c</sup> shall ascend into the hill of the LORD? and who shall stand in his holy place?

4 He<sup>d</sup> that hath clean hands,<sup>2</sup> and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully.

5 He shall receive the blessing from the LORD, and righteousness from the God of his salvation.

18 They<sup>a</sup> part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture.

19 But<sup>b</sup> be not thou far from me, O LORD: O my strength, haste thee to help me.

20 Deliver my soul from the sword; my darling<sup>5</sup> from the power<sup>6</sup> of the dog.

21 Save me from the lion's mouth: for thou hast heard me from the horns of the unicorns.

22 I<sup>h</sup> will declare thy name unto my brethren: in the midst of the congregation will I praise thee.<sup>7</sup>

23 Ye<sup>i</sup> that fear the LORD, praise him; all ye the seed of Jacob, glorify him; and fear him, all ye the seed of Israel.

24 For<sup>j</sup> he hath not despised nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted, neither hath he hid his face from him; but when he cried unto him, he heard.

25 My<sup>k</sup> praise shall be of thee in the great congregation: I will pay my vows before them that fear him.

26 The<sup>l</sup> meek shall eat and be satisfied: they shall praise the LORD that seek him: your heart shall live for ever.

27 All<sup>m</sup> the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee.

28 For<sup>n</sup> the kingdom is the LORD's: and he is the governor among the nations.

29 All they that be fat upon earth shall eat and worship: all they that go down to the dust shall bow before him: and none can keep alive his own soul.<sup>8</sup>

30 A seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the LORD for a generation.

31 They<sup>o</sup> shall come, and shall declare his righteousness unto a people that shall be born, that he hath done this.

is generally, as history proves, the reward of their sin. And the ruin of the wicked, or those who reject Jesus Christ, is but the reward of their own sin.

PSALM XXIII. Ver. 1. Forsaken me. These words, adopted by our Lord in the dark hour of his crucifixion, sufficiently demonstrate that the whole psalm is a prayer of Christ. Forsaken is interpreted by far from helping. God cannot forsake in presence, but he may as to immediate forth-putting of power to deliver. Compare ver. 16, 18, 22, with Jn. 20. 25, 27; Mat. 27. 35; He. 2. 12. C.

Ver. 12. Many bulls. Prophetic language, that it may suit all generations, must be emblematical: for words change, but emblems abide. These bulls, accordingly, are the emblems of aggressive power—the ecclesiastical rulers of the Jews, and the imperial rulers of the Roman empire, by whom Christ was persecuted to the death. C.

Ver. 13. Gaped . . . mouths. The marginal reading is better, and describes the bellowing of the bulls against their victim, well exemplified in the cry of the multitude, 'Away with him, away with him: crucify him, crucify him!' C.

Ver. 16. They pierced his hands and my feet. The translation

Ver. 26. Your heart, &c. Your heart, your affections, being set upon things which are above, Col. 3. 3. Christ, who is eternal life with the Father, 1 Jn. 1. 2, will be your life, Col. 3. 4, and give you eternal life, Jn. 10. 28. C.

Ver. 29. Fat upon earth, &c. Abundance of food produces forgetfulness of God, Is. 5. 12. To remedy this evil tendency, the Father, even by the example of the Son, always united worship with eating. So likewise does the apostolic injunction, 1 Co. 10. 31. The same principle is still more specially developed in the holy feast of the Lord's supper, 1 Co. 10. 16; 1. 28. C.

Ver. 30. A seed. Not seeds, as of many, but a seed; the one seed, they that are born of water, even of the Spirit, Jn. 3. 5; 1 Pe. 1. 23. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How fearful is the nature of sin, which drew such tremendous desertion and pain upon God's only begotten Son, when he came to the world! With the most holy resignation ought God's hidings and frowns to be endured, when they are sanctified by Jesus Christ's bearing them as our forerunner; and should be attended with kind thoughts of God, tinuance—what glories of grace—issue from the sufferings of our great IMMANUEL! Himself opens the triumphant song, and exhibits his experience for the comfort of his distressed brethren; and with joy declares his adherence to all his covenant engagements. Sweet is the entertainment of his flesh and blood—yea, of all the fulness of God which he has prepared for the poor, the afflicted, and meek! Precious and lasting is their life who by faith feed upon him! He goes forth persuading the nations high and low, to the obedience of faith. Let then his cause be oppressed as it may, in every age it will prove triumphant.

PSALM XXIII. Ver. 1. This is an exquisite spiritual pastoral, and is a characteristic ode of the shepherd-king. The imagery, taken from shepherd life, is graphic and appropriate. The Good Shepherd leading his flock to the best pastures, to the brink of the quiet waters, along safe paths. His watchful care dispels all idleness.

7 Lift<sup>a</sup> up your heads, O ye gates; and ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in.

8 Who is this King of glory? <sup>a</sup>The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle.

9 Lift<sup>a</sup> up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in.

10 Who is this King of glory? The LORD of hosts, he is the King of glory. Selah.

PSALM XXV.

1 David's confidence in prayer. 7 He prayeth for remission of sins, 16 and for help in affliction.

A psalm of David.<sup>1</sup>

UNTO thee, O LORD, do I lift up my soul.

2 O my God, I trust in thee: let me not be ashamed; let not mine enemies triumph over me.

3 Yea, let none that wait on thee be ashamed: let them be ashamed which transgress without cause.

4 Show<sup>a</sup> me thy ways, O LORD; teach me thy paths.

5 Lead<sup>a</sup> me in thy truth, and teach me: for thou art the God of my salvation;<sup>2</sup> on thee do I wait all the day.<sup>3</sup>

6 Remember, O LORD, thy tender mercies<sup>4</sup> and thy loving-kindnesses; for they have been ever of old.

7 Remember<sup>5</sup> not the sins of my youth, nor my transgressions:<sup>5</sup> according<sup>6</sup> to thy mercy remember thou me for thy goodness' sake, O LORD.

8 Good<sup>7</sup> and upright is the LORD: therefore will he teach sinners in the way.<sup>6</sup>

9 The<sup>a</sup> meek will he guide in judgment; and the meek will he teach his way.

10 All<sup>b</sup> the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth unto such as keep his covenant and his testimonies.

11 For<sup>a</sup> thy name's sake, O LORD, pardon mine iniquity;<sup>7</sup> for it is great.<sup>8</sup>

12 What man is he that feareth the LORD? him shall he teach in the way that he shall choose:

13 His soul shall dwell at ease;<sup>9</sup> and his seed shall inherit the earth.

David resorteth unto God in confidence of his integrity.

A psalm of David.

JUDGE me, O LORD; for I have walked in mine integrity: I have trusted also in the LORD; therefore I shall not slide.

2 Examine<sup>a</sup> me, O LORD, and prove me; try my reins and my heart.

3 For<sup>a</sup> thy loving-kindness is before mine eyes; and I have walked in thy truth.

4 I<sup>a</sup> have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers.

5 I<sup>a</sup> have hated the congregation of evil-doers and will not sit with the wicked.

6 I<sup>a</sup> will wash mine hands in 'innocency' so will I compass thine altar, O LORD;

7 That<sup>a</sup> I may publish with the voice of thanksgiving, and tell of all thy wondrous works.

8 LORD, I have loved the habitation of thy house, and the place <sup>2</sup>where thine honour dwelleth.<sup>3</sup>

PSALM XXVII.

1 David sustaineth his faith by the power of God, 4 by his love to the service of God, 9 and by prayer.

A psalm of David.

THE LORD is <sup>a</sup>my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? <sup>1</sup> the LORD is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid? <sup>2</sup> When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, came upon <sup>2</sup> me <sup>c</sup>to eat up my flesh, they <sup>a</sup>stumbled and fell.

<sup>6</sup> And<sup>i</sup> now shall mine head be lifted up above mine enemies round about me: <sup>e</sup>therefore will I offer in his tabernacle sacrifices of joy;<sup>5</sup> I will sing, yea, I will sing praises unto the LORD.<sup>6</sup>

PSALM XXVIII.

1 David prayeth earnestly against his enemies. 6 He blesseth God. 9 He prayeth for the people.

A psalm of David.

UNTO thee<sup>a</sup> will I cry, O LORD <sup>b</sup>my rock, be not silent to <sup>c</sup>me: <sup>d</sup>lest, if thou be silent with spiritual. Accordingly let him prayerfully and candidly consult Ps. 40. 11, and compare the same with Ps. 25. 7-11, and it must be confessed they are alike. Then let him turn to He. 10. 5, and compare the same with Ps. 40. 6-8, and he will find that he who confesses his iniquities is no other than Christ; no other than he who, though he 'knew no sin,' yet 'bore all our sins in his own body;' yea, upon whom 'the Lord laid the iniquities of us all.' C.

Ver. 6. Rather 'for they are eternal.' The psalmist's knowledge of God's nature and attributes, and the experience of his wondrous mercy, prompt him to this grateful acknowledgment. P.

Ver. 14. Secret—'the mystery hid from ages and generations, but now made manifest to the saints; Christ in (them) the hope of glory,' Col. 1. 26, 27. Covenant—that new covenant promised, He. 8. 6-13; 10. 16, 17, and sealed by the mediation of Christ, He. 9. 15-17. C.

Ver. 21. Integrity and uprightness. No sinner could compose, adopt, or utter this prayer, for the fact of being a sinner implies the want of both these qualities. The sinner rests his plea upon the mercy of God, and not upon his own merits; but Christ addresses the Father as one who magnified the law and made it honourable. C.

REFLECTIONS.—An interest in God and his love is the surest protection from shame and danger; and the more our hearts and desires are weaned from earthly vanities, and set upon God and things above, we are the more sure that our hopes shall not be disappointed. He that believeth shall not be ashamed. God never fails them that seek him. But the short-lived triumphs of obstinate transgressors shall issue in everlasting misery and confusion. When we pray for ourselves we must never forget our brethren. Being by nature blind and impotent, our whole direction in, and strength for, duty must come from God. And none who wait on him as the God of their salvation shall ever wait in vain. Hopes fixed on his everlasting love can never be disappointed; and what others have found an infallible support we may boldly depend upon. Sins of youth, though pardoned by God, ought to be remembered together for our good. Though God and men should concur to entangle us in nets of trouble, and Satan distress our minds with his accusations, the fruit of all is not to destroy us but to purge away our sin. But our kindest resignation to afflictions must be attended with prayer for the removal of them. Though we must love our enemies, we must pray against their wickedness. And while we earnestly study the utmost uprightness in our practice, the church in general, and every member thereof, ought to share in our fervent requests.

PSALM XXVI. Ver. 1. Mine integrity. No conscious sinner ever called for judgment, but for mercy: none ever asserted integrity, being guilty of sin. This is therefore a prayer of Christ, who, though he bore our sins, knew no sin; and who, on behalf of his redeemed members, pleads his perfect righteousness. C.

Ver. 3. Who can boldly say unto God, I have walked in thy truth—not merely man's truth, but God's truth? Adam did not so walk; Eve did not so walk; Aaron did not so walk; David did not so walk; the apostles did not so walk. All these, as their histories testify, came short of the glory of God. Christ alone so walked, he alone could so affirm.—Note. How blessed are believers, to whom the promises of mercy, pardon, and salvation are all confirmed by Him who is the truth. C.

REFLECTIONS.—While here we behold Jesus Christ in a figure, as holy, harmless, undefiled, and separated from sinners, and wash our heart and hands in his blood and grace, let us observe how comfortable under calamity it is to possess conscious innocence. They who trust in God are kept by his mighty power through faith unto salvation; and the faith or sense of Jesus' love, and a due regard to his word, will tend to restrain from sin. But nothing is more dangerous to souls than fellowship with the ungodly. To sit long amidst light, vain, and unprofitable discourse, perhaps steadfastness in Christ or his way must be thankfully ascribed to their faith.

PSALM XXVII. Ver. 2. My foes came upon me to eat up my flesh. When Satan, who has the power of death, He. 2. 14, and the high-priest, who had the power of indictment, and Pilate, who had the power of condemnation, came against me, to deliver me up to the devouring grave. C.

Ver. 5. David never escaped from trouble; but Christ is gone into the heavens, waiting till all his enemies be made his footstool. C.

Ver. 10. It is not to be overlooked that, after the commencement of our Lord's ministry, Joseph, his reputed father, is not mentioned, being most probably dead; and when his mother and brethren endeavoured to approach him, Mat. 12. 46; Mar. 3. 32-35; Lu. 8. 19-21, he defines his nearest and dearest relatives to be 'those who hear the word of God, and do it.' Now that literally, and also in this spiritual sense, Christ was forsaken of all earthly relations, is evident from the history of his malicious trial and barbarous crucifixion, Mat. 26. 56; Jn. 16. 32. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are they to whom Jesus Christ is a blessed instructor, saviour, strengthener, and quickener! He is at once the source, the price, the means, the matter, and the bestower of all our spiritual and eternal blessings. Where faith in him, through his word, keeps strong and steady, no enemies or dangers can make us either to fear or faint. To live near him, and to behold his and his Father's glory in ordinances here, and in heaven above, is the pleasure, the protection, the honour of a saint, and the matter of his thankful praise. Nothing can be dearer to his heart than divine encouragements to intimate and gracious fellowship with God. A sense of his favour is the greatest help and comfort under manifold troubles and wants. His instructions direct to safe and honourable walking amidst the most malignant enemies. And though all men should forsake us, or surround us, yet we shall not be afraid, for we shall have the Father and Jesus Christ with us, and the Holy Spirit to comfort and guide us. C.

3 Draw<sup>g</sup> me not away with the wicked, and with the workers of iniquity, <sup>h</sup>which speak peace to their neighbours, but mischief <sup>i</sup>is in their hearts.

4 Give<sup>i</sup> them according to their deeds, and according to the wickedness of their endeavours: give them after the work of their hands; render to them their desert.

5 Because<sup>j</sup> they regard not the works of the LORD, nor the operation of his hands,<sup>k</sup> he shall destroy them, and not build them up.

6 Blessed<sup>k</sup> be the LORD, because he hath heard the voice of my supplications.

7 The<sup>l</sup> LORD <sup>i</sup>is my strength and my shield; my heart trusted in him, and I am helped: therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth; and with my song will I praise him.

<sup>h</sup> It appears that on this occasion the psalmist's religious fervour was awakened by one of those terrible storms which sometimes visit the shores of Palestine. His description of it is most graphic. It first appears upon the sea, where its roar is heard as it sweeps along from the west. It approaches the land. The thunder-clouds ascend the lofty sides of Lebanon, and the lightning and tempest rend the great cedar forests. It passes on eastward to the wilderness of Kadesh, where its fury is at length exhausted.—P.

PSALM XXX.

1 David praiseth God for his deliverance. 4 He exhorteth others to praise him by the example of God's dealing with him.

A psalm and song at the dedication of the house of David.

I WILL<sup>b</sup> extol thee, O LORD; for thou hast lifted me up, and hast not made my foes to rejoice over me.<sup>1</sup>

2 O<sup>c</sup> LORD my God, I cried unto thee, and thou hast healed me.

3 O<sup>d</sup> LORD, thou hast brought up my soul from the grave;<sup>2</sup> thou hast kept me alive, that I should not go down to the pit.

4 Sing<sup>e</sup> unto the LORD, O ye saints of his, and give thanks at the remembrance<sup>3</sup> of his holiness.

5 For<sup>g</sup> his anger endureth but a moment;<sup>4</sup> in his favour <sup>i</sup>is life: weeping may endure for a night,<sup>5</sup> but joy<sup>6</sup> cometh in the morning.

6 And<sup>h</sup> in my prosperity I said, I shall never be moved.

7 LORD,<sup>i</sup> by thy favour thou hast made my mountain to stand strong:<sup>7</sup> thou <sup>j</sup>didst hide thy face, and I was troubled.

8 I<sup>k</sup> cried to thee, O LORD; and unto the LORD I made supplication.

9 What<sup>l</sup> profit <sup>i</sup>is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit? shall the dust praise thee? shall it declare thy truth?

10 Hear,<sup>n</sup> O LORD, and have mercy upon me: LORD, be thou my helper.

11 Thou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing: thou hast put off my sackcloth, and girded me with gladness;

12 To the end that <sup>o</sup>my glory<sup>8</sup> may sing praise to thee, and not be silent. <sup>p</sup>O LORD my God, I will give thanks unto thee for ever.

evils is easy—this is that very thing, which God will do—and which therefore the believer, even Christ in the days of his flesh, might justly pray him to do. C.—This is a prayer for justice. ## PSALM XXXI.

1 David showing his confidence in God craveth his help. 7 He rejoiceth in God's mercy. 9 He prayeth in his calamity. 19 He praiseth God for his goodness.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

IN thee, O LORD, do I put my trust; let me never be ashamed: deliver me in thy righteousness.<sup>1</sup>

2 Bow down thine ear to me; deliver me speedily: be thou my strong rock,<sup>2</sup> for an house of defence to save me.

3 For thou art my rock and my fortress; therefore<sup>3</sup> for thy name's sake, lead me, and guide me.

4 Pull me out of the net that they have laid privily for me: for thou art my strength.

5 Into thine hand I commit my spirit:<sup>3</sup> thou hast redeemed<sup>4</sup> me, O LORD God of truth.

6 I have hated them that regard lying vanities: but I trust in the LORD.

7 I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy: for thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast known my soul in adversities;

8 And<sup>5</sup> hast not shut me up into the hand of the enemy: thou hast set my feet in a large room.

9 Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble: mine eye is consumed with grief, yea, my soul and my belly.

10 For my life is spent with grief, and my years with sighing:<sup>5</sup> my strength faileth because of mine iniquity,<sup>6</sup> and my bones are consumed.

11 I was a reproach among all mine enemies, but especially among my neighbours, and a fear to mine acquaintance: they that did see me without fled from me.<sup>7</sup>

12 I am forgotten as a dead man out of mind; I am like a broken vessel.<sup>8</sup> ate, fast rooted as the mountains, dart light and love into their heart, and bring forth many sons and daughters to glory, for the advancement of his own honour. He strengthens them against every danger and enemy, and blesses them with that peace which passeth all understanding.

PSALM XXX. Ver. 5. It was early in the morning 'as it began to dawn,' that the resurrection of Jesus was discovered, Mat. 28:1; and then did the late weepers of the night run 'with fear and great joy,' Mat. 28:8, to communicate the blessed news. C.

Ver. 7. Didst hide thy face, &c. Jesus, the Man of Sorrows, realized this sad description: 'Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say?' See also Mat. 26:38. And hear of the hidings of his Father's face, when he exclaims, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' Mat. 27:46. C.

Ver. 9. The meaning of this verse is:—'What advantage would it be to God's kingdom on earth if I should die? Could my lifeless body—my mouldering remains—advance his cause? Could the dust of the tomb declare the truth of God to mankind?' It is in this bold form that the psalmist pleads with his God. P.

REFLECTIONS.—To what plagues and sickness the best of saints are by sin obnoxious in this world! But the prayer of faith is always availing under every lieve and pray amidst depths of distress. And it is not our own advantages, but the services we can render to God on earth, that should make us desire to live! Quickly God changes the lot and frame of his people, and fills their lips with his praise. And it is delightful when high songs of redeeming love are remarkably begun on earth.

PSALM XXXI. Ver. 6. I have hated, &c. Could Christ hate? Does God hate? See, for answer, Ps. lv. But, as amongst men, there is a most unholy love, so likewise is there a most unholy hatred: but this cannot gainsay there being in God and his Christ a holy love to what is good, and as holy a hatred of what is evil. C.

Ver. 13. There is not upon record such a remarkable illustration of the deep depravity of the human heart, as the continuous stream of slander that it poured out upon the spotless Lamb of God—'Friend of publicans and sinners,' wine-bibbler, glutton, madman, devil-possessed, devil-aided, Sabbath-breaker, sedition, rebel against Caesar, impious blasphemer against God, formed the staple of those calumnies that pursued him through life—and finally succeeded in conducting him to the cross. C.

Ver. 15. My times are in thy hand. Everything relating to the manifestation of the Son lies in the hand of the Father. He sends him forth in the fulness of the times, Ga. 4:4; and the renounce everything else as lying vanities. And his unceasing mercies, his sympathy under trouble, his protection from evils, and his increase of blessings, deserve our constant returns of praise. But though the sins of saints may not damn them, yet they often severely distress them on earth. And through much conformity to Christ, in the enduring of hatred, reproach, and persecution, they must enter into the celestial kingdom of God. The wicked often abandon themselves to the most false and virulent reproach against Jesus Christ and his people: but distress, death, and judgment will quickly silence them. Meanwhile, God's present protection of his people, and the unbounded happiness of heaven, are comforts more than sufficient for the saints to balance all their troubles on earth. Often his great and unexpected mercies shame their unbelief and rebuke their carnal fear. And O what reason the best have to bewail their repeated and deep despondencies under trouble, and to encourage others to avoid them! For when we consider our God and his mercies, alas! how cold is our love, how weak our faith, and languid

He next speaks of his companions, and tells what they did:—they looked to him and were lightened, i.e. their fears were removed. In this psalm the writer evidently records the result of a painful experience in regard to the treatment he had received from men. They had professed great friendship and devoted attachment in time of prosperity, but when adversity, suffering, and sorrow came upon him, they not only deserted him, but they rejoiced in his very calamities. So is it often in the world. The faithlessness and ingratitude of men in the psalmist to a faithful and loving God, in whom he found a true friend and an omnipotent defender and benefactor.—P.

1 David prayeth for his own safety, and his enemies' confusion. 11 He complaineth of their wrongful dealing. 22 Thereby he inciteth God against them.

A psalm of David.

PLEAD<sup>a</sup> my cause, O LORD, with them that strive with me; fight against them that fight against me.<sup>1</sup>

2 Take hold of shield and buckler, and stand up for mine help.<sup>2</sup>

3 Draw out also the spear, and stop the way against them that persecute me: <sup>b</sup>say unto my soul, I am thy salvation.

4 Let <sup>c</sup>them be confounded and put to shame that seek after my soul: let them be turned back and brought to confusion that devise my hurt.

5 Let<sup>d</sup> them be as chaff before the wind: <sup>e</sup>and let the angel of the LORD chase them.

6 Let their way be dark and slippery:<sup>3</sup> and let the angel of the LORD persecute them.

7 For<sup>4</sup> without cause have they hid for me their net in a pit, <sup>f</sup>which without cause they have digged for my soul.

8 Let<sup>h</sup> destruction come upon him at unawares;<sup>4</sup> and <sup>g</sup>let his net that he hath hid catch himself: into that very destruction let him fall:

9 And<sup>j</sup> my soul shall be joyful in the LORD: it shall rejoice in his salvation.

10 All<sup>k</sup> my bones<sup>5</sup> shall say, LORD, who is like unto thee, which <sup>h</sup>deliverest the poor from him that is too strong for him, yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him?

11 False<sup>n</sup> witnesses<sup>6</sup> did rise up; they laid to my charge<sup>7</sup> things that I knew not.

12 They<sup>o</sup> rewarded me evil for good, <sup>i</sup>to the spoiling<sup>8</sup> of my soul.

17 LORD,<sup>y</sup> how long wilt thou look on? <sup>z</sup>rescue my soul from their destructions, my <sup>8</sup>deliverance from the lions.

wink with the eye that hate <sup>me</sup> without a cause.

20 For<sup>b</sup> they speak not peace: <sup>but</sup> they devise deceitful matters against <sup>that</sup> are quiet in the land.

21 Yea,<sup>a</sup> they opened their mouth wide against me, <sup>and</sup> said, Aha, aha! our eye hath seen <sup>it</sup>.

23 Stir<sup>s</sup> up thyself, and awake to my judgment, <sup>even</sup> unto my cause, <sup>my</sup> God and my LORD.

24 Judge<sup>s</sup> me, O LORD my God, according to thy righteousness; and <sup>let</sup> them not rejoice over me.

25 Let them not say in their hearts, Ah, so would we have it:<sup>2</sup> let them not say, We have swallowed him up.

26 Let<sup>k</sup> them be ashamed and brought to confusion together that rejoice at mine hurt: let them be clothed with shame and dishonour that <sup>magnify themselves</sup> against me.

28 And <sup>my</sup> tongue shall speak of thy righteousness <sup>and</sup> of thy praise all the day long.

PSALM XXXVI.

1 The grievous state of the wicked. 5 The excellency of God's mercy.
10 David prayeth for favour to God's children.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David the servant of the LORD.

THE transgression of the wicked saith within my <sup>heart</sup>, <sup>that there</sup> is no fear of God before his eyes.

tect, what unceasing provision is made for them that fear him! Though the most ravenous beasts and covetous men should be pinched and starved, none that fear him shall ever want, either for soul or body, what is for their good. It is a great mercy when children are from their infancy carefully instructed in the word and ways of God. And negligent parents, who neglect to and the interpretation must depend upon discovering who he is. Compare therefore ver. 19 with Jn. 15. 25, and the speaker is found to be Christ. And never lived there another who could say, 'They hated me without a cause.' See also ver. 7. C. Ver. 8. But if the speaker be Christ, how can he thus pray against his enemies, seeing that he teaches us to love and to pray for them? This is a question originating in great inattention to things that differ. Phi. 1. 10. For (1) I do not pray for those who persecute me, but for those who persecute the church. But a good God to plead their cause, and a good conscience to witness their integrity, are enough to comfort them. And a time is at hand when God will sufficiently recompense all the injuries done to them. However little persecutors see it, their feet stand on a slippery place.

PSALM XXXVII.

The excellency of God's mercy.

9 For<sup>a</sup> with thee <sup>is</sup> the fountain of life: <sup>in</sup> thy light shall we see light.

10 Continue<sup>9</sup> thy loving-kindness unto them that know thee; and thy righteousness to the upright in heart.

11 Let<sup>s</sup> not the foot of pride come against me, and <sup>let</sup> not the hand of the wicked remove me.<sup>1</sup>

12 There<sup>2</sup> <sup>are</sup> <sup>the</sup> workers of iniquity fallen: they are cast down, and shall not be able to rise.

PSALM XXXVII.

David exhorteth to patience and confidence in God, by the different states of the godly and the wicked.

A psalm of David.

FRET not<sup>a</sup> thyself because of evil-doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity.<sup>1</sup>

2 For<sup>b</sup> they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

3 Trust<sup>e</sup> in the LORD, and do good; <sup>so</sup> shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily<sup>2</sup> thou shalt be fed.

4 Delight <sup>thyself</sup> also in the LORD; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart.

5 Commit<sup>e</sup> thy way unto the LORD:<sup>3</sup> trust also in him; and he shall bring <sup>it</sup> to pass:

6 And <sup>he</sup> shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day.

7 Rest in the LORD,<sup>4</sup> and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man <sup>who</sup> bringeth wicked devices to pass.

8 Cease<sup>i</sup> from anger, and forsake wrath: fret not thyself in any wise to do evil.

9 For<sup>j</sup> evil-doers shall be cut off: but those cast down: for the LORD upholdeth him with his hand.

25 I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.

26 He<sup>a</sup> is ever<sup>4</sup> merciful, and lendeth; and his seed is blessed.

27 Depart<sup>5</sup> from evil, and do good; and dwell for evermore.<sup>5</sup>

28 For<sup>6</sup> the LORD loveth judgment, and forsaketh not his saints; they are preserved for ever: but the seed of the wicked shall be cut off.

29 The<sup>t</sup> righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever.

30 The<sup>j</sup> mouth of the righteous speaketh wisdom, and his tongue talketh of judgment.

31 The<sup>k</sup> law of his God is in his heart; none of his steps<sup>6</sup> shall slide.<sup>7</sup>

32 The wicked watcheth the righteous, and seeketh to slay him.

33 The<sup>o</sup> LORD will not leave him in his hand, nor condemn him when he is judged.

34 Wait<sup>8</sup> on the LORD, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: when the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it.

35 I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay-tree.<sup>8</sup>

39 But<sup>11</sup> the salvation of the righteous is of the LORD: he is their strength in the time of trouble.

40 And<sup>12</sup> the LORD shall help them, and deliver them: he shall deliver them from the wicked, and save them, because they trust in him.

children are not mentioned, but seed—which signifies an entire race—a stream of life from the fountain of the righteous. Now, in this sense, the true sense, all experience verifies the statement. The lazzaroni of Naples are a race of beggars; their birth, their heirship, their education, their inheritance, is begging. So are many of the hapless people called gypsies. But, during all their dispersion and calamities, the Jews have never become a race of beggars; their employments, alas! are often low and ignoble, but still they are a race of workers, and as a seed they of true Christians. There is not, there never was, there cannot be, a seed, a race of Christian beggars. C.

Ver. 38. 'Keep in innocence, and regard uprightness; for the perfect man hath a posterity, but the rebellious shall be destroyed together; the posterity of the wicked shall be cut off' (Horsley). This amendment seems necessary, for that 'the end of the wicked shall be cut off' is scarcely intelligible.

and joys of the godly in the kind delight and favour of their God! All our comforts come from his hand, through active faith in his Son; and therefore he ought to be praised on their account.

PSALM XXXVI. Ver. 1. The form of this sentence is involved. It is dramatic, and may be explained in this way:—The writer introduces himself as scrutinizing the character and conduct of the wicked. His heart pronounces judgment upon them; and the substance of his judgment is, that they are not influenced by the fear of God. Pleasure, passion, and worldly aggrandizement are the great manning springs of their actions. P.

Ver. 4. The whole description well applies to Judas, into whom Satan entered, and taught to betray his Lord, Lu. 22. 3. C.

Ver. 6. Great mountains. Conspicuous from afar, elevated above the clouds, the battlements of kingdoms, the storehouses of inexhaustible wealth, the immovable luxury and ex-shows the power of the devil uncontrolled within them! And they who, when awake on their beds, have their thoughts unoccupied in God's words, will find the devil at hand to suggest evil to them. But how high—how fixed—how unsearchable are the excellencies of God! Unbounded is his mercy—unchangeable his veracity—conspicuous his justice—unsearchable his words—and awful his works! Benevolent and extensive is his providential care. Precious and engaging his love. And powerfully considerate and delightful are the provision, the comfort, the life, the light, the love, the righteousness, which he bestows upon all people. But inevitable is the ruin and intolerable the everlasting misery of all who reject them.

PSALM XXXVIII.

David moveth God to take compassion of his sad condition, confessing his sins to have been the cause of it.

A psalm of David, to bring to remembrance.

O LORD, rebuke me not in thy wrath; neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.

2 For 'thine arrows stick fast in me, and thy hand presseth me sore.

3 There is 'no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger; neither is there any rest in my bones because of my sin.

4 For mine iniquities<sup>2</sup> are gone over mine head: as an heavy burden they are too heavy for me.

5 My<sup>2</sup> wounds stink, and are corrupt, because of my foolishness.

6 I<sup>1</sup> am troubled; I am bowed down greatly; I go mourning all the day long.

7 For 'my loins are filled with a loathsome disease; and there is no soundness in my flesh.

8 I am feeble and sore broken: 'I have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart.<sup>3</sup>

9 LORD, 'all my desire is before thee; and my groaning is not hid from thee.

10 My<sup>2</sup> heart panteth, my strength faileth me: as for the light of mine eyes, it also is gone from me.<sup>4</sup>

2 I<sup>a</sup> was dumb with silence;<sup>3</sup> I held my peace, even from good; and my sorrow was stirred.<sup>4</sup>

3 My<sup>a</sup> heart was hot within me; while I was musing<sup>5</sup> the fire burned: then spake I with my tongue.

4 LORD,<sup>a</sup> make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how frail I am.<sup>6</sup>

5 Behold,<sup>9</sup> thou hast made my days as an hand-breadth, and mine age is as nothing before thee: verily every man at his best state<sup>7</sup> is altogether vanity. Selah.<sup>8</sup>

6 Surely every man walketh in a vain show:<sup>9</sup> surely they are disquieted in vain: he heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them.

7 And now, LORD, what wait I for? my hope is in thee.

8 Deliver<sup>a</sup> me from all my transgressions:<sup>1</sup> make<sup>1</sup> me not the reproach of the foolish.

9 I<sup>a</sup> was dumb, I opened not my mouth; because thou didst it.

11 When<sup>a</sup> thou with rebukes dost correct man for iniquity,<sup>3</sup> thou makest his beauty to consume<sup>a</sup> away<sup>4</sup> like a moth: surely every man is vanity. Selah.

12 Hear<sup>a</sup> my prayer, O LORD, and give ear unto my cry; hold not thy peace at my tears: for<sup>a</sup> I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were.

13 O spare me, that I may recover strength, before I go hence, and be no more.

1 The benefit of confidence in God. 6 Obedience is the best sacrifice. 11 He prayeth for salvation to himself, and confusion to his enemies.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

I WAITED<sup>a</sup> patiently<sup>1</sup> for the LORD; and he<sup>b</sup> inclined unto me, and heard my cry.

2 He brought me up also out of an horrible pit,<sup>2</sup> out of the miry clay, and<sup>a</sup> set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings.

3 And he hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God: many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust in the LORD.

2 It has been truly said that this is the most beautiful of all the elegies in the Psalter. The single depicted here is not a struggle with wicked men, but with the terrors of a mortal sickness, which to the men of those early times were so great, that even the bravest, who felt no fear before the attacks of the enemy, quailed before the fear of death. But even the fear of death could not shake the psalmist's trust in God. Faith was triumphant. The psalmist by his divinely enlightened mind was made to see that his very chastisements were blessings, that all things tended to promote his spiritual and eternal welfare.—P.

10 This passage is quoted by Paul in He. 10, 5-7; but in that quotation there is a remarkable variation from the original text. Instead of the words, 'mine ears hast thou opened,' the apostle has, 'a body didst thou prepare for me.' The original language is metaphorical, and its plain meaning is—

'Thou hast formed in me a willing and obedient spirit, so that I preserve an open ear to all thy commands.' In substance the apostle's quotation is the same.—A body hast thou prepared for me; 1. A body formed and fitted for the service of God, ready to render the fullest obedience. The contrast is drawn between the sacrifices of slain victims and the free-will offerings of a living body.

4 Blessed<sup>a</sup> is that man that maketh the LORD his trust, and respecteth not the proud, nor such as turn aside to lies.

5 Many,<sup>j</sup> O LORD my God, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward;<sup>3</sup> they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee:<sup>4</sup> if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered.

6 Sacrifice<sup>a</sup> and offering thou didst not desire; mine ears hast thou opened:<sup>5</sup> burnt-offering and sin-offering hast thou not required.

7 Then said I, Lo, I come: in the volume of the book it is written of me,

8 I "delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart."<sup>7</sup>

9 I<sup>a</sup> have preached righteousness in the great congregation: lo, I have not refrained my lips, O LORD, thou knowest.

10 I have not hid<sup>a</sup> thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared thy faithfulness and thy salvation: I have not concealed thy loving-kindness and thy truth from the great congregation.

11 Withhold<sup>a</sup> not thou thy tender mercies from me, O LORD: let thy loving-kindness and thy truth continually preserve me.

12 For<sup>a</sup> innumerable evils have compassed me about: mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, so that I am not able to look up: they are more than the hairs of mine head; therefore my heart faileth<sup>8</sup> me.

13 Be<sup>a</sup> pleased, O LORD, to deliver me: O LORD, make haste to help me.

14 Let<sup>a</sup> them be ashamed and confounded together that seek after my soul to destroy it; let them be driven backward, and put to shame that wish me evil.

15 Let<sup>a</sup> them be desolate for a reward of their shame that say unto me, Aha, aha!

16 Let<sup>a</sup> all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: let such as love thy salvation say continually, The LORD be magnified.

From man's cruelty the psalmist teaches us to turn to divine mercy. As a friend and helper God never fails. P. Ver. 4. Our Lord (Jn. 13, 18, compare with ver. 9) declares this scripture fulfilled by the treachery of Judas; our Lord is therefore the sneaker.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE GARDEN OF GETHSEMANE—WHERE CHRIST PRAYED THE LAST PRAYER. [Psalms, xl:7, 8.]—"Then said I, Lo, I come; in the volume of the book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O, my God; yea, the law is within my heart." Alphonse de Lamartine, member of the French Academy, after losing in Palestine his only daughter, Julia, wrote in the Garden of Gethsemane one of the saddest poems, part of which we quote:
 "At the dry, dusty base of Olive's Mount
 Under the shade of Zion's ruined walls,
 In the dark valley whence the sun's clear light

Is quite shut out. There Cedron slowly rolls
 His scanty waves between his arid banks;
 There in the hillside lies Jehoshaphat entombed.
 Instead of grass the barren soil bears only ruins,
 And the ancient trees cleave with their straggling roots the stony tombs.
 There between two high rocks is dimly seen
 The lonely grot to which the Man of Grief Went to experience death before it came."

David prayeth for mercy.

PSALM XLII.

1 The recompense of the charitable man. 4 David prayeth for mercy, complaining of the treachery of his enemies and apostate friends: 11 He acknowledgeth God's favour, and blesseth him.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

BLESSED is he that considereth the 'poor: 2 the LORD will deliver him<sup>3</sup> in time of trouble.<sup>4</sup>

2 The<sup>b</sup> LORD will preserve him, and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth: and thou wilt not deliver<sup>5</sup> him unto the will of his enemies.

3 The LORD<sup>a</sup> will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing: thou wilt make<sup>6</sup> all his bed in his sickness.

4 I said, LORD, 'be merciful unto me: heal my soul; for I have sinned against thee.

5 Mine<sup>c</sup> enemies speak evil of me, When shall he die, and his name perish?

6 And 'if he come to see me, he speaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itself; when he goeth abroad, he telleth it.

7 All<sup>d</sup> that hate me whisper together against me: against me do they devise my hurt.<sup>7</sup>

8 An evil disease,<sup>8</sup> say they, cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth, he shall rise up no more.

9 Yea,<sup>k</sup> mine own familiar friend,<sup>9</sup> in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up<sup>1</sup> his heel against me.

10 But thou, 'O LORD, be merciful unto me, and raise me up, that I may requite them.

11 By<sup>n</sup> this I know that thou favourest me, because mine enemy doth not triumph over me.

12 And as for me, 'thou upholdest me in mine integrity,<sup>2</sup> and 'settest me before thy face for ever.

13 Blessed<sup>a</sup> be the LORD God of Israel from everlasting, and to everlasting. Amen, and Amen.

much mercy to thank God for. Whatever repeated encouragement our feeble minds may need, if God be our God, our life, and the health of our countenance, neither earth, nor death, nor hell is able to hurt us.

PSALM XLIII. Ver. 1. The meaning is, not that the writer desired the Lord to try and judge him as a culprit; but rather to interfere in his behalf—to save him from the unjust accusations of the wicked. The psalmist was conscious that he was guiltless in regard to the charges brought against him, and therefore he made his appeal from unjust men to a just and righteous God. He does not represent himself as absolutely pure, or perfectly holy before God; but simply as innocent of the crimes laid against him by men. P.

Ver. 2. Why dost thou cast me off? This expostulation was exemplified in the crucifixion, Mat. 27. 46, when our Lord cried with a loud voice, as if it were a special thing that all should hear, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' C.

Men never attend ordinances aright but when they have fellowship with Christ as their altar, their atonement, their food, their God, their joy. Intimate fellowship with God cannot but tune our hearts and tongues to his praise. And the more we deal with God by faith, we shall see the more sin and evil in inward despondency.

PSALM XLIV. Ver. 1. The grammar here presents a plurality of speakers, and their statements and complaints indicate a faithful but a persecuted church, ver. 11, 17-22. Occasionally (ver. 4, 6, 15) a single speaker interferences, who, it appears from ver. 15, can be no other than Christ; for no man who knows the versatility of frail human nature can imagine any but Christ truly to utter that verse. C.

Ver. 3. Infidels have frequently objected against JEHOVAH for expelling the nations of Canaan. There are two answers—I. God has a right to expel them. II. He has a right to give them to his people. C.

well be termed the 'place of dragons,' where his servants rule, Ep. 6. 12. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Memorials of past mercies ought to be carefully recorded and transmitted from age to age, as an encouragement in time of need as well as a ground of thankfulness. It is never outward force, but Jesus Christ's Word and Spirit, that build up the church and triumph over the powers of darkness. If we want help in trouble, we must renounce all other confidences, and take God alone to be our kind deliverer and boast; so shall our troubles and griefs be quickly turned into everlasting praise.—It is common, but sinful, for them whom God casts down to think themselves utterly cast off, and to shrink under reproach and suffering, as if they were not our appointed cross. Ver. 3. Tyre, for then could that tyreri have no 'companions,' Lamb's wife, for then could that tyreri have no 'companions,' Re. 21.9. Is not this queen rather the primitive Christian church, gathered to the Son of God, Ja. 1:18; Re. 14.4; and of which all subsequent ages produce but descendants or companions? C.
Ver. 12. Tyre is particularized as the emblem of all mercantile nations.—Note. In the merciful and overruling providence of God the mercantile has been made the great agent of the mission-ary enterprise; and the desire of acquiring the wealth of this world has led to the diffusion of the unsearchable riches of Christ. C.

that all fulness of blessings for men should dwell. In almighty power, by his word and influences of his Spirit, he persuaded multitudes in the apostolic age to the obedience of faith: and by the strokes of his justice did and shall destroy his Jewish or other implacable opposers. Having by himself purged our sins, he, as our righteous Saviour, sat down at the right hand of God, as the reward of his righteous service; and is, in the most transcendent manner, filled with the Holy Ghost to shed on us abundantly. In a most glorious and heart-engaging manner his manhood, mediatorial offices, and righteousness appear in the heavens above and in his church and ordinances below. And his people, adorned with gifts and graces, are raised up together, and made to sit together with him. Faithful men, both Jews and Gentiles, in the day of his power, are persuaded to accept the gospel, to renounce all others, and devote themselves entirely to him and his service, as the objects of his gracious and everlasting delight. In shining robes of righteousness, grace, and holy conversation, each in their order are adorned; and after serving their generation by the will of God, they shall be brought and admitted into his heavenly palace with exceedingly joy. Just as us sing the 46th psalm.' No other passage in the whole Word of God is more adapted for rousing the drooping faith of the church. The thoughts are noble and the words sublime. God omnipotent—God ever present—God infinite in mercy—God the king, defender, and sustainer of his church, is the grand theme of the psalmist. P. —God is our refuge. The assembled church here exemplifies the fulfilment of the gracious promise of the foregoing psalm, ver. 17, the highest praise being that which is due for deliverance from trouble and strength for duty. C.

Ver. 4. 'The holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High is a stream, the branches whereof gladden the city of God' (Mudge). The stream is the truth in Jesus; the branches, reading, hearing, holy converse, prayer, exhortation, reproof, correction, instruction in righteousness, furnishing the man of God to all good works. C.

REFLECTIONS. — When dangers appear greatest our faith in God's promise and perfections should be strongest. If we can triumph in God as our own God we may triumph over every trouble and danger. The revolutions on earth can little affect them whose hearts are duly fixed on things above. They need never fear, and they can never fail, who take God for their refuge and their strength. Notwithstanding all her enemies, his church shall in him obtain joy, establishment, and deliverance. If by his word, his Spirit, and his blood, we enjoy communications of grace and comfort, we are ready to die for all that.

ARENA OF AMPHITHEATRE, PUTEOLI—NEAR WHERE ST. PAUL LANDED IN ITALY. [PSALMS, xlvii:8].—"God reigneth over the heathen: God sitteth upon the throne of his holiness." We learn from history that wicked men are no less under law than righteous men. The laws of God which wicked men violate destroy them, while the righteous are preserved by observing them. This arena of the amphitheater at Puteoli is a very good illustration of the wreck and ruin which have come to the fame and the fortunes of the men who built it, and found, as Nero did, upon its arena, a scene for wild and unbridled actions. Puteoli is rich in historic associations. Scipio sailed from this place to Spain. Cicero had a villa here, and here Nero planned the murder of his mother. This was the famous watering place of the rich and luxurious Romans.

ZION GATE—ON MT. ZION, WHERE DAVID LIVED. [Psalms, xlviii:2]— “Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King.” The Zion Gate is called in Arabic, “The Gate of the Prophet David.” It is on the summit of the ridge of Zion between the Armenian convent and the tomb of David. The Zion Gate opens into several footpaths which lead down to the valley of Hinnom. We pass through this gate to go to the tomb of David in the possession of the Mohammedans. A little further north, near the wall, is the Armenian church with the house of Caiaphas, and between the two is the place the monks point out as the spot where the cock crowed and where Peter wept after denying his Master. The Armenian church is almost due southwest of Zion Gate.

PSALM XLIX.

1 The psalmist calleth upon all the earth to join him in his meditations. 5 He sheweth the vanity of trusting in worldly wealth.

To the chief musician, A psalm for the sons of Korah.

HEAR this, all ye people; give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world:

2 Both low and high, rich and poor, together.

3 My mouth shall speak of wisdom; and the meditation of my heart shall be of understanding.

4 I will incline mine ear to a parable; I will open my dark saying upon the harp.

5 Wherefore should I fear in the days of evil, when the iniquity of my heels shall compass me about?

6 They that trust in their wealth, and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches;

7 None of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor give to God a ransom for him;

8 (For the redemption of their soul is precious, and it ceaseth for ever;)

9 That he should still live for ever, and not see corruption.

10 For he seeth that wise men die, likewise the fool and the brutish person perish, and leave their wealth to others.

11 Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling-places to all generations: they call their lands after their own names.

12 Nevertheless man being in honour abideth not: he is like the beasts that perish.

13 This their way is their folly; yet their posterity approve their sayings.

14 Like sheep they are laid in the grave; death shall feed on them; and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning; and their beauty shall consume in the grave from their dwelling.

15 But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave: for he shall receive me. Selah.

16 Be not thou afraid when one is made rich, when the glory of his house is increased:

17 For when he dieth he shall carry nothing away; his glory shall not descend after him.

18 Though while he lived he blessed his soul, and men will praise thee when thou doest well to thyself;

19 He shall go to the generation of his fathers; they shall never see light.

20 Man that is in honour, and understand-

PSALM L.

1 The majesty of God in the church. 5 His command to gather his saints. 7 The pleasure of God is not in ceremonies, 14 but in sincerity of obedience.

A psalm of Asaph.

THE mighty God, even the LORD, hath spoken, and called the earth, from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof.

2 Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.

3 Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him.

4 He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people.

5 Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.

6 And the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for God is judge himself. Selah.

7 Hear, O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, and I will testify against thee: I am God, even thy God.

8 I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices or thy burnt-offerings, to have been continually before me.

9 I will take no bullock out of thy house, nor he-goats out of thy folds:

10 For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills.

11 I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine.

12 If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof.

13 Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats?

14 Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the most High:

15 And call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.

16 But unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldest take my covenant in thy mouth?

17 Seeing thou hatest instruction, and castest my words behind thee.

18 When thou sawest a thief, then thou consentedst with him, and hast been partaker with adulterers.

19 Thou givest thy mouth to evil, and thy tongue frameth deceit.

20 Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son.

21 These things hast thou done, and I kept such an one as thyself: but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes.

22 Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver.

23 Whoso<sup>b</sup> offereth praise glorifieth me: and to him<sup>c</sup> that ordereth his conversation aright will I show the 'salvation of God.

PSALM LI.

1 David prayeth for remission of his sins, whereof he maketh a deep confession. 6 He prayeth for sanctification. 16 God delighteth not in sacrifice, but in sincerity. 18 He prayeth for the church.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David, when Nathan the prophet came unto him, after he had gone in to Bath-sheba.

HAVE mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving-kindness; according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions.<sup>1</sup>

2 Wash<sup>a</sup> me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin.

3 For I acknowledge my transgressions, and my sin is ever before me.

4 Against<sup>e</sup> thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight: that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest.

5 Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive<sup>3</sup> me.

6 Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts; and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom.

7 Purge<sup>k</sup> me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

8 Make<sup>l</sup> me to hear joy<sup>4</sup> and gladness; that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice.

9 Hide<sup>o</sup> thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities.<sup>5</sup>

10 Create<sup>p</sup> in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit<sup>6</sup> within me.

11 Cast<sup>q</sup> me not away from thy presence; and take not thy Holy Spirit from me.

beautiful model for prayer—logical in arrange; simple,

yet earnest in lanutterance to the deepest penitence, it confesses guilt; with intense eagerness it implores pardon and divine favour; it exin God's pardoning mercy; and it asks sanctifying grace.—P.

PSALM LII.

1 David, reproving the spiteful malice of Doeg, prophesieth his destruction. 6 The righteous shall rejoice at it. 8 David, in confidence of God's mercy, giveth him thanks.

To the chief musician, Maschil, A psalm of David, when Doeg the Edomite came and told Saul, and said unto him, David is come to the house of Ahimelech.

WHY boastest thou thyself in mischief, O mighty man? the goodness of God endureth continually.

2 Thy tongue deviseth mischiefs; like a sharp razor, working deceitfully.

3 Thou lovest evil more than good, and lying rather than to speak righteousness. Selah.

4 Thou lovest all-devouring words, O thou deceitful tongue.<sup>2</sup>

5 God<sup>3</sup> shall likewise destroy thee for ever: he shall take thee away, and pluck thee out of thy dwelling-place, and root thee out of the land of the living. Selah.

6 The righteous also shall see, and fear, and shall laugh at him:

7 Lo, this is the man that made not God

Ver. 20. Christ, who 'came unto his own,' was not only 'despised and rejected' by his brethren; but the 'days of his flesh' were spent amidst the 'strife of tongues,' and he sat as a mark for every arrow of slander. C.

Ver. 22. Ye that forget God. Few are so atheistical as to 'forget God,' as he exists in a mere opinion; but how many forget him as the 'living God,' seeing, knowing, and judging all things! C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the majesty, extensive the high domain, and terrible the wrath of God! And great is his care of those who have accepted through faith Jesus Christ and have walked in him as they received him. But God hath full power to change the positive institutions of his own worship at his pleasure, and to change the ceremonial institutions of his own worship at his pleasure.

Ver. 1. According unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions. his strength; but <sup>4</sup>trusted in the abundance of his riches, <sup>5</sup>and strengthened himself in his wickedness.<sup>5</sup>

9 I <sup>will</sup> praise thee for ever, because thou hast done <sup>it</sup><sup>8</sup>: and <sup>I</sup> will wait on thy name; for <sup>it</sup><sup>9</sup> is good before thy saints.

PSALM LIII.

1 David describeth the corruption of a natural man. 4 He convinceth the wicked by the light of their own conscience. 6 He wisheth to see the salvation of God.

To the chief musician upon Mahalath, Maschil, A psalm of David.

THE <sup>fool</sup><sup>1</sup> hath said in his heart, There is no God. <sup>Corrupt</sup><sup>2</sup> are they, and have done abominable iniquity: there is none that doeth good.

2 God<sup>c</sup> looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, that did seek God.

3 Every<sup>d</sup> one of them is gone back; they are altogether become filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

4 Have the workers of iniquity <sup>no</sup> knowledge? who <sup>eat</sup> up my people as they eat bread: they have not called upon God.

5 There were they in great fear,<sup>3</sup> where no fear was; for God hath <sup>scattered</sup> the bones of him that encampeth against thee: thou hast put them to shame, <sup>because</sup> God hath despised them.

6 Oh that the salvation<sup>4</sup> of Israel were come out of Zion! When <sup>God</sup> bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

lies in its opposition to God's nature and law. And true penitents justify God in all his judgments, however heavy upon them. No person was ever really humbled for sin till brought to see the inward and natural corruption of his heart. It is not outward forms, but inward reality of grace, that God primarily requires; and it is he alone that offers it to us. He alone must forgive our sins, purging our conscience by the blood of his Son. He alone must sanctify and renew our hearts, pour out his Spirit, restore our joys, and grant us his comfortable presence. What anguish and breaking of soul, loads of guilt, and of sorrow for it, can produce! But God who gives the pardon must also give the comfort of it. Renewed souls count the service of God the most perfect freedom: and the experience of God's remarkable kindness really animates to zeal for his glory, the instruction of others, and the welfare of his church. Broken-hearted penitents, viewing themselves as Achans in the camp, are the most earnest wrestlers with God for the happiness of the church. And all the returns of service and praise to God therein must be founded on his special favours, received or secured in Christ and his blood.

REFLECTIONS. — Hardened indeed is the sinner who abuses the goodness of God to glory in his wickedness. Malice, lying, and craft are the abhorrence of God and the image of the devil; and quickly shall they render men miserable in life and lost in hell. Quickly shall those who trust in wealth or wickedness remove into everlasting woe. And the striking judgments of God on the wicked ought to be carefully observed and improved as warnings, while we thank him for sending us his Son so that he is the means of our deliverance. God marvellously founds the prosperity and promised honours of his people on their active faith. And what he has promised we must patiently wait for. None that trust in his mercy shall be disappointed, but ever flourish in grace and triumph in praise.

PSALM LIII. Ver. 4. My people was the specific title given to Israel in Egypt, Ex. 3. 7. 5. 1, and he who so names them here can be no other than Christ, 'the Lord that bought them,' the Angel of the covenant 'who redeemed them.' C.
Ver. 5. There—that is, where the enemy had cruelly attempted to devour God's people.—Who were in 'great fear!' The people of God; and while they trembled, 'no fear was,' for God immediately 'scattered the bones' of all their assailants.

PSALM LVI.

1 David, praying to God in confidence of his word, complaineth of his enemies. 9 He professeth his confidence in God's word, and promiseth to praise him.

To the chief musician upon Jonath-elem-rechokim, Michtam<sup>1</sup> of David, when the Philistines took him in Gath.

BE merciful<sup>b</sup> unto me, O God; for <sup>2</sup>man would swallow me up: he fighting daily oppresseth me.

2 Mine enemies<sup>3</sup> would daily swallow me up: for they be <sup>4</sup>many that fight against me, O thou most High.<sup>4</sup>

3 What<sup>9</sup> time I am afraid, I will trust in thee.

4 In<sup>b</sup> God I will praise his word: in God I have put my trust;<sup>5</sup> I will not fear what flesh can do unto me.

5 Every day they wrest my words:<sup>6</sup> all their thoughts are against me for evil.

6 They<sup>j</sup> gather themselves together, they hide themselves, they mark my steps, when they wait for my soul.

7 Shall<sup>i</sup> they escape by iniquity? in thine anger cast down the people, O God.<sup>7</sup>

8 Thou<sup>o</sup> tellest my wanderings: put thou my tears into thy bottle: are they not in thy book?

9 When<sup>p</sup> I cry unto thee, then shall mine enemies turn back: this I know; for God is for me.

10 In<sup>r</sup> God will I praise his word: in the LORD will I praise his word.

11 In<sup>e</sup> God have I put my trust: I will not be afraid what man can do unto me.

12 Thy<sup>t</sup> vows are upon me, O God: I will render praises unto thee.

13 For<sup>u</sup> thou hast delivered my soul from death:<sup>8</sup> wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling, that I may walk before God in the light of the living?

Ver. 22. Cas' burden. The Father here addresses his beloved Son Jesus, when he bore our griefs and carried our sorrows, and through him he addresses every believer, saying, 'Cast your care upon him (the Lord), for he careth for you,' 1 Pe. 5. 7. C.

Ver. 23. Turbulent combinations of bloody and deceitful men will not be judicially permitted to live half the days to which, as peaceful individuals, they would naturally have attained. C.

REFLECTIONS.—While here, as in a glass, we behold Jesus, hated, reproached, hated, and despised, we such in the church. Carnal policy and selfish ends may carry men far and long in a religious profession, even where there is no sincerity of heart. Earnest prayers of faith are effectual to bring salvation from God. How shameful then is it that they are so little used; and that the stated meals for our bodies are more frequent than those for our souls! It is God's being on our side that raises us above fear from our adver-which visited him were well known to God. P.—A map of the recorded wanderings, or journeying of our Lord, is one of the most impressive sights for the human eye. Of his 'tears,' we know that twice he publicly wept, Lu. 19. 41; Jn. 11. 35; and that they flowed more frequently than recorded, Paul clearly declares. But his wanderings give us rest: his tears secured our joy. C.

Ver. 10. See note on ver. 4. In God—that is, in God, as revealed by his name or attribute of power to Abraham, Ge. 17. 1; and in Jehovah, as revealed to Moses by his name or attribute of uncaused and eternal existence, Ex. 3. 14. C.

PSALM LVII.

1 David in prayer fleeing unto God, complaineth of his dangerous case. 7 He encourageth himself to praise God.

To the chief musician, Al-Taschith, Michtam<sup>1</sup> of David, <sup>a</sup>when he fled from Saul in the cave.

BE merciful<sup>b</sup> unto me, O God; be merciful unto me; for my soul trusteth in thee: yea, in<sup>c</sup> the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast.

2 I will cry unto <sup>a</sup>God most high; unto God that<sup>d</sup> performeth all things for me.

3 He<sup>e</sup> shall send from heaven, and save me from the reproach of him that would swallow me<sup>a</sup> up. Selah. God <sup>b</sup>shall send forth his mercy and his truth.

6 They<sup>k</sup> have prepared a net for my steps; my soul is bowed down: they have digged a pit before me, into the midst whereof they are fallen themselves. Selah.

7 My<sup>i</sup> heart is fixed,<sup>5</sup> O God, my heart is fixed; I will sing and give praise.<sup>6</sup>

8 Awake<sup>n</sup> up, my glory;<sup>7</sup> awake, psaltery and harp: I myself will awake early.

9 I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people;<sup>8</sup> I will sing unto thee among the nations:

10 For<sup>o</sup> thy mercy is great unto the heavens,<sup>9</sup> and thy truth unto the clouds.

11 Be<sup>p</sup> thou exalted, O God, above the heavens; let thy glory be above all the earth.

PSALM LVIII.

1 David reproving wicked judges, 3 describeth the nature of the wicked, 6 and devoteth them to God's judgments, 10 whereat the righteous shall rejoice.

Saints may, nay must, weep in prayer for a time; but God regards every word, every tear; and will soon make them issue in praise to the weepers and in lasting ruin to their enemies. It is reasonable then that vows made, as well as mercies received, should animate us to trust in, pray to, serve and praise him, while we live in the enjoyment of the light of his countenance.

PSALM LVII. Ver. 2. This psalm being quoted, Ro. 15. 9, forms a key for opening the true meaning of many parallel psalms. The complainant is there found to be Christ, offering prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, He. 5. 7. C.

Ver. 3. Messiah was reproached with meanness of rank, want of literature, base companionship, madness, leaguings with devils, sedition, blasphemy; and finally with death.

THE WALLS OF TIBERIAS—NEAR HAMATH, OF OLD TESTAMENT TIMES. [Psalms., lxxviii:27.]—"There is little Benjamin with their ruler, the princes of Judah and their council, the princes of Zebulun, and the princes of Naphtali." Tiberias was a city of Zebulun, and was formerly occupied, according to Joshua, xix:35, by Rakkath, and is also near the hot baths referred to in Joshua, xix:35 as Hamath. The walls of the city were rebuilt by Justinian.

The city was captured by the Persians under Khosroes in 614 B. C. In 1738 Dhahr-el-Amr built a fort on the hill north of Tiberias and repaired the walls of the city, which suffered terrible damage through the earthquake of 1837. There are now in Tiberias about six thousand people, four thousand of whom are Jews, three hundred are Christians and the rest Moslems. This is one of the four sacred cities of the Jews in Palestine.

4 They <sup>run</sup> and prepare themselves without my fault: <sup>awake</sup> to help me,<sup>3</sup> and behold.

6 They<sup>7</sup> return at evening: they make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city.

7 Behold, <sup>they</sup> belch out with their mouth: <sup>swords</sup> are in their lips: for <sup>who</sup>, say they, doth hear?

8 But thou, O LORD, shalt <sup>laugh</sup> at them; thou shalt have all the heathen in derision.

9 <sup>Because</sup> of his strength<sup>7</sup> will I wait upon thee: for God <sup>is</sup> my defence.<sup>8</sup>

10 The<sup>9</sup> God of my mercy shall prevent me: God<sup>9</sup> shall let me see my <sup>desire</sup> upon mine enemies.<sup>9</sup>

11 Slay<sup>4</sup> them not, lest my people forget: scatter<sup>u</sup> them by thy power; and bring them down, O LORD our shield.

12 For<sup>o</sup> the sin of their mouth, and the words of their lips, let them even be taken in their pride; and for cursing and lying <sup>which</sup> they speak.

13 Consume<sup>2</sup> them in wrath, consume them, that they <sup>may</sup> not be;<sup>1</sup> and<sup>v</sup> let them know that God ruleth in Jacob unto the ends of the earth. Selah.<sup>2</sup>

14 And <sup>at</sup> evening let them return; and let them make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city.

15 Let them wander up and down for meat,<sup>3</sup> and grudge if they be not satisfied.<sup>4</sup>

16 But<sup>a</sup> I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning: for thou<sup>b</sup> hast been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble.

17 Unto<sup>c</sup> thee, O my strength, will I sing: for God <sup>is</sup> my defence, and the God of my mercy.

PSALM LX.

1 David, complaining to God of former judgments, 4 now, upon better hope, prayeth for deliverance. 6 Comforting himself in God's promises, he craveth that help whereon he trusteth.

To the chief musician <sup>upon</sup> Shushan-eduth, Michtam<sup>1</sup> of David, to teach; when he strove with Aram-naharaim and with Aram-zobah,<sup>2</sup> when Joab returned, and smote of Edom in the Valley of Salt twelve thousand.

O GOD, <sup>thou</sup> hast cast us off, thou hast scattered<sup>3</sup> us, thou hast been displeased; O<sup>c</sup> turn thyself to us again.

PSALM LXI.

1 David fleeth to God in prayer upon his former experience. 4 He voweth perpetual service unto him, because of past, and in prospect of future mercies.

2 From<sup>c</sup> the end of the earth<sup>1</sup> will I cry unto thee, when <sup>a</sup>my heart is overwhelmed: lead me to <sup>the</sup> Rock <sup>that</sup> is higher than I.

8 So<sup>a</sup> will I sing praise unto thy name for ever, that I may daily perform my vows.

PSALM LXII.

1 David, professing his confidence in God, discourageth his enemies. 5 In the same confidence he encourageth the godly. 9 No trust is to be put in worldly things. 11 Power and mercy belong to God.

To the chief musician, a Psalm of David.

5 My soul, *i*wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him.

6 He<sup>k</sup> only is my rock and my salvation; he is my defence: I shall not be moved.

7 In God is my salvation and my 'glory: the rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God.

PSALM LXIII.

1 David's thirst after God. 4 His manner of blessing God. 9 His confidence of his enemies' destruction, and of his own rejoicing.

A psalm of David, 'when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou<sup>b</sup> art my God; 'early will I seek thee: my soul<sup>a</sup> thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and 'thirsty 'land, where no water is;

2 To<sup>c</sup> see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary.

3 Because 'thy loving-kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.

4 Thus 'will I bless thee while I live: I will 'lift up my hands in thy name.

5 My soul shall be 'satisfied as with 'marrow

the restoration, the emblem also of the spiritual endowment and temporal blessedness of the Gentile church. C.

Ver. 6. Shechem was the first place in Canaan where ground was purchased for the permanent erection of the altar El-elohe-Israel, Ge. 33. 19. It was also the place to which Joshua summoned the tribes, and where they ratified their covenant with God, Jos. 24. 1, 25. It was also a city of refuge, Jos. 20. 7. It literally signifies a portion. From which four particulars, the meaning of the promise may be fully gathered. C.

Ver. 8. Washpot, or basin; not a phrase of contempt, or sign of servility, but rather of tender friendship and hospitable entertainment, see Lu. 7. 44; Jn. 13. 14, 15.—Cast my shoe. This phrase some interpret of taking possession; others of servile subjugation; is it not rather a token of friendly visitation, and peaceful entering into all the dwellings of the land, according to the eastern custom of putting off the shoes at the entrance of a dwelling or chamber?—Philistia! land of hereditary enemies, triumph in my victory of love that has conquered thy enmity. C.

Ver. 11. Vain is the help of man. Hence we learn that the victory expected is not that which can be wrought by the power or wrath of man—and not a victory over the literal Moab, Edom, and Philistia, but a spiritual victory of truth and love over the enemies of Jesus, represented by those nations. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What terrible rejection of God, what fearful convulsions and miseries in nations and churches, are occasioned by sin! But the deeper our distresses are, the more is the power and grace of our God magnified in our deliverance. Not David raised to a throne, according to promise, but Jesus exalted to his Father's right hand, and manifested in the truth of the gospel, is our banner displayed,—our means of victory and deliverance: let us then look to him and be saved. If sin has made deadly breaches, the sovereign grace of God can repair them. If we turn to him in prayer we may expect his return in mercy to us. Having loved us freely his right hand can save us. Our deliverance may be delayed, but faith triumphs. While Jesus subdues his opposers in mercy, or destroys all opposition, let us gladly receive him, and every promised blessing of grace or glory will necessarily follow. It may often happen that our bitterest enemies become our friends. At his pleasure he can from God's sanctuary. If written by David, as is probable, it must have been during Absalom's rebellion. Even then, when in trouble and in imminent danger, his faith in God does not desert him. Sustained by it he rises above temporary calamities and predicts his triumphant return to his home, and concludes with the noble declaration, 'So will I sing praise unto thy name for ever; that I may daily perform my vows.' P.—Higher than I. He that was 'in the form of God,' and who 'counted it not robbery to be equal with God,' having taken 'the form of a servant, and humbled himself,' uses these words, sustained by 'the joy set before him,' Phi. 2. 6-11; He. 12. 2. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Often are the saints overwhelmed with their sense of sin, their troubles, temptations, and fears. But whatever we be, and in whatever condition, a throne of grace and a prayer-hearing God are at hand to apply to. Jesus, the establishing and protecting Rock, is near; and his Word and Spirit are ready to lead us to him. And every former experience of protection or deliverance ought to encourage our flight to his refuge. Our trusting to his promises, perfectings, and providences, and our cordial worship of him here, will issue in our being for ever with him in his mansions of glory above.—God hears our prayers, regards our vows, and will provide for us everything good. We are heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ. Since King Jesus for ever lives, for ever sits enthroned amidst mercy and truth, we may confidently expect to live and reign with him in everlasting felicity and praise. Let then the vows which we have made be conscientiously performed; and let praising of God and paying of our vows be our daily employment.

PSALM LXII. Ver. 1. The speaker is one who boldly affirms, ver. 6, 'I shall not be moved.' He who can so speak cannot be David the son of Jesse, who was subject to so many vicissitudes; but his greater Son, who was never 'moved' from his purpose of grace, and cannot be 'moved' from his kingdom of glory. C.

Ver. 3. The second clause of this verse may be translated as follows:—'How long will ye assail (or attempt to slay)? all of you shall be as a bowing wall, a tottering fence; that is, though you attempt my life, ye shall fail, ye shall fall, ye shall be destroyed.' C.

finisher of all our salvation. In so doing corruptions and temptations can shake us, but not drive us, either fully or finally, from grace. While liars and traitors meet with destruction from God, they who trust in him may defy hell or death to hurt them. In him they are saved, secured, strengthened, and protected; and in him, not in themselves, do they glory. The more their faith in him is exercised the stronger it becomes. The more we trust in men, or in worldly enjoyments, the more disappointment and hurt we shall meet with. But the more we depend on, cry to, or consider God, we shall find the more pleasure, safety, and comfort. The mercy and power which we see in him shall be employed to furnish, protect, and reward us, and to cut off our enemies.

PSALM LXIII. Ver. 1. David was away from the sanctuary when this psalm was written. It expresses the earnest longing desire of his soul for communion with God once again in his courts. The imagery is graphic. The desert traveller can fully realize it. As one longs for water in the parched wilderness, where the heaven is as brass and the earth as iron, so the psalmist longs for God. P.—On comparing Ac. 4. 25, 26 with Ps. ii.; 61. 66; 63. 11, there can remain no doubt that the King who speaks in this psalm is the Son of God, with whose supplications in the days of his flesh the ancient church was thus prophetically edified. C.

Ver. 2. This exactly corresponds with the prayer of our Lord, Jn. 17. 5, 'And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory that I had with thee before the world was.' C.

Ver. 11. Every one that sweareth by him shall glory. Every one that reverences his name, and acknowledges his omniscience and judgment. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What a dry and barren wilderness is this world, with nothing in it that can satisfy the longings of a soul! And the more we find of the emptiness of created enjoyments the more we should fly to the fulness of God, as our God and all-sufficient portion. They who have experienced fellowship with him, and discoveries of his glory in public ordinances, and fatness; <sup>2</sup>and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips;

6 When I <sup>1</sup>remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night-watches.

7 Because<sup>a</sup> thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings<sup>4</sup> will I rejoice.

9 But<sup>a</sup> those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.

10 They shall <sup>1</sup>fall by the sword:<sup>5</sup> they shall be a <sup>1</sup>'portion for foxes.<sup>6</sup>

11 But the <sup>1</sup>'king shall rejoice in God; every one that <sup>1</sup>'swareth by him shall glory: <sup>2</sup>'but the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

PSALM LXIV.

<sup>1</sup> David prayeth for deliverance, complaining of his enemies. <sup>7</sup> He promiseth himself to see such an evident destruction of his enemies, that the righteous shall rejoice at it.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

HEAR my<sup>a</sup> voice, O God, in my prayer: preserve<sup>b</sup> my life from fear of the enemy.

2 Hide<sup>a</sup> me from the <sup>1</sup>'secret counsel of the wicked; from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity:

3 Who<sup>a</sup> whet their tongue like a sword, and bend their bows to shoot their arrows, even bitter words;

4 That they may shoot <sup>1</sup>'in secret at the perfect: <sup>2</sup>'suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.

7 But<sup>a</sup> God shall shoot at them with an arrow: suddenly shall they be wounded.<sup>6</sup>

8 So they <sup>1</sup>'shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves:<sup>7</sup> all<sup>p</sup> that see them shall flee away.<sup>8</sup>

9 And <sup>1</sup>'all men shall fear, and shall declare the work of God: for they shall <sup>1</sup>'wisely consider of his doing.

PSALM LXV.

To the chief musician, A psalm and song of David.

2 O thou <sup>1</sup>'that hearest prayer, unto thee shall <sup>1</sup>'all flesh come.

3 <sup>1</sup>'Iniquities<sup>2</sup> prevail against me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.

4 Blessed<sup>3</sup> is the man whom thou choosest, and causeth to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be <sup>1</sup>'satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple.<sup>3</sup>

6 Which by his strength <sup>1</sup>'setteth fast the mountains; being <sup>1</sup>'girded with power:

7 Which <sup>1</sup>'stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the <sup>1</sup>'tumult of the people.

10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly; thou settlest the furrows thereof;<sup>7</sup> thou makest it soft<sup>8</sup> with showers; thou <sup>1</sup>'blessest the springing thereof:

12 They<sup>a</sup> drop upon the pastures of the wilderness; and the little hills<sup>3</sup> rejoice on every side.<sup>4</sup> discouragers shall be filled with astonishment, and struck into endless silence and confusion.

PSALM LXIV. Ver. 1. The exact similarity of this psalm to Ps. lxxiii. is sufficient external evidence that it is a prophetic prayer of Messiah; but there is an internal evidence that renders other proof unnecessary. The speaker (ver. 4) describes himself as the perfect, a description utterly inapplicable to any sinful man, and true only of the Christ. C.

REFLECTIONS.—A believer's troubles and enemies often fill his heart with fear, and drive him to his prayers. And in every age and place the bitterest the wicked, and their horrid imprecations, shall draw down judgment on their own heads. And it is our wisdom to profit by the judgments of others. Too often warnings are lost through inconsideration. Even persecutors ought to learn and tremble while the door of mercy is yet open. And saints should rejoice in God's manifestation of his power and justice, and in their own deliverance; and trust in him, and make him their glory.

PSALM LXV. Ver. 1. Praise waiteth for thee, O God in earth, so barbarous as to deny the being and power of God. God's tokens in the heavens, in the seasons, in thunder, in earthquakes, and storms, produce in the ignorant a superstitious terror, and in the most instructed and pious humble and reverential awe. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Patient expectations for God shall be succeeded with joyful praises of him in his church and ordinances. And candid vows must be followed with conscientious fulfilment. God's readiness to hear prayer should encourage every one earnestly and hopefully to address him in every case: and sense of loading

PSALM LXVI.

1 David exhorteth to praise God, 5 to observe the great works, 8 to bless him for his gracious benefits. 13 He voweth for himself religious service to God. 16 He declareth God's special goodness to himself.

To the chief musician, A song or psalm.

MAKE a joyful noise unto God, <sup>1</sup>all ye lands:<sup>2</sup>

2 Sing<sup>a</sup> forth the honour of his name; make his praise glorious.

3 Say <sup>b</sup>unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works! <sup>c</sup>through the greatness of thy power<sup>3</sup> shall thine enemies <sup>d</sup>submit themselves<sup>5</sup> unto thee.

4 All<sup>d</sup> the earth shall worship thee, and shall sing unto thee; they shall sing to thy name. Selah.<sup>6</sup>

5 Come<sup>e</sup> and see the works of God: he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men.

6 He<sup>g</sup> turned the sea into dry land: they went through the flood on foot: there did we rejoice in him.

7 He<sup>h</sup> ruleth by his power for ever; <sup>i</sup>his eyes behold the nations: <sup>j</sup>let not the rebellious exalt themselves. Selah.

8 O<sup>k</sup> bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard;

9 Which holdeth<sup>7</sup> our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved.

10 For<sup>s</sup> thou, O God, <sup>t</sup>hast proved us: thou hast tried us, as silver is tried.

11 Thou <sup>u</sup>broughtest us into the net;<sup>9</sup> thou laidest affliction upon our loins.

12 Thou hast caused men <sup>v</sup>to ride over our heads: we went <sup>w</sup>through fire and through water; but thou broughtest us out into a wealthy<sup>1</sup> place.

13 I<sup>a</sup> will go into thy house with burnt-offerings; I will pay thee my vows, 14 Which my lips have uttered,<sup>2</sup> and my mouth hath spoken, <sup>x</sup>when I was in trouble.

15 I will offer unto thee burnt-sacrifices of fatlings,<sup>3</sup> with the incense of rams; I will offer bullocks with goats. Selah.<sup>4</sup>

16 Come<sup>a</sup> and hear, all ye that fear God,

1 A prayer at the removing of the ark. 4 An exhortation to praise God for his mercies, 7 for his care of the church, 19 and for his great works.

To the chief musician, A psalm or song of David.

He prohibits the use of arms, and the use of 23 Let<sup>a</sup> their eyes be darkened, that they see not; and make their loins continually to shake.

24 Pour<sup>a</sup> out thine indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.

25 Let their habitation<sup>4</sup> be desolate; and let none dwell<sup>5</sup> in their tents.

26 For<sup>a</sup> they persecute him whom thou hast smitten; and they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded.<sup>6</sup>

27 Add<sup>a</sup> iniquity<sup>7</sup> unto their iniquity;<sup>8</sup> and let them not come into thy righteousness.

28 Let<sup>a</sup> them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written with the righteous.

29 But<sup>a</sup> I am poor and sorrowful: 'let thy salvation, O God, set me up on high.

30 I<sup>a</sup> will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify him with thanksgiving.

31 This<sup>a</sup> also shall please the LORD better than an ox or bullock that hath horns and hoofs.

32 The 'humble<sup>9</sup> shall see this, and be glad; and your heart shall live that seek God.

33 For<sup>a</sup> the LORD heareth the poor, and despiseth not his prisoners.<sup>1</sup>

34 Let<sup>a</sup> the heaven and earth praise him, the seas, and every thing that moveth<sup>2</sup> therein:

35 For<sup>a</sup> God will save Zion, and will build the cities of Judah; that they may dwell there, and have it in possession.

36 The<sup>a</sup> seed also of his servants shall inherit it; 'and they that love his name shall dwell therein.

Ver. 4. 'Magnify him who rideth over the Arabah by his name JAH, and rejoice before him.' Reference is here made to the journey of the Israelites through the wilderness, and especially along the valley of Arabah to and from Kadesh. There God went before them in the cloudy pillar; there he proclaimed to them his name JEHOVAH; there he gave them displays of his power and mercy, such as had never been witnessed. P.—By his name JAH. 'In JAH is his name,' Horsley. That is, Christ, who was with the church through the wilderness, has his personal and official name in JAH, the unity of the self-existent Trinity. C.

Ver. 11. Company. The original directs to those female choirs (see ver. 25) who, in sweet, and holy, and joyful song, published the mercies of the Lord. See, as examples, Ex. 15. 20; 1 Sa. 18. 6. C.

Ver. 12. Allusion is made to the conquests of Moses and Joshua on entering Palestine. P.

Ver. 13. The whole book of Psalms presents no greater difficulty than this verse, and conjectures and emendations have been proportionally numerous. The words supplied in the authorized version render the passage prophetic; but the adjoining verses are merely narrative. May we not therefore rather understand gods.—Note, Such is the blindness of the human heart, that the cow is still worshipped as a deity in India! C.

REFLECTIONS.—No hatred, no opposition of men or devils, could exclude our Redeemer from his glory. However strong or obstinate his enemies, they are overcome by his power. But happy—thrice happy are they who have by faith accepted this glorious, this gracious JEHOVAH to be their God! Behold how he protects his afflicted church and people; raises up families of saints in our Gentile world; delivers the prisoners of sin and Satan from their chains of corruptions and curses! while sinners bring to themselves eternal ruin! Behold him leading up his people from their spiritual bondage, and by his Word and Spirit directing them in their paths! By his almighty influence he brought down all opposition.

and his salvation. But dreadful is the fate of obstinate Jews and others who oppose the designs of his grace: and behold, when he went forth in the ordinances of the gospel, by his apostles and other missionaries, how Jews and Gentiles saw his glory, sang his praise, and submitted themselves to his government!

PSALM LXIX. Ver. 1. It is impossible to question that this is a prayer of our Lord. See especially ver. 9, first clause, compare with Jn. 2. 17, also ver. 9, second clause, with Ro. 15. 3, and ver. 25, also with Jn. 19. 28; and surely it is impossible to doubt that Christ is the speaker of the whole psalm! See also further references, Jn. 15. 25; Lu. 23. 34-38; Ro. 11. 9, 10; Ac. 1. 16, 20. C.

Ver. 22. Nothing is more certain than that God judicially delivers wicked men over to the counsels of their own hearts, and surely what God will righteously do, Christ as Judge may righteously call upon him to do. In this case, he calls upon him to deliver over the epicurean idolater, 'whose heart is

PSALM LXX.

David prayeth for God's speedy help and deliverance, to the confusion of his enemies, and triumph of the godly.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David, to bring to remembrance.

MAKE haste, O God, to deliver me; make haste to help me, O LORD.<sup>2</sup>

2 Let<sup>a</sup> them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul; let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt.

3 Let them be turned back for a reward of their shame that say, Aha, aha!

4 Let<sup>a</sup> all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: and let such as love thy salvation say continually, Let God be magnified.

5 But<sup>a</sup> I am poor and needy: make haste unto me, O God: thou art my help and my deliverer; O LORD, make no tarrying.

PSALM LXXI.

1 David, in confidence of faith, and experience of God's favour, prayeth both for himself, and against the enemies of his soul. 14 He promiseth acts of praise. 17 He prayeth not to be abandoned in the decline of life. 19 He praiseth God, and promiseth to do it cheerfully.

IN thee, O LORD, do I put my trust: let me never be put to confusion.

2 Deliver<sup>b</sup> me in thy righteousness, and cause me to escape: incline thine ear unto me, and save me.

3 Be thou my strong habitation,<sup>1</sup> whereunto I may continually resort: thou hast given commandment to save me, for thou art my rock and my fortress.

4 Deliver<sup>a</sup> me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.

5 For thou art my hope, O Lord God: thou art my trust from my youth.

6 By<sup>b</sup> thee have I been holden up from the womb: thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels: my praise shall be continually of thee.

* This is the faithful and grateful song of an old man. He speaks of a long experience of God's mercy. He feels that his physical strength is fast waning; the vigour of youth and manhood is gone; the weakness and helplessness of old age are beginning to be painfully realized; his enemies are still watchful and menacing.

Yet he does not despair. God is still his God; divine strength increases as bodily strength fails;

the eye of faith brightens as the eye of sense becomes dim; he is able even to look beyond death and the grave, and to exclaim triumphantly:—Thou shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth.

How cheering then is this noble psalm to the aged Christian!

member of that church which is founded in his blood, and blessed in him with all spiritual blessings.

PSALM LXX. Ver. 1. This psalm exemplifies the two chief principles for interpretation of the Psalms, viz. 1. Quotation and exposition in the New Testament. 2. Parallelism of sentiment between those which New Testament quotation applies to Christ and those not so quoted. The parallelism between Ps. lxx. and lxx. proves Ps. lxx. to belong to Christ; but this fact is put beyond question by its identity with Ps. 40. 13-17, which psalm is distinctly applied to Christ, He. 10. 5. C.

REFLECTIONS.—While here also I behold Jesus Christ in great abasement, poverty, and distress, denouncing just and fearful punishment on his Jewish, heathen, antichristian, and other enemies; and interceding for the joy and happiness of all people; to his Father's honour let me apply these things to my own troubled circumstances, and so, in a believing manner, bring them and the sinful causes thereof to my remembrance. Urgent trials, and the knowledge of Christ's sufferings, should lead us to a more intimate union with him, and a more fervent love to him, and to his Father, and to his brethren.

Ver. 18. When I am old, &c. Better, as in the margin, 'Now also unto old age and gray hairs, O God, forsake me not.' That our Lord was, in the ordinary acceptance of the word, prematurely old—consumed by his zeal—both himself and the Jews testified. Nor is anything more probable, that his incessant sorrows had produced, what sorrow has often produced—premature gray hairs, the snows of an unnatural winter enshrouding the greenness of spring. C.

Ver. 21. This is surely not descriptive of David's expectations or experience. God had positively told him, 'the sword should never depart from his house,' 2 Sa. 12. 10, 11, and from that hour onwards his whole life was a succession of troubles. But of Jesus the description is true; for his declarative greatness is ever increasing, and 'the joy set before him' was his sun of comfort in the darkest hour of sorrows. C.

REFLECTIONS.—They who know God and his faithfulness and grace will with comfort and confidence be engaged to trust him in every time of need. The more we reflect on what God hath done for us, it will the more engage our trust and animate our praise. In

And if we hope for eternal happiness, let us do what we can to spread the honour and good savour of Christ on earth! For how becoming is it for aged saints to be remarkable in cheerfully expecting good at the hand of God; and to have heart, and lips, and life all filled with his praise! How pleasant is it to step as it were into heaven, scarcely needing to change either our work or our song!

PSALM LXXII. Ver. 1. The strict parallelism of the opening of this with Ps. ii., and the New Testament application of that psalm to Christ, necessarily leads to a similar application here. Christ was King, as chosen, sent, and exalted of the Father; he was also the King's Son, as, according to the flesh, he was the Son of David. C.

Ver. 5. This exemplifies an important principle of interpretation, viz. what cannot be true of David or any other mere man, but is true of Messiah, is not to be applied to any mere man, but to 'the Word that was God,' and was, for our salvation, 'made 21 Thou shalt increase my greatness, and comfort me on every side.

22 I will also praise thee with the psaltery,<sup>2</sup> even thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I sing with the harp, O thou Holy One of Israel.

23 My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee; and my soul, which thou hast redeemed.

24 My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long: for they are confounded, for they are brought unto shame, that seek my hurt.<sup>3</sup>

2 It is highly probable that this psalm was composed by David when Solomon was crowned as his successor on the throne. The general scope accords with this idea. But at the same time it is evident that, in the fulness of its meaning, the psalm is not, and cannot be, applicable to Solomon and his reign. It has a higher reference. Solomon was but the type of a greater King. The Messiah was the anti-type, and the ultimate sense of many of the expressions culminated in him—

15 And he shall live, and to him shall be given of the gold of Sheba: prayer also shall be made for him continually; and daily shall he be praised.

16 There shall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon: and they of the city shall flourish like grass of the earth.<sup>6</sup>

17 His name shall endure for ever: his name shall be continued as long as the sun; and men shall be blessed in him: all nations shall call him blessed.

18 Blessed be the LORD God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things:

19 And blessed be his glorious name for ever; and let the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen, and Amen.

power in heaven and earth, reigns over his gospel church! In infinite equity and wisdom he conducts his whole administration. By his righteousness he secured, by his intercession he procures, and by his word, ordinances, and Spirit, he confers on men peace with God, peace in the conscience, and with one another. Poor destitute sinners he supplies from his fulness of blessings, and delivers them from the hand of sin, Satan, and the world, their oppressors. His spiritual influences, coming down in their season, shall render believers flourishing and fruitful in holiness. And how extensive his gospel church, comprehending both Jews and Gentiles—the wildest Arabs and most distant islanders not excepted! In it persons of every station, but chiefly of the poor, submit to his yoke, and devote themselves and all that they have to his service. Earnest are their prayers for his presence and power in his ordinances, and for his coming in the clouds; and high their songs of praise to his name. What commendations of him are in the word of the gospel! From him the corn of wheat, sown in death upon Calvary, and from the handful of gospel truth, sown among hardened hearts, shall proceed converts, strong and tall in sympathy with a world lying in misery, because lying in wickedness. C.

Ver. 9. Walketh. Their tongue assails every one; none can escape its ridicule, contempt, censure, calumnies, or condemnation. C.
Ver. 10. 'His people return hither.' Therefore his (God's) people turn aside hither, to the service of these prosperous men, and waters of a full cup (of oppression) are wrung out from them in bitter tears. C.
Ver. 17. Sanctuary. This word never signifies sanctuary, in the singular, but signifies 'the secret principles of God's providential government.' C.
Ver. 18. The wicked are here referred to, and the true nature of God's dealings with them. To human appearance they were prosperous and secure: but in reality their condition was one of uncertainty and danger, from which they must inevitably fall. Ultimate ruin is before them whatever may be their apparent security now. P.
Ver. 22. So foolish. The whole gospel of Christ is called foolishness by the world, and 'he that would be wise must become a fool.' The very apostles were 'fools for Christ's sake,' 1 Co. 1. 18. 3. 18. 4. 10. C.
Ver. 23. Notwithstanding this low estimation of men, I am still with thee. Here we have a distinct note that the speaker, inquirer, and expounder of providence, is no other than Christ. C.
Ver. 24. This is another mark of Christ, not a prayer for guidance and glory, but a confident announcement like that in Jn. 17. 5. C.
REFLECTIONS.—In our perplexing difficulties we brings them to everlasting ruin and hastens them into it. But whatever sad lengths the afflictions and temptations of the godly draw them, they should lead to instruction, humiliation, comfort, and holiness. When atheistical thoughts arise in our hearts, they must be carefully and quickly suppressed. We must never grieve nor stumble the children of God by representing his service as vain and unprofitable. And it is not the strongest carnal reasoning, but fellowship with God in his word and ordinances, that can illuminate a darkened soul, or disentangle from an ensnaring temptation. Great is the mercy when God relieves his children who had, by their envy and fretfulness, become their own tormentors; and that even at their worst he never ceases to attend and support them as weak infants in his family. But bright views of God and eternal things are sometimes ushered in by great darkness and trouble of mind. Holiness here and glory hereafter are closely connected. And little reason hath one, guided of God, and an heir of everlasting happiness, nay, of God himself, and a joint-heir with Christ, to envy the earthly happiness of the wicked. How insignificant other things appear when compared with the everlasting an-

ALTAR OF LATIN CHURCH, NAZARETH—ON THE SITE OF THE HOUSE WHERE CHRIST LIVED. [Psalms, lxxii:8.]—"He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." It seems as if the prophecies quoted from the above Psalm have been fulfilled when we remember that churches now stand in nearly all of the great cities of the world. The Latin church in Nazareth is called the Church of the Annunciation. The modern city of Nazareth consists of stone houses with flat roofs. The Church of the Annunciation is small, but it is decorated with pictures of great beauty and with finely wrought marble. It is said to stand on the site of the house of Mary. The church was begun in 1620 out of materials which remained from the ruins of former structures of a similar character. It was destroyed by an earthquake in 1837, but has been rebuilt. The name of Nazareth does not occur in the Old Testament nor in Josephus

The worldly prosperity of the wicked.

PSALM LXXIII.

1 The psalmist, prevailing in a temptation, 2 sheweth the occasion thereof, the prosperity of the wicked. 13 The wound given thereby, diffidence. 15 The victory over it, knowledge of God's purpose, in destroying of the wicked, and sustaining the righteous.

A psalm of Asaph.

TRULY<sup>2</sup> God<sup>a</sup> is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart.<sup>3</sup>

2 But as for me, my feet were almost gone, my steps had well nigh slipped.<sup>4</sup>

3 For<sup>a</sup> I was envious<sup>5</sup> at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked:

4 For<sup>a</sup> there are no bands in their death; but their strength is firm.<sup>7</sup>

5 They<sup>9</sup> are not in trouble as other men;<sup>8</sup> neither are they plagued like other men:

6 Therefore<sup>a</sup> pride compasseth them about as a chain; violence covereth them as a garment.

7 Their<sup>a</sup> eyes stand out with fatness; they have more than heart could wish.<sup>1</sup>

8 They<sup>a</sup> are corrupt, and speak wickedly concerning oppression: they speak loftily.

9 They<sup>a</sup> set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth.

10 Therefore his people return hither; and waters<sup>a</sup> of a full cup are wrung out to them.

11 And they say,<sup>2</sup> How<sup>a</sup> doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High?

12 Behold,<sup>9</sup> these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches.

13 Verily<sup>a</sup> I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency.<sup>3</sup>

14 For<sup>a</sup> all the day long have I been plagued, and chastened<sup>4</sup> every morning.

15 If I say, I will speak thus; behold, I should offend against the generation of thy children.

16 When<sup>a</sup> I thought to know this, it was too painful<sup>5</sup> for me,<sup>6</sup>

17 Until<sup>a</sup> I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end.

18 Surely<sup>a</sup> thou didst set them in slippery places; thou castedst them down into destruction.

19 How<sup>a</sup> are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! they are utterly consumed with terrors.

20 As<sup>a</sup> a dream when one awaketh; so, O LORD, when thou awakest, thou shalt despise their image.<sup>7</sup> 21 Thus<sup>a</sup> my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins.

PSALM LXXIV.

1 The psalmist complaineth of the desolation of the sanctuary. 10 He moveth God to help in consideration of his power, 18 of his reproachful enemies, of his children, and of his covenant.

Maschil of Asaph.<sup>1</sup>

O GOD, why hast thou cast us off for ever? why doth thine anger smoke against the sheep of thy pasture?

2 Remember thy congregation, which thou hast purchased of old; the rod<sup>2</sup> of thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed; this mount Zion, wherein thou hast dwelt.

3 Lift<sup>9</sup> up thy feet<sup>4</sup> unto the perpetual desolations; even all that the enemy hath done wickedly in the sanctuary.<sup>5</sup>

4 Thine<sup>a</sup> enemies roar in the midst of thy congregations; they set up their ensigns for signs.<sup>6</sup>

5 A man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees.

6 But now they break down the carved work thereof at once with axes and hammers.

7 They have cast fire into thy sanctuary; they have defiled by casting down the dwelling-place of thy name to the ground.

8 They said in their hearts, Let us destroy them together: they have burnt up all the synagogues of God in the land.

9 We see not our signs: there is no more any prophet; neither is there among us any that knoweth how long.

10 O God, how long shall the adversary reproach? shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for ever?

11 Why withdrawest thou thy hand, even thy right hand? pluck it out of thy bosom.

12 For God is my King<sup>1</sup> of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth.

13 Thou didst divide the sea by thy strength: thou brakest the heads of the dragons in the

MOUNT OF OLIVES FROM ZION'S GATE—OVER WHICH DAVID WALKED AND WEPT DURING ABSALOM'S REBELLION. [Psalms, lxxiv:2.]—"Remember thy congregation, which thou hast purchased of old; the rod of thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed; this Mount Zion, wherein thou hast dwelt." Mount Zion occupies the southwest section of the city. The west and south sides rise abruptly from the valley of Hinnom, and the south brow of Zion is bold and prominent. The Mount of Olives from Mount Zion is an inspiring sight. The graceful outlines of the Mount of Olives are conspicuous from every part of the city. We see on the summit of the central crest the lofty tower erected by the Russians. There are many buildings upon the Mount of Olives and they interfere with the simple beauty of the sacred hill. It is over the Mount of Olives that David ascended when fleeing from his rebel son Absalom (II. Samuel, xv:30).

16 The<sup>9</sup> day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sun.

17 Thou<sup>9</sup> hast set all the borders of the earth: thou hast made<sup>7</sup> summer and winter.

18 Remember<sup>a</sup> this, that the enemy hath reproached, O LORD, and that the foolish people have blasphemed thy name.

20 Have<sup>e</sup> respect unto the covenant:<sup>1</sup> for the<sup>9</sup> dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty.

21 O<sup>1</sup> let not the oppressed return ashamed: let the poor and needy praise thy name.

22 Arise,<sup>9</sup> O God, plead thine own cause: remember how the foolish man<sup>9</sup> reproacheth thee daily.

23 Forget not the voice of thine enemies: the<sup>9</sup> tumult of those that rise up against thee increaseth<sup>2</sup> continually.

PSALM LXXV.

8 For<sup>1</sup> in the hand of the LORD there is<sup>9</sup> cup, and the wine is red; it is full of mixture: and he poureth out of the same: but the dregs thereof, all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out, and drink them.

9 But<sup>1</sup> I will declare for ever; I will sing praises to the God of Jacob.<sup>1</sup>

10 All<sup>9</sup> the horns of the wicked also will I cut off; but the horns of the righteous shall be exalted.

PSALM LXXVI.

1 A declaration of God's majesty in the church. 11 An exhortation to serve him reverently.

To the chief musician on<sup>9</sup> Neginoth, A psalm or song of<sup>1</sup> Asaph.

IN Judah<sup>9</sup> is God known: his<sup>9</sup> name is great in Israel.

2 In<sup>2</sup> Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling-place in Zion.

3 There<sup>9</sup> brake he the arrows of the bow, the shield, and the sword, and the battle. Selah.

4 Thou art more glorious and excellent than the mountains of prey.

5 The<sup>9</sup> stout-hearted are spoiled, they have slept their sleep; and none of the men of might have found their hands.<sup>3</sup>

6 At<sup>1</sup> thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horse<sup>4</sup> are cast into a dead sleep.

7 Thou, even thou, art to be feared: and who may stand in thy sight when once thou art angry?

8 Thou didst cause judgment to be heard from heaven; the earth feared, and was still,

9 When God arose to judgment, to save all the meek of the earth. Selah.

10 Surely<sup>9</sup> the wrath of man shall praise thee: the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain.

11 Vow,<sup>9</sup> and<sup>5</sup> pay unto the LORD your God: let all that be round about him bring presents unto him that ought to be feared.<sup>6</sup>

12 He<sup>9</sup> shall cut off the spirit of princes: he is terrible to the kings of the earth.

nant that still lingered, in sorrow, amidst the ruins of the temple, after Jeremiah was carried down from Mizpah to Egypt (Je. 43. 6), and is it not, most probably, an expression of regret for that rebellious act of abduction? C.

Ver. 17. Summer and winter. Therefore the God by whose power the glory of light emerges from the deformity of darkness, and the beauty of summer from the desolation of winter, is able to grant deliverance from enemies, and bring comfort out of sorrow. See ver. 10. C.

Ver. 20. 'The prayer in this passage may with propriety be used by the people of God now. It is still true that the dark parts of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty; and in view of this fact, and of the utter hopelessness of the renovation of the world by any human means, or by any progress which society can make of itself, it is proper to seek God's interposition. And it is proper in such prayers to him now, to make the ground of our appeal to him his own gracious covenant; his promises made to his church; his solemn assurance that this state of things shall not always continue, but that the time will arrive when the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord' (Barnes). P making havoc of God's truths, ordinances, or people, while there is none to comfort us or to explain the dark providences. But under sore troubles it is proper to commemorate and plead upon God's former and distinguished mercies. He who divided the Red Sea and destroyed Pharaoh and his host, and who brought waters from the rock for Israel; he who is the Sovereign of nature, can, at his pleasure, command our and his church's deliverance. Importunate wrestlings and pleadings with God for the relief of his church, which is so dear to him, and for fulfilling his promise, of which he is ever mindful, and for destroying his daring and implacable reproachers, will not be long unanswered.

PSALM LXXV. Ver. 3. The single speaker can be no other than Messiah, prophetically arrived in his church. None but Christ alone could, without vain boasting and arrogant attributions, may sometimes save a disjoined church or state from impending ruin. But vain and dangerous is it to withstand God's deputies. The righteous shall be advanced and flourish, while obstinate sinners shall be plunged into everlasting misery.

PSALM LXXVI. Ver. 1. In Judah God is known. God was known in the doctrine that expressed his nature—in the commandments that prescribed his will—in the history that recorded his acts—and the prophecy that foretold his coming to salvation, victory, and judgment. C.

Ver. 4. This is a passage of great difficulty. May it not be paraphrased thus: 'Thou Zion, undistinguished among cities, art yet, as the dwelling-place of God, more excellent than them all; and thou, Salem, taught by thy very name to cultivate peace, art yet, in that peace of God, more glorious than the mountains of the warriors—their strongholds and fortresses—enriched and stored with all the spoils of conquest.' C.

PSALM LXXVII.

1 The psalmist sheweth what fierce combat he had with diffidence.
10 The victory which he had by considering God's great and gracious works.

To the chief musician, to <sup>a</sup>Jeduthun, A psalm of <sup>1</sup>Asaph.

I CRIED<sup>b</sup> unto God with my voice, even unto God with my voice; and he gave ear unto me.<sup>2</sup>

3 I<sup>f</sup> remembered God, and was troubled: I<sup>g</sup> complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed. Selah.<sup>5</sup>

4 Thou<sup>h</sup> holdest mine eyes waking: I am so troubled that I cannot speak.

5 I<sup>i</sup> have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times.

6 I call to remembrance my <sup>k</sup>song in the night: <sup>l</sup>I commune with mine own heart; and my spirit made diligent search.

7 Will<sup>n</sup> the LORD cast off for ever? and will he be favourable no more?

8 Is<sup>o</sup> his mercy clean gone for ever? doth his promise fail for evermore?<sup>6</sup>

9 Hath<sup>p</sup> God forgotten to be gracious? hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies? Selah.

10 And I said, <sup>q</sup>This is my infirmity: but I will remember the years of the right hand of the most High.<sup>7</sup>

11 I<sup>s</sup> will remember the works of the LORD; surely I will remember thy wonders of old.

12 I will <sup>r</sup>meditate also of all thy work, and talk of thy doings.<sup>8</sup>

13 Thy<sup>u</sup> way, O God, is in the sanctuary:<sup>9</sup> who<sup>v</sup> is so great a God as our God?

14 Thou<sup>w</sup> art the God that doest wonders: thou<sup>x</sup> hast declared thy strength among the people.

15 Thou<sup>y</sup> hast with thine arm redeemed thy people, the sons of Jacob and Joseph. Selah.

16 The<sup>a</sup> waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee; they were afraid: the depths also were troubled.

17 The clouds poured out water:<sup>1</sup> the skies sent out a sound: thine <sup>b</sup>arrows also went abroad.

18 The<sup>c</sup> voice of thy thunder was in the heaven: the lightnings lightened the world: the earth trembled and shook.

2 This psalm is manifestly the record of an inward struggle in the mind of the writer between good and evil, faith and despair. At first anguish fills his soul, hope seems to desert him, and overwhelmed with affliction he yields himself up to despair. Then, however, memory of past mercies returns; thoughts of divine love and power spring up, and at length hope dawns, and he rejoices in the salvation of the Lord.—P.

15 He<sup>a</sup> clave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of the great depths.

16 He brought <sup>a</sup>streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers.

17 And <sup>a</sup>they sinned yet more against him, by provoking the most High in the wilderness.

18 And<sup>a</sup> they tempted God in their heart, by asking meat for their lust.

19 Yea, they spake against God; they said, Can<sup>a</sup> God furnish<sup>a</sup> a table in the wilderness?

20 Behold,<sup>a</sup> he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed; can he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?

21 Therefore the LORD heard this, and <sup>b</sup>was wroth; so a fire<sup>9</sup> was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel;

22 Because <sup>a</sup>they believed not in God, and trusted not in his salvation;<sup>1</sup>

23 Though he <sup>a</sup>had commanded the clouds from above, and opened the <sup>a</sup>doors of heaven, 24 And<sup>a</sup> had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven.

25 Man did eat <sup>a</sup>angels<sup>3</sup> food: he sent them meat to the full.

26 He<sup>b</sup> caused an east wind to blow<sup>4</sup> in the heaven; and by his power he brought in the south wind.

27 He rained flesh also upon them as dust, and feathered fowls<sup>5</sup> like as the sand of the sea;

28 And he let it fall in the midst of their camp, round about their habitations.

29 So<sup>i</sup> they did eat, and were well filled: for he gave them their own desire;

30 They<sup>j</sup> were not estranged from their lust: but while their meat was yet in their mouths, 31 The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fattest of them, and smote down<sup>6</sup> the chosen men<sup>7</sup> of Israel.

32 For<sup>k</sup> all this they sinned still, and believed not for his wondrous works.

33 Therefore<sup>i</sup> their days did he consume in vanity, and their years in trouble.

34 When<sup>n</sup> he slew them, then they sought him; and they returned and inquired early after God:

35 And they remembered <sup>a</sup>that God was their Rock, and the high God their Redeemer.

36 Nevertheless<sup>p</sup> they did flatter him with their mouth, and they lied unto him with their tongues.

37 For<sup>q</sup> their heart was not right with him, neither were they <sup>a</sup>steadfast in his covenant.

38 But he, <sup>a</sup>being full of compassion, forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not; <sup>a</sup>yea, many a time turned he his anger away, and did not stir up all his wrath.

39 For<sup>r</sup> he remembered that they were but flesh; a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again.

40 How<sup>s</sup> oft did they provoke him<sup>8</sup> in the wilderness, and grieve him in the desert!

42 They remembered not <sup>a</sup>his hand, nor the day when he delivered them from the enemy.<sup>2</sup>

43 How<sup>t</sup> he had wrought<sup>3</sup> his signs in Egypt, and his wonders in the field of Zoan;

44 And<sup>a</sup> had turned their rivers into blood; and their floods, that they could not drink.

45 He<sup>b</sup> sent divers sorts of flies among them, which devoured<sup>4</sup> them; and <sup>a</sup>frogs, which destroyed them.

46 He<sup>d</sup> gave also their increase unto the caterpillar,<sup>5</sup> and their labour unto the locust.

47 He<sup>e</sup> destroyed<sup>6</sup> their vines with hail, and their sycamore-trees<sup>7</sup> with frost.<sup>8</sup>

48 He gave up<sup>9</sup> their cattle also to the hail, and their flocks to hot thunderbolts.<sup>1</sup>

49 He<sup>g</sup> cast upon them the fierceness of his anger, wrath, and indignation, and trouble, by sending evil angels<sup>2</sup> among them.

50 He made a way<sup>3</sup> to his anger; he spared

Ver. 9. Ephraim. Ephraim is selected to exemplify the result of unsteadiness, (1) Because, as the chief son of Joseph, he inherited peculiar promises, Ge. 48. 20. (2) Because Ephraim was the ruling tribe at entering Canaan under Joshua. (3) Because Ephraim attained to supreme power in the ten tribes, Is. 7. 9. (4) Because Ephraim became conspicuous among the tribes for dissolution of morals and idolatry, Is. 17. 28; Ho. 8. 11. (5) Because in their danger they sought not God, but Assyria, Ho. 5. 13. And (6) Because God visited them with calamities as conspicuous as the privileges they abused, Ho. 5. 9, 12. C.

Ver. 32. To many unthinking persons it appears strange, almost, if not altogether, beyond credibility, that the Israelites could receive so many mercies, and feel so many judgments, and yet remain the sensual, stupid, stiff-necked, rebellious, and incorrigible people they are represented to have been. A little consideration of the disregard of God's mercies and judgments

Ver. 59. When God heard this. We know little more of the relations between men and angels, than that 'they are all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation,' and that there is 'joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth'—but these words seem also to intimate that the idolatries and other apostasies of the church may be brought up in heavenly records, or—if such in heaven there may be—even in holy lamentations 'to the ears of the God of Sabaoth.' R.

Ver. 64. No lamentation. It has often been remarked that among the many evils of continued public calamities, none is more grievous than the almost total destruction of sympathy and natural affection, and the paramount domination of selfishness. No instance can be more remarkable than that of a widow whose heart has been rendered so callous that she drops no tear of sorrow to the memory of the husband of her youth! C.

strain its malicious murmurings against God. With amazing patience and kindness God provides for his abusers amongst mankind! But when he gratifies sinners in their requests, his gifts become their snare and curse: this world's abundance is abused to excess: reflection is banished: and men hurry headlong into ruin. They who make a god of their belly will find their end to be destruction: and they who will not be bowed by mercies or corrections must be broken by judgments. If sin be indulged sorrow must follow. Nor shall the stoutest be able to resist the uplifted arm of an angry God. Troubles often force not their soul from death, but gave their life over to the pestilence;<sup>4</sup>

51 And<sup>h</sup> smote all the first-born in Egypt; the chief of their strength in the tabernacles of Ham:<sup>4</sup>

52 But<sup>i</sup> made his own people to go forth like sheep, and guided them in the wilderness like a flock.<sup>5</sup>

53 And<sup>k</sup> he led them on safely, so that they feared not: but the sea 'overwhelmed' their enemies.

54 And he brought them 'to the border of his sanctuary,' even to this mountain, which his right hand had purchased.

55 He<sup>e</sup> cast out the heathen also before them, and divided them an inheritance by line,<sup>8</sup> and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tents.

56 Yet<sup>p</sup> they tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not his testimonies:

57 But<sup>q</sup> turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside 'like a deceitful bow.

58 For<sup>r</sup> they provoked him to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealousy with their graven images.

59 When God 'heard this, he 'was wroth, and greatly abhorred Israel:

60 So<sup>v</sup> that he forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent which he placed among men;

61 And delivered his strength<sup>9</sup> into captivity, and his glory into the enemy's hand.<sup>1</sup>

62 He<sup>x</sup> gave his people over also unto the sword; and was wroth with his inheritance.

63 The<sup>y</sup> fire consumed their young men; and their maidens were not given<sup>2</sup> to marriage.

64 Their<sup>a</sup> priests fell by the sword; and their widows made no lamentation.

65 Then<sup>a</sup> the LORD awaked as one out of sleep, and like a mighty man that shouteth by reason of wine:

66 And he 'smote his enemies in the hinder parts; he put them to a perpetual reproach.

67 Moreover 'he refused the tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim:

68 But<sup>d</sup> chose the tribe of Judah, the mount Zion which he loved.

69 And<sup>e</sup> he built his sanctuary like high palaces, like the earth which he hath estab-

70 He<sup>9</sup> chose David also his servant, and took him from the sheep-folds:

71 From following<sup>5</sup> the 'ewes great with young he brought him 'to feed Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

72 So<sup>j</sup> he fed them according to the integrity<sup>6</sup> of his heart, and guided them by the skilfulness of his hands.

PSALM LXXIX.

1 The psalmist complaineth of the desolation of Jerusalem. o. prayeth for deliverance, 13 and promiseth thankfulness.

A psalm of Asaph.

O GOD, 'the heathen are come into 'thine inheritance; 'thy holy temple have they defiled; they have laid Jerusalem on heaps.

2 The<sup>d</sup> dead bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven, the flesh of thy saints unto the beasts of the earth.

3 Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem; 'and there was none to bury them.

4 We<sup>9</sup> are become a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

5 How<sup>h</sup> long, LORD? wilt thou be angry for ever? 'shall thy jealousy burn like fire?

6 Pour<sup>i</sup> out thy wrath upon the heathen that have not known thee,<sup>2</sup> and upon the kingdoms that have not called upon thy name.

7 For<sup>k</sup> they have devoured Jacob, and laid waste his dwelling-place.

8 O<sup>j</sup> remember not against us former iniquities:<sup>3</sup> let<sup>n</sup> thy tender mercies speedily prevent us;<sup>4</sup> for we are brought very low.

9 Help<sup>o</sup> us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy name;<sup>5</sup> and deliver us, and purge away our sins, for thy name's sake.

10 Wherefore<sup>p</sup> should the heathen say, Where is their God? 'let him be known among the heathen in our sight by the 'revenging<sup>7</sup> of the blood of thy servants which is shed.

11 Let<sup>r</sup> the sighing of the prisoner<sup>8</sup> come before thee: 'according to the greatness of thy power<sup>9</sup> preserve thou those that are appointed to 'die:<sup>2</sup>

12 And 'render unto our neighbours sevenfold into their bosom<sup>3</sup> their 'reproach, where-with they have reproached thee, O LORD.

13 So<sup>v</sup> we thy people, and sheep of thy pas-

PSALM LXXX.

1 The psalmist in his prayer complaineth of the miseries of the church. 8 God's former favours are turned into judgments. 14 He prayeth for deliverance.

To the chief musician upon "Shoshannim-Eduth, A psalm of Asaph. 1

GIVE ear, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a flock; thou that dwellest between the cherubims, shine forth.

2 Before Ephraim, and Benjamin, and Manasse, stir up thy strength, and come and save us.

3 Turn us again, O God, and cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.

4 O LORD God of hosts, how long wilt thou be angry against the prayer of thy people?

5 Thou feedest them with the bread of tears; and givest them tears to drink in great measure.

6 Thou makest us a strife unto our neighbours; and our enemies laugh among themselves.

7 Turn us again, O God of hosts, and cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved.

8 Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the heathen, and planted it.

9 Thou preparedst room before it, and didst cause it to take deep root, and it filled the land.

10 The hills were covered with the shadow of it: and the boughs thereof were like the goodly cedars.

11 She sent out her boughs unto the sea, and her branches unto the river.

12 Why hast thou then broken down her hedges, so that all they which pass by the way do pluck her?

13 The boar out of the wood doth waste it, and the wild beast of the field doth devour it.

14 Return, we beseech thee, O God of hosts: look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine;

PSALM LXXXIX.

1 The psalmist praiseth God for his covenant, 5 for his wonderful power, 15 for the care of his people, 19 for his favour to the kingdom of David. 38 Then complaining of contrary events, 46 he expostulates, prayeth, and blesseth God.

Maschil of 'Ethan the Ezrahite.<sup>1</sup>

I WILL<sup>1</sup> sing of the mercies of the LORD for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulness<sup>2</sup> to all generations.<sup>3</sup>

2 For I have said, 'Mercy shall be built up for ever: thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens.

3 I<sup>1</sup> have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto 'David my servant,

4 Thy<sup>1</sup> seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah.<sup>4</sup>

5 And<sup>1</sup> the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O LORD: thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints.

6 For 'who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the LORD?

7 God<sup>1</sup> is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints, and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him.

8 O LORD God of 'hosts, who is a strong LORD like unto thee? or to thy faithfulness round about thee?

9 Thou<sup>1</sup> rulest the raging of the sea: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them.

11 The<sup>1</sup> heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world, and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them.

4 The main object of this psalm is to declare the promises made to David regarding the perpetuity of his throne and kingdom. The promise had a double reference—typical and real. David's line and throne and kingdom were to continue until in the person and work and reign of our Lord, David's great Son, the typical merged into the real—the temporal into the spiritual.—P.

De. 11. 21.

50 The throne of David in Jerusalem is ruined, deserted, and desecrated—the throne of his Son abideth for ever in glory.—C.

created them: 'Tabor<sup>1</sup> and Hermon<sup>1</sup> shall rejoice in thy name.

13 Thou hast a mighty arm:<sup>2</sup> strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand.

14 Justice<sup>1</sup> and judgment are the 'habitation of thy throne; mercy and truth shall 'go before thy face.

15 Blessed is the people that know the 'joyful sound: 'they shall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance.<sup>4</sup>

16 In<sup>1</sup> thy name shall they rejoice all the day; and 'in thy righteousness shall they be exalted.

17 For 'thou art the glory of their strength; and 'in thy favour our horn shall be exalted.

18 For<sup>1</sup> the LORD is our defence; and the Holy One of Israel is our 'King.<sup>6</sup>

19 Then thou spakest in vision to thy Holy One, and saidst, 'I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people.

20 I<sup>1</sup> have found David<sup>7</sup> my servant; with my holy oil have I anointed him:

21 With<sup>1</sup> whom my hand shall be established; mine arm also shall strengthen him.

22 The<sup>1</sup> enemy shall not exact upon him; nor the son of wickedness afflict him.

23 And<sup>1</sup> I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him.

24 But<sup>1</sup> my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him; and in my name shall his horn be exalted.

25 I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers.

26 He<sup>1</sup> shall cry unto me, Thou art my Father, my God, and the Rock of my salvation.

27 Also I will make him my 'first-born, higher than the kings of the earth.<sup>8</sup>

28 My<sup>1</sup> mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him.

29 His<sup>1</sup> seed also will I make to endure for ever, and his throne as the days of heaven.<sup>9</sup>

30 If<sup>1</sup> his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments;

31 If they break my statutes,<sup>1</sup> and keep not my commandments;

32 Then<sup>1</sup> will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes.

33 Nevertheless<sup>1</sup> my loving-kindness will I not utterly take from him,<sup>2</sup> nor suffer my faithfulness to fail.<sup>3</sup>

STAIRWAY TO TOWER OF CASTLE—NEAR THE PLACE WHERE CHRIST WAS TRANSFIGURED. [Psalms, lxxxix:12.]—"The North and the South thou hast created them: Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name." This is a view of the stairway to the tower of Subeibeh castle. It stands three miles from Caesarea Philippi, and about one thousand feet higher than this town. It is in sight of Mount Hermon, where the Lord Jesus Christ was transfigured in the presence of Peter, James and John. We are looking toward the North. This castle figured largely in the wars of the Saracenes of Damascus against the Templars of Jerusalem. As it commands the passage from the Huleh to the plains of the Jordan over Hermon to Damascus and the East, it must have been a place of importance at least during those troublous times when such passes were dominated by a frowning castle.

34 My<sup>a</sup> covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.

35 Once<sup>a</sup> have I sworn <sup>a</sup>by my holiness that I will not lie<sup>a</sup> unto David.<sup>5</sup>

36 His<sup>a</sup> seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me.<sup>6</sup>

37 It<sup>a</sup> shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven. Selah.

38 But<sup>a</sup> thou hast cast off and abhorred; thou hast been wroth with thine anointed.<sup>7</sup>

39 Thou<sup>b</sup> hast made void the covenant of thy servant; thou hast profaned his crown, by casting it to the ground.

40 Thou<sup>c</sup> hast broken down all his hedges; thou hast brought his strong holds to ruin.

41 All<sup>a</sup> that pass by the way spoil him: he is a reproach to his neighbours.

42 Thou hast set up the right hand of his adversaries; thou hast made all his enemies to rejoice.

43 Thou hast also turned the edge of his sword, and hast not made him to stand in the battle.

44 Thou<sup>c</sup> hast made his glory<sup>8</sup> to cease, and cast his throne down to the ground.

45 The<sup>c</sup> days of his youth hast thou shortened; thou hast covered him with shame. Selah.

46 How<sup>b</sup> long, LORD? wilt thou hide thyself for ever? shall thy wrath burn like fire?

47 Remember<sup>b</sup> how short my time is: wherefore hast thou made all men in vain?

48 What<sup>a</sup> man is he that liveth, and shall not see death? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave? Selah.

49 LORD, <sup>a</sup>where are thy former loving-kindnesses, which thou 'swarest unto David in thy truth?

50 Remember, LORD, <sup>a</sup>the reproach of thy

PSALM XC.

1 The psalmist declareth God's providence over Israel, 3 complaineth of human frailty, 7 divine chastisements, 10 and brevity of life. 12 He prayeth for the knowledge and sensible experience of God's good providence.

LORD, thou hast been our <sup>b</sup>dwelling-place<sup>a</sup> in all generations.<sup>3</sup>

2 Before<sup>c</sup> the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, <sup>a</sup>even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God.

3 Thou<sup>c</sup> turnest man to destruction; and sayest, Return, ye children of men.

4 For<sup>a</sup> a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past,<sup>4</sup> and as a watch in the night.

5 Thou<sup>b</sup> carriest them away as with a flood; <sup>a</sup>they are as a sleep: in the morning they are like grass which groweth <sup>up</sup>.<sup>6</sup>

6 In<sup>k</sup> the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down, and withereth.

7 For<sup>b</sup> we are consumed by thine anger, and by thy wrath are we troubled.

8 Thou<sup>a</sup> hast set our iniquities before thee, our secret <sup>sins</sup> in the light of thy countenance.

9 For all our days are passed away<sup>7</sup> in <sup>a</sup>thy wrath: we spend our years as a <sup>a</sup>tale<sup>9</sup> that is told.

and earth by the rolling tides; measuring out the months of the life of man, and the returns of God's solemn festivals; and 'ruling the night,' as a 'faithful witness in heaven,' that though the sun be withdrawn for a time, his beams are not extinguished. In all which respects, the moon is a beautiful emblem of the covenant grace of God. Some interpret it of the rainbow, but there is no necessity for such straining. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Glorious is that promise of grace which JEHOVAH has made in Jesus Christ as the Head and Representative of all believers. The mercy and faithfulness of God are therein for ever clearly and comfortably manifested; and for ever adored, both in heaven and earth. How infinite are the greatness and majesty of our loving God! How unbounded his strength! No unruly elements in nature, nor outrageous nations of men, can control it. His dominion extends to all parts and ends of the earth; and in a powerful, steady, judicious, righteous, and merciful manner, he conducts his whole providential work, but church, from Satan, from Jews, from heathens, from the wicked: and how terrible the Almighty's displeasure! To be under it for ever constitutes hell. How short, how uncertain, are our days on earth! If through Jesus, as our risen life and quickening Head, we do not live to God's glory here, and with God in glory hereafter, our life is worse than in vain. But painful is it for exercised souls to want the sense of God's love, even though it be secured in the gracious promise. And grievous are the virulent reproaches of Christ, his Father, and his people, and hard to be borne by a tender saint.

PSALM XC. Title. This is one of the most remarkable, and, in some respects, one of the most beautiful, psalms in the whole book. It has been called the funeral hymn of the world. Human frailty is brought out in it with equal vividness and pathos; but it is brought out in such a way that it teaches man humble resignation rather than blank despair. It teaches the it not more natural to understand the word return of the 'return of the spirit to God who gave it;' or of the resurrection, in which the body of his children, though 'sown in dishonour, is raised in glory?' C.

Ver. 11. Power of thine anger. None, in this life, can fully estimate the awful torment of 'the worm that dieth not, and the fire that is not quenched.'—'Yet who regardeth the power of thine anger, or thy wrath with reverence becoming thee?' (Boothroyd).

Ver. 16. Thy work of creation—thy work of providence—thy work of grace. Of the first, the natural man seeth but little; of the second, less; of the third, nothing; for, spiritual things must be spiritually discerned; and the 'pure in heart,' those renewed by the Holy Spirit, 'shall (alone) see God.' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are they who, amidst a transitory and perishing world, have the eternal God for their ALL IN ALL. Wise is his dominion over mankind and unsearchable his duration. But weak and short-lived are men. And it is madness to seek satisfaction and happiness in things so fleeting and

11 Who<sup>r</sup> knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath.<sup>2</sup>

12 So<sup>r</sup> teach us to number our days, that we may apply<sup>3</sup> our hearts unto wisdom.

13 Return,<sup>4</sup> O LORD, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants.<sup>4</sup>

14 O<sup>r</sup> satisfy us early with thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days.

15 Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us, and the years wherein we have seen evil.

16 Let<sup>r</sup> thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children.

17 And<sup>r</sup> let the beauty of the LORD our God be upon us: and <sup>r</sup>establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it.<sup>5</sup>

PSALM XCI.

1 The state of the godly. 3 Their safety. 9 Their habitation. 11 Their servants. 14 Their friend; with the effects of them all.

HE that<sup>a</sup> dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide<sup>1</sup> under the shadow of the Almighty.<sup>2</sup>

2 I will say of the LORD, <sup>b</sup>He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust.

3 Surely<sup>d</sup> he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence.

4 He<sup>r</sup> shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: his truth shall be thy shield and buckler.

5 Thou<sup>b</sup> shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day;

6 Nor for <sup>c</sup>the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noon-day.

7 A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee.

8 Only<sup>k</sup> with thine eyes shalt thou behold, and see the reward of the wicked.

PSALM XCII.

1 The prophet exhorteth to praise God, 4 for his great works, 6 for his judgments on the wicked, 10 and for his goodness to the godly. A psalm or song for the sabbath-day.

IT is<sup>a</sup> a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, O most High:

2 To<sup>b</sup> show forth thy loving-kindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness every night,<sup>1</sup>

3 Upon<sup>c</sup> an instrument of ten strings, and upon the psaltery; <sup>2</sup>upon the harp with a solemn sound.<sup>3</sup>

4 For thou, LORD, <sup>4</sup>hast made me glad through thy work:<sup>4</sup> I will triumph in the works of thy hands.

5 O LORD, <sup>5</sup>how great are thy works! and thy thoughts are very deep.

6 A<sup>6</sup> brutish man knoweth not; neither doth a fool <sup>6</sup>understand this.

7 When<sup>d</sup> the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be <sup>7</sup>destroyed for ever:

8 But thou, LORD, <sup>8</sup>art <sup>k</sup>most high for evermore.

9 For, lo, thine enemies, O LORD, for, lo, <sup>9</sup>thine enemies shall perish; all the workers of iniquity shall be scattered.

cedar—great and incorruptible. These characters meet in one, but are from him transfused to many. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Whatever our engagements be, we are bound at least to begin and end every day with prayer and praise. And they who have lively experience of God's love and faithfulness, will delight in daily showing forth his salvation. None but such as are ignorant or wicked will disregard his work of creation or providence; and much less that of redemption—but short-lived is the flourishing of wicked men, and dreadful the misery in which it issues; and yet this misery is the legitimate outcome of sin against God! But pleasant and profitable to themselves and others their conscience, and enable them to rejoice in himself. And such as are faithful to Christ will be greatly concerned that he may work all in them, do all for them, give all to them; and that he may herein be glorified, not only in them, but also in their posterity after them.

PSALM XCI. Ver. 1. Secret place. In the bosom of the Father, where the Son was in glory 'before the foundation of the world'—our only conception of eternity (see Jn. 1. 18; and 17. 5; 1 Jn. 1. 2); for he that was before creation was, must have been eternal. C.

Ver. 2. I will say. That the speaker is Christ, his own tacit acknowledgment (Mat. 4. 6, compared with ver. 11, 12) undeniably demonstrates. The amended translation of Lwth, instead of 'I will say,' gives 'who saith,' which seems more natural. C.

tended, heard in his prayers, honoured, and crowned with life and glory everlasting, let me with wonder behold the happiness of all people who make God their refuge and delightful habitation, who know his name, set their love on him, and call on him. Secured against every disappointment and danger, distinguished in the providence of God, guarded by angels, delivered from and victorious over the devil, that fowler, dragon, and lion of hell, JEHOVAH attends them in their troubles, hears their prayers, and gives them answers of peace. He exalts them on Christ their Rock, and makes them to sit with him on his throne; honours them with the relations of children, kings, and priests

Ver. 3. Surely he shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence. The speaker is Christ, his own tacit acknowledgment (Mat. 4. 6, compared with ver. 11, 12) undeniably demonstrates. The amended translation of Lwth, instead of 'I will say,' gives 'who saith,' which seems more natural. C.

10 But<sup>a</sup> my horn shalt thou exalt like the horn of an unicorn:<sup>5</sup> I shall be anointed with fresh oil.

11 Mine<sup>e</sup> eye also shall see my desire on mine enemies; and mine ears shall hear my desire of the wicked that rise up against me.<sup>6</sup>

12 The<sup>a</sup> righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree; he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon.

13 Those that be planted<sup>7</sup> in the house of the LORD shall flourish in the courts of our God.

14 They<sup>e</sup> shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing.<sup>8</sup>

15 To show that the LORD is upright; he is my rock, and there is no unrighteousness in him.

PSALM XCIII.

The majesty, stability, power, and holiness of Christ's kingdom.

THE LORD<sup>a</sup> reigneth, he is clothed with majesty; the LORD is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself: the world also is stablished, that it cannot be moved.

2 Thy<sup>e</sup> throne is established of old:<sup>1</sup> thou art<sup>b</sup> from everlasting.

3 The<sup>b</sup> floods have lifted up, O LORD, the floods have lifted up their voice; the floods lift up their waves.

4 The<sup>c</sup> LORD on high is mightier than the noise of many waters,<sup>2</sup> yea, than the mighty waves of the sea.

5 Thy<sup>d</sup> testimonies are very sure: holiness becometh thine house, O LORD, for ever.<sup>3</sup>

PSALM XCIV.

1 The psalmist, calling for justice, complaineth of tyranny and impiety. 8 He sheweth God's providence; 12 and teacheth the blessedness of affliction. 16 God is the defender of the afflicted.

O LORD God, to whom vengeance belongeth;<sup>1</sup> O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, show thyself.<sup>2</sup>

2 Lift<sup>a</sup> up thyself, thou Judge of the earth: render<sup>c</sup> a reward to the proud.<sup>3</sup>

3 LORD, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?

4 How long shall they utter and speak hard things? and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves?

5 They<sup>a</sup> break in pieces thy people, O LORD, and afflict thine heritage:

6 They slay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherless:

ment of worship by many churches sadly neglected, or most imperfectly attempted—and a duty and privilege to which many professing Christians consider themselves in no wise obligated. In addition, however, to this, and similar calls of the Spirit, the example of Christ on earth, and of saints in heaven, demands the universal voice of the church to engage in the praises of Jehovah.

Ver. 3. The heathen worshipped false gods; the Jews also were addicted to idolatry. One great object of this noble song of praise is to celebrate the praises of the one only exalted God of heaven and earth. He is called by his peculiar and incommunicable name JEHOVAH. By it he made himself known to Moses and the whole Jewish nation. By it he was distinguished from all false deities. Hence in this verse the psalmist says:—'For JEHOVAH is a great God, and a great King over all gods.' P.

REFLECTIONS.—God richly deserves our highest and most cordial praise. And we should invite one another to this blessed employ. How great is he, possessed of every necessary, infinite, and eternal excellency! How glorious his formation of all things, and his extensive dominion over them! How delightful and effective of blessings unnumbered is his power.

bear always. The mercies which we have received from him, as well as the wilfulness of our ignorance and our love to our errors, will fearfully aggravate our sin. And dreadful will be our case, if because of our sins he once exclude us from his new kingdom, his celestial rest, on account of our despising it when offered to us in the gospel.

PSALM XCVI. REFLECTIONS.—Since to us Gentiles Jesus Christ and his word of salvation are now come, let us, in songs ever fresh, ever cordial, publish the glories of his grace, and the wonders of his redeeming mercy, power, holiness, and majesty. Let us acknowledge him as our saving Lord, present ourselves to him as living sacrifices, and in the pure ordinances of his grace worship him with pure hearts and in a reverent and holy manner. Let us rejoice that his kingdom has been, is, and will be established among the Gentiles.

of Ahithophel against David—that he would confound their combinations to do evil in the world, as he confounded the tongues of the Babel conspirators, and scattered them abroad upon the face of the whole earth. C.

REFLECTIONS.—However mysterious and unsearchable God's providences be, they are always just and equal. A great shaking of the nations, by the Roman and other conquests, ushered in the gospel kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. A great destruction of obstinate Jews and heathens, and overturning of idolatry in the world, attended the erection and spread of it. And a great overturning of antichristians, Mahometans, and all their false worship, shall yet take place in its most glorious period. No exalted potentates, no mighty nations, nor fixed customs of wickedness, shall be able to withstand his conquering influence. Let saints then rejoice in his dignity of person, office, and state; in his gracious preservation and deliverance of his people.

PRISON, NAPLES. [Psalms, xcvi:10.]—"Say among the heathen that the Lord reigneth; the world also shall be established that it shall not be moved; he shall judge the people righteously." Perhaps there is no city on earth that furnishes a better point for the study of the judgments of God upon cities, nations, and individuals, than Naples. In no other city that has ever existed, have men gone further in defiance of the laws of God and man, and in no other city have they suffered more.

Here, in the time of Rome's power and glory, her wealthy people reveled in vices too horrible to mention. And here the judgments of heaven have fallen with a fury and an emphasis almost without parallel. This region, so amply favored as one might be led to suppose it dropped from heaven, as the poet says, has done more to insult heaven than almost any other spot. But Naples has been judged, and here the Lord reigns, either to build those who obey or to destroy those who violate His law.

8 Zion<sup>1</sup> heard, and was glad; and the daughters of Judah rejoiced because of thy judgments, O LORD.

9 For<sup>a</sup> thou, LORD, art high above all the earth; thou art exalted far above all gods.<sup>7</sup>

10 Ye that love the LORD, hate evil: he preserveth the souls of his saints; he delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked.

11 Light<sup>2</sup> is sown<sup>8</sup> for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart.

12 Rejoice<sup>c</sup> in the LORD, ye righteous; and give thanks at the remembrance<sup>9</sup> of his holiness.

PSALM XCIX.

1 The prophet, setting forth the kingdom of God in Zion, 5 exhorteth all, by the example of their forefathers, to worship God at his holy hill.

PSALM CII.

1 The prophet in his prayer maketh a grievous complaint. 12 He taketh comfort in the eternity and mercy of God. 18 The mercies of God are worthy to be recorded. 23 The prophet, sensible of his own weakness, resteth his hope on the unchangeable nature of God.

A prayer of the afflicted, when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the LORD.

HEAR my prayer, O LORD, and let my cry come unto thee.<sup>2</sup>

2 Hide<sup>a</sup> not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble; incline thine ear unto me: in the day when I call, answer me speedily.

3 For<sup>a</sup> my days are consumed like smoke,<sup>3</sup> and my bones are burnt as an hearth.

4 My<sup>a</sup> heart is smitten, and withered like grass; so that I forget to eat my bread.

5 By<sup>a</sup> reason of the voice of my groaning my bones cleave to my skin.<sup>4</sup>

6 I<sup>a</sup> am like a pelican of the wilderness: I am like an owl of the desert.

7 I<sup>a</sup> watch, and am as a sparrow alone upon the house-top.

8 Mine<sup>a</sup> enemies reproach me all the day; and they that are mad against me are sworn against me.

9 For<sup>a</sup> I have eaten ashes like bread, and mingled<sup>a</sup> my drink with weeping,<sup>5</sup>

10 Because<sup>a</sup> of thine indignation and thy wrath: for thou hast lifted me up, and cast me down.

11 My<sup>a</sup> days are like a shadow that declineth; and I am withered like grass.

12 But thou, O LORD, shalt endure for ever; and thy remembrance unto all generations.

13 Thou<sup>a</sup> shalt arise,<sup>6</sup> and have mercy upon them: for the time to favour her, yea, the set time is come.
14 For<sup>a</sup> thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favour the dust thereof.<sup>7</sup>
15 So<sup>a</sup> the heathen shall fear the name of the LORD, and all the kings of the earth thy glory.
16 When<sup>a</sup> the LORD shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory.
17 He<sup>a</sup> will regard the prayer of the destitute, and not despise their prayer.
18 This<sup>b</sup> shall be written for the generation to come: and the people which shall be created shall praise the LORD.<sup>8</sup>
19 For<sup>a</sup> he hath looked down from the height of his sanctuary; from heaven did the LORD behold the earth;
20 To<sup>a</sup> hear the groaning of the prisoner; to loose those that are appointed to death;<sup>9</sup>
21 To<sup>a</sup> declare the name of the LORD in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem:
22 When<sup>a</sup> the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms, to serve the LORD.
23 He weakened<sup>a</sup> my strength in the way; he shortened my days.
24 I<sup>a</sup> said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days: thy years are throughout all generations.
25 Of<sup>a</sup> old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands.
26 They<sup>a</sup> shall perish, but thou shalt endure; yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment: as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed:
27 But<sup>a</sup> thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end.
28 The<sup>a</sup> children of thy servants shall continue, and their seed shall be established before thee.

But he will make the dearest of them to smart severely for their sin in this life, notwithstanding they may triumph through faith. Great praise is due to God for his mercies. And deep awe and inward purity are necessary in worshipping him that is infinitely holy.

PSALM C. Ver. 1. That this summons is not confined to 'the land of Judea' is obvious from ver. 4, in which the parties called are exhorted to enter Jehovah's courts. For, whereas the temple had within the gates an outward court, into which the Gentiles might freely enter—the converted Gentiles must here be united as 'God's sheep and people' with the believing Jews. See Jn. 10.16. Is. 19.25. C.

REFLECTIONS.—What joyful praise, what grateful thanksgiving, what cheerful and hearty service do we Gentiles owe to the Lord!—to him who is JEHOVAH, the infinite ALL!—to him who forms us both in nature and in grace!—to him who is our high propitius wisely. In the verses which follow, the psalmist shows how he was resolved to carry out his noble resolution. What a lesson does this psalm teach us! P.

REFLECTIONS.—The lot of saints on earth is a strange mixture of mercies and judgments. But all of them, taken in their connection and tendency, are to be improved as matter of praise and thanksgiving. Fellowship with and influences from God must strengthen and animate us to every holy practice. Serious godliness is the most substantial wisdom; and to act for God in the religious management of families, kingdoms, or in other relative stations, is a noted branch of it. With the utmost care ought men, by whatever power they have, to discourage everything wicked, and to encourage everything virtuous and holy. But it is in vain to attempt instructing or reforming others if we do her salvation seem to linger in the eye of sense, it was then secured to the heart of faith; and all that now grows in the field of promise, shall be reaped in the harvest of vision. C.

Ver. 23. In this, and the first clause of ver. 24, the Son, in the days of his flesh, resumes his address to the Father. The reply of the Father, as quoted by the apostle, He. 1. 10, is one amongst the many and overwhelming evidences of the Godhead of the Son. In the begetting God created the heavens and the earth, Ge. 1. 1. But the Father being witness, the Son created the heavens and the earth; therefore—hear it, ye gainsayers, and be silent for ever!—therefore the Son is God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—To what low condition God reduces his church and people for the exercise and trial of their grace, and for exciting their more importunate prayers. In darkness, vexation, and trouble, their days often post toward an end. Afflicted, dispirited, and pained in their heart, and their body wasted to skin and bones,

PSALM CIII.

1 An exhortation to bless God for his mercy, 15 and for the constancy thereof.

A psalm of David.

BLESS the <sup>a</sup>LORD, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name.

2 Bless the LORD, O my soul, and <sup>b</sup>forget not all his benefits:

3 Who <sup>c</sup>forgiveth all thine iniquities;<sup>1</sup> who <sup>d</sup>healeth<sup>2</sup> all thy diseases;

4 Who<sup>e</sup> redeemeth thy life from destruction; who<sup>f</sup> crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies;

5 Who<sup>g</sup> satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that<sup>h</sup> thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.

6 The <sup>i</sup>LORD executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed.

7 He<sup>j</sup> made known his ways unto Moses, his acts unto the children of Israel.

8 The <sup>k</sup>LORD is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.

9 He<sup>l</sup> will not always chide; neither will he keep his anger for ever.

10 He<sup>m</sup> hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

11 For as the heaven is high<sup>n</sup> above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him.

12 As<sup>o</sup> far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.

13 Like<sup>p</sup> as a father pitieth his children, so the LORD pitieth them that fear him.

14 For<sup>q</sup> he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust.

15 As<sup>r</sup> for man, his days are as grass; <sup>s</sup>as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.

16 For<sup>t</sup> the wind passeth over it, and it is gone;<sup>3</sup> and the place thereof <sup>u</sup>shall know it no more.

17 But<sup>v</sup> the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and <sup>w</sup>his righteousness unto children's children;

18 To <sup>x</sup>such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them.

19 The LORD hath prepared<sup>y</sup> his throne in the heavens; and his kingdom ruleth over all.

20 Bless<sup>z</sup> the LORD, ye his angels, that excel in strength,<sup>4</sup> that do his commandments, hearken-ing unto the voice of his word.<sup>5</sup>

21 Bless ye the LORD, all ye <sup>a</sup>his hosts; ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure.

22 Bless<sup>b</sup> the LORD, all his works in all places of his dominion: bless the LORD, O my soul.<sup>7</sup>

PSALM CIV.

1 A meditation upon the mighty power, 7 and wonderful providence of God. 31 God's glory is eternal. 33 The prophet voweth perpetually to praise God.

BLESS the <sup>a</sup>LORD, O my soul. O LORD my God, <sup>b</sup>thou art very great; <sup>c</sup>thou art clothed with honour and majesty:

2 Who coverest thyself<sup>d</sup> with light as with a garment; <sup>e</sup>who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain;

4 Who<sup>i</sup> maketh his angels spirits, his ministers a flaming fire;<sup>1</sup>

5 Who laid the foundations of the <sup>j</sup>earth, that it should not be removed for ever.

6 Thou<sup>k</sup> coveredst it with the deep as with a garment: the waters stood above the mountains.

7 At<sup>l</sup> thy rebuke they fled; at the voice of thy thunder they hasted away.

8 They go up<sup>m</sup> by the mountains; they go down by the valleys<sup>n</sup> unto the place which thou hast founded for them.

9 Thou<sup>o</sup> hast set a bound that they may not pass over; that they turn not again to cover the earth.

10 He<sup>p</sup> sendeth the springs into the valleys, which run<sup>q</sup> among the hills.<sup>7</sup>

wherein all the beasts of the forest do creep forth.<sup>5</sup>

21 The<sup>e</sup> young lions roar after their prey, and seek their meat from God.

22 The<sup>e</sup> sun ariseth, they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens.

23 Man<sup>e</sup> goeth forth unto his work and to his labour until the evening.

24 O LORD, how manifold are thy works! in wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches:

25 So is this great and wide sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts.

26 There<sup>n</sup> go the ships:<sup>6</sup> there is that<sup>e</sup> leviathan, whom thou hast made<sup>7</sup> to play therein.

27 These<sup>p</sup> wait all upon thee; that thou mayest give them their meat in due season.

28 That thou givest them they gather: thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good.

29 Thou<sup>a</sup> hidest thy face, they are troubled: thou<sup>r</sup> takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust.

30 Thou<sup>s</sup> sendest forth thy spirit, they are created: and thou<sup>r</sup> renewest the face of the earth.<sup>8</sup>

31 The<sup>e</sup> glory of the LORD shall endure<sup>9</sup> for ever; the LORD shall rejoice in his works.

32 He<sup>e</sup> looketh on the earth, and it trembleth; he toucheth the hills, and they smoke.

33 I<sup>v</sup> will sing unto the LORD as long as I live; I will sing praise to my God while I have my being.<sup>1</sup>

34 My<sup>s</sup> meditation of him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the LORD.

35 Let<sup>a</sup> the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more.<sup>2</sup> Bless thou the LORD, O my soul. Praise ye the LORD.<sup>3</sup>

21 This was the grand lesson taught by all God's providential dealings with his people. It was taught in the life of Abraham, but especially in the deliverance of Israel out of Egypt. Thus was the teaching of history rather than of direct revelation.—P.

1 An exhortation to praise God, and to seek out his works. 8 He providence over Abraham, 16 over Joseph, 23 over Israel in Egypt, 26 over Moses delivering the Israelites, 31 over the Israelites brought out of Egypt, fed in the wilderness, and planted in Canaan.

GIVE<sup>a</sup> thanks unto the LORD; call upon his name;<sup>1</sup> make<sup>b</sup> known his deeds among the people.

2 Sing<sup>c</sup> unto him, sing psalms unto him; talk ye of all his wondrous works.

3 Glory<sup>d</sup> ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

4 Seek<sup>e</sup> the LORD, and his<sup>2</sup> strength;<sup>3</sup> seek his face evermore.

5 Remember<sup>h</sup> his marvellous works that he hath done; his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth,

6 O ye seed of Abraham his servant, ye children of Jacob his chosen.

7 He<sup>j</sup> is the LORD our God:<sup>4</sup> his<sup>k</sup> judgments are in all the earth.

8 He<sup>i</sup> hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations:

9 Which<sup>n</sup> covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac;

10 And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant;

11 Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot<sup>5</sup> of your inheritance:

12 When they were but<sup>7</sup> a few men in number; yea, very few, and strangers in it.

13 When<sup>7</sup> they went from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people,

14 He<sup>e</sup> suffered no man to do them wrong; yea, he reproved kings for their sakes;

15 Saying, Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm.<sup>6</sup> enabling them to overcome all temptations; he deals graciously in showering down spiritual mercies, fulfilling to them promises, and cherishing them with bright and glorious hopes. P.

Ver. 18. Covenant. This is not that covenant of works which saith, 'Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law, to do them'; but that covenant of grace, recorded by Paul, He. 8. 8-13, wherein the cleansing of the believer lies in the Redeemer's blood, 1 Jn. 1. 7, and his completeness and acceptance in the Redeemer's righteousness, Col. 2. 10; Ep. 1. 6. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Our hearts need to be much encouraged and excited, even to the most proper and most delightful exercises. And in dealing with God our hearts ought to be wholly engaged. But how shameful is it that we ever forget, that we so early forget, his mercies!—his mercies so great, so necessary, so numerous, so connected, so everlasting!—his unbounded compassion to us who are so mean, so frail, so polluted!—his free, full, and everlasting pardons should humble our hearts, and animate us to holy fear, love, and obedience. And while all his creatures in heaven and earth concur to bless and serve him, surely

Ver. 7. Voice of thy thunder. Modern discovery is daily bringing to light more of the power of electricity in the works of creation; and though we do not affirm with some that the Scriptures contain a system of natural philosophy, yet it is satisfactory to the believer who may live within the polluted atmosphere of infidelity, to learn that no progress of philosophical discovery has ever detected a single philosophical error in the Bible. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Great is the glory, the awful majesty, the infinite goodness, and mercy of our God! In what bright abodes of light is he enthroned! While clouds and winds convey the influences of his power, angelic hosts, made by himself, surround his seat, and bear his messages. Established earth and bounded seas confess his power. Springs below, rains from above, fruitful fields, and towering trees, nestling birds, shining luminaries, changing seasons, ravenous animals, swarming fishes and their spacious sea, and labouring man, his Maker's image, all preserved, all maintained, all governed by his power, his kindness, and his care, owe their whole selves and service to this mighty Lord! Can he then, who hangs a whole creation on his arm, to remove a wicked and dishonest occupant, who refuses to render his stipulated return. How much more had God a right to drive out the most wicked of all nations, who not only refused to acknowledge their righteous Lord paramount, but who worshipped devils, while they hated him? C.

REFLECTIONS.—How infinitely excellent is this God, who deserves such gratitude, such praise, such search, such confidence! Marvellous is his blessed relation to us, and tender mercies towards us: and thrice happy are they who have him their own and their fathers' God! Happy are they who know the judgments of his mouth, his word, and live thereby; and for whose welfare the judgments of his hand are executed in all the earth! From mean appearances God's great manifestations of himself take their rise. But great is the care he takes of his people in this world, where they are but few, and strangers. He that touches them touches the apple of his eye. And apparent difficulties easily vanish before the power of a promising God. But how mysterious are his ways 16 Moreover, he "called for "a famine upon the land: he brake the whole "staff of bread.

17 He<sup>9</sup> sent a man before them, even Joseph, who was sold for a servant;<sup>7</sup>

18 Whose<sup>2</sup> feet they hurt with fetters: he was laid in iron;<sup>8</sup>

19 Until the time that his "word came: the word of the LORD tried him.

20 The<sup>b</sup> king sent and loosed him; even the ruler of the people, and let him go free.

21 He<sup>c</sup> made him lord of his house, and ruler of all his substance;<sup>9</sup>

22 To bind his princes at his pleasure, and teach his senators wisdom.

23 Israel<sup>d</sup> also came into Egypt, and Jacob sojourned in the land of Ham:<sup>1</sup>

24 And<sup>e</sup> he increased his people greatly, and made them stronger than their enemies.

25 He<sup>g</sup> turned their heart<sup>2</sup> to hate his people, to deal subtilly with his servants.

26 He<sup>h</sup> sent Moses his servant, and Aaron whom he had chosen.

27 They<sup>i</sup> showed his signs<sup>3</sup> among them, and wonders in the land of Ham.

28 He<sup>j</sup> sent darkness, and made it dark; and they<sup>4</sup> rebelled not against his word.<sup>5</sup>

29 He<sup>k</sup> turned their waters into blood, and slew their fish.

30 Their<sup>l</sup> land brought forth frogs in abundance in the chambers of their kings.

31 He<sup>m</sup> spake, and there came divers sorts of flies, and lice in all their coasts.

32 He<sup>n</sup> gave them hail for rain,<sup>6</sup> and flaming fire in their land.

33 He smote their vines also, and their fig-trees; and brake the trees of their coasts.

34 He<sup>p</sup> spake, and the locusts came, and caterpillars, and that without number, 35 And<sup>q</sup> did eat up all the herbs in their land, and devoured the fruit of their ground.

36 He<sup>r</sup> smote also all the first-born in their land, the chief of all their strength.

37 He<sup>s</sup> brought them forth<sup>7</sup> also with silver and gold: and there was not one feeble person among their tribes.<sup>8</sup>

38 Egypt<sup>t</sup> was glad when they departed: for the fear of them fell upon them.

39 He<sup>u</sup> spread a cloud for a covering; and fire to give light in the night.

40 The<sup>v</sup> people asked, and he brought quails, and satisfied them with the bread of heaven.

PSALM CVI.

1 The psalmist exhorteth to praise God for his goodness. 4 He prayeth to share in his people's joy: 6 he rehearseth Israel's rebellions and God's mercies: 47 He concludeth with prayer and blessing.

1 PRAISE ye the LORD.<sup>1</sup> O "give thanks unto the LORD; for he is "good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Who "can utter the mighty acts of the LORD? who can show forth all his praise?

3 Blessed are they that "keep judgment, and he that doeth righteousness at all times.<sup>2</sup>

4 Remember<sup>c</sup> me, O LORD, with the favour that thou bearest unto thy people: O visit me with thy salvation;

5 That I may see "the good of thy chosen, that I may rejoice in the gladness of thy nation, that I may glory with thine inheritance.

6 We<sup>h</sup> have sinned with our fathers; we have committed iniquity; we have done wickedly.<sup>3</sup>

7 Our fathers "understood not thy wonders in Egypt; they remembered not the multitude of thy mercies; "but provoked him at the sea, even at the Red sea.

8 Nevertheless<sup>k</sup> he saved them for his name's sake, "that "he might make his mighty power to be known.

9 He<sup>m</sup> rebuked the Red sea also, and it was dried up: so he led them through the depths, as through the wilderness.

10 And<sup>n</sup> he saved them from the hand of him that hated them, and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.

12 Then<sup>p</sup> believed they his words; they sang his praise.

13 They<sup>q</sup> soon forgot<sup>5</sup> his works; they waited not for his counsel;<sup>6</sup>

14 But<sup>r</sup> lusted exceedingly<sup>7</sup> in the wilderness, and tempted God in the desert.

15 And<sup>s</sup> he gave them their request; but 16 They<sup>1</sup> envied Moses also in the camp, and Aaron the saint of the LORD.

17 The<sup>a</sup> earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram.

18 And<sup>a</sup> a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burnt up the wicked.

19 They<sup>2</sup> made a calf in Horeb, and worshipped the molten image.<sup>9</sup>

20 Thus<sup>9</sup> they changed their glory into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.

21 They<sup>2</sup> forgot God<sup>1</sup> their saviour, which had done "great things in Egypt;

22 Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red sea.

23 Therefore<sup>b</sup> he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his chosen stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.

24 Yea, "they despised the pleasant land;<sup>2</sup> they<sup>d</sup> believed not his word;

25 But<sup>e</sup> murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the LORD:

26 Therefore he "lifted up his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness:

27 To overthrow<sup>3</sup> their seed also among the nations, and to "scatter them in the lands.

28 They<sup>1</sup> joined themselves also unto Baal-peor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead.<sup>4</sup>

29 Thus<sup>k</sup> they provoked him to anger with their inventions; and the "plague brake in upon them.

30 Then<sup>n</sup> stood up Phinehas, and executed judgment; and so "the plague was stayed:

31 And that was "counted unto him for righteousness unto all generations for evermore.

32 They<sup>9</sup> angered him also at the waters of strife, so that it went ill with Moses for their sakes:

33 Because they provoked his spirit, so that he "spake unadvisedly with his lips.<sup>5</sup>

34 They<sup>s</sup> did not destroy the nations, "concerning whom the LORD commanded them;

35 But<sup>u</sup> were mingled among the heathen, and learned their works.

36 And<sup>v</sup> they served their idols; which were a snare unto them.

37 Yea,<sup>z</sup> they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto devils,<sup>6</sup>

38 And shed innocent blood, even the blood of their sons and of their daughters, whom they sacrificed unto the idols of Canaan: and the land was "polluted with blood.

39 Thus<sup>z</sup> were they defiled with their own works, "and went a whoring with their own inventions:

40 Therefore "was the wrath of the LORD kindled against his people, insomuch that he abhorred his own inheritance.

41 And<sup>c</sup> he gave them into the hand of the heathen; and they that hated them ruled over them.

42 Their enemies also oppressed them, and they were brought into subjection under their hand.

43 Many<sup>d</sup> times did he deliver them: but they provoked him with their counsel, and were "brought low for their iniquity.<sup>8</sup>

44 Nevertheless<sup>e</sup> he regarded their affliction, "when he heard their cry:

45 And<sup>b</sup> he remembered for them his covenant, and "repented according to the multitude of his mercies.<sup>9</sup>

46 He<sup>f</sup> made them also to be pitied of all those that carried them captives.<sup>1</sup>

47 Save<sup>k</sup> us, O LORD our God, and gather us from among the heathen, "to give thanks unto thy holy name, and to triumph in thy praise.

48 Blessed<sup>n</sup> be the LORD God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting: and let all the people say, Amen. Praise ye the LORD.

If the forgetfulness of spirit here charged upon Israel appear strange or incredible to any one, let him only look at the word
"around him, and in all ranks and condi-

discover examples of a forgetfulness of baptism and the Lord's Supper, with all their holy obligations and privileges, not only as glaring as those of Israel in the desert, but many times more strange and criminal, because of the greater light of the knowledge of which now shines in the face of Jesus Christ—of Christ, not in types and shadows, but visibly set forth as crucified amongst us.—C.

PSALM CVII.

1 The psalmist exhorteth the redeemed, in praising God, to observe his manifold providence, 4 over travellers, 10 over captives, 17 over sick men, 23 over seamen, 33 and in divers varieties of life.

GIVE thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.<sup>1</sup>

2 Let the redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy;

3 And gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from the south.<sup>2</sup>

4 They<sup>a</sup> wandered in the wilderness in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in.

5 Hungry<sup>a</sup> and thirsty, their soul fainted in them.<sup>3</sup>

6 Then<sup>a</sup> they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses.

7 And he led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation.

8 Oh<sup>a</sup> that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

9 For<sup>a</sup> he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.

10 Such<sup>a</sup> as sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death, being bound in affliction and iron;

11 Because<sup>a</sup> they rebelled against the words of God, and contemned the counsel of the most High:

12 Therefore<sup>a</sup> he brought down their heart with labour: they fell down, and there was none to help.

13 Then<sup>a</sup> they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saved them out of their distresses.

14 He<sup>a</sup> brought them out of darkness and the shadow of death, and brake their bands in sunder.

15 Oh<sup>a</sup> that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

16 For<sup>a</sup> he hath broken the gates of brass, and cut the bars of iron in sunder.

17 Fools<sup>a</sup> because of their transgression, and because of their iniquities, are afflicted.

18 Their<sup>a</sup> soul abhorreth all manner of meat; and they draw near unto the gates of death.

19 Then<sup>a</sup> they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses.

2 Awake, 'psaltery and harp; I myself will awake early.

3 I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people; and I will sing praises unto thee among the nations.

4 For thy mercy is great above the heavens; and thy truth reacheth unto the clouds.<sup>3</sup>

5 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens, and thy glory above all the earth.<sup>4</sup>

6 That thy beloved may be delivered: save with thy right hand, and answer me.

7 God hath spoken in his holiness; I will rejoice, I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth.

8 Gilead is mine; Manasseh is mine; Ephraim also is the strength of mine head; Judah is my lawgiver;

9 Moab is my wash-pot; over Edom will I cast out my shoe; over Philistia will I triumph.

10 Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom?

11 Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our hosts?

12 Give us help from trouble; for vain is the help of man.

13 Through God we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall tread down our enemies.

PSALM CIX.

1 David, complaining of his slanderous enemies, under the person of Judas, devoteth them. 16 He sheweth their sin. 21 Complaining of his own misery, he prayeth for help. 30 He promiseth thankfulness.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

HOLD not thy peace, O God of my praise; 2 For the mouth of the wicked, and the mouth of the deceitful, are opened against me; they have spoken against me with a lying tongue.

3 They compassed me about also with words of hatred; and fought against me without a cause.

4 For my love they are my adversaries: but I give myself unto prayer.<sup>3</sup>

5 And they have rewarded me evil for good, and hatred for my love.

6 Set thou a wicked man over him; and let Satan stand at his right hand.<sup>5</sup>

7 When he shall be judged, let him be condemned; and let his prayer become sin.

8 Let his days be few; and let another take his office.<sup>7</sup>

9 Let his children be fatherless, and his wife phetical rather than imprecatory; yet it is still quite true that the writer desires the punishment of those who had persecuted him with such intense bitterness. The first thing the psalmist asks is, that his foe might be subjected to the evil of having a man placed over him like himself—a man (regardless of justice, truth, and right; a man who would respect character and propriety no more than he had himself done. It is in fact a prayer that he might be punished in the line of his offences. It can be wrong that a man should be treated as he treats others; and it cannot be itself wrong to desire that a man should be treated according to his character and deserts; for this is the object of all law, and this is what all magistrates and legislators are endeavouring to secure. There is much force in these words of Albert Barnes; yet still the spirit and real bearing of this psalm must be in a great measure lost if we lose sight of its prophetic character, and of the fact that it is the direct utterance of the divine and omniscient Spirit of God.—P.

11 Let the extortioner catch all that he hath; and let the stranger spoil his labour.

12 Let there be none to extend mercy unto him; neither let there be any to favour his fatherless children.

13 Let his posterity be cut off; and in the generation following let their name be blotted out.

14 Let the iniquity of his fathers be remembered with the LORD; and let not the sin of his mother be blotted out.

15 Let them be before the LORD continually, that he may cut off the memory of them from the earth:

16 Because that he remembered not to show mercy, but persecuted the poor and needy man, that he might even slay the broken in heart.

17 As he loved cursing, so let it come unto him; as he delighted not in blessing, so let it be far from him.

18 As he clothed himself with cursing like as with his garment, so let it come into his bowels like water, and like oil into his bones.

19 Let it be unto him as the garment which covereth him, and for a girdle wherewith he is girded continually.

20 Let this be the reward of mine adversaries from the LORD, and of them that speak evil against my soul.

21 But do thou for me, O God the LORD, for thy name's sake: because thy mercy is good, deliver thou me.

22 For I am poor and needy, and my heart is wounded within me.

23 I am gone like the shadow when it declineth; I am tossed up and down as the locust.

24 My knees are weak through fasting; and my flesh faileth of fatness.

25 I became also a reproach unto them: when they looked upon me they shook their heads.

26 Help me, O LORD my God: O save me according to thy mercy:

27 That they may know that this is thy hand; that thou, LORD, hast done it.

28 Let them curse, but bless thou: when they arise, let them be ashamed; but let thy servant rejoice.

29 Let mine adversaries be clothed with shame, and let them cover themselves with their own confusion, as with a mantle.

PSALM CX.

1 A prediction of the kingdom, 4 priesthood, 5 triumphs, 7 and sufferings of Christ.

A psalm of David.

THE LORD<sup>a</sup> said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool.

2 The LORD shall send<sup>b</sup> the rod of thy strength out of Zion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies.

3 Thy<sup>c</sup> people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness from the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth.<sup>3</sup>

4 The LORD hath sworn, and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchizedek.

5 The LORD at thy right hand shall strike through kings in the day of his wrath.

6 He shall judge among the heathen, he shall fill the places with the dead bodies; he shall wound the heads over many<sup>3</sup> countries.

7 He shall drink of the brook in the way: therefore shall he lift up the head.<sup>4</sup>

PSALM CXI.

1 The psalmist by his example inciteth others to praise God for his glorious and gracious works. 10 The fear of God is the source of true wisdom.

PRAISE ye the LORD.<sup>1</sup> I<sup>a</sup> will praise the LORD with my whole heart, in the assembly of the upright, and in the congregation.

2 The<sup>b</sup> works of the LORD are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.

3 His<sup>c</sup> work is honourable and glorious; and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 He<sup>d</sup> hath made his wonderful works to be remembered: the LORD is gracious, and full of compassion.

5 He<sup>e</sup> hath given meat<sup>2</sup> unto them that fear him: he will ever be mindful of his covenant.

6 He<sup>f</sup> hath showed his people the power of

PSALM CXII.

1 Godliness hath the promises of this life, 4 and of the life to come. 10 The prosperity of the godly shall be despised by the wicked.

PRAISE ye the LORD.<sup>1</sup> Blessed<sup>a</sup> is the man that feareth the LORD, that delighteth greatly in his commandments.

2 His<sup>b</sup> seed shall be mighty upon earth: the generation of the upright shall be blessed.

3 Wealth<sup>c</sup> and riches shall be in his house; and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 Unto<sup>d</sup> the upright there ariseth light in the darkness: he is gracious, and full of compassion, and righteous.

5 A<sup>e</sup> good man showeth favour, and lendeth: he will guide his affairs with discretion.<sup>2</sup>

6 Surely<sup>f</sup> he shall not be moved for ever: the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.

7 He<sup>g</sup> shall not be afraid of evil<sup>3</sup> tidings: his heart is fixed, trusting in the LORD.

8 His heart is established, he shall not be afraid, until he see his desire upon his enemies.

9 He<sup>h</sup> hath dispersed; he hath given to the poor; his righteousness endureth for ever; his horn shall be exalted with honour.

10 The<sup>i</sup> wicked<sup>5</sup> shall see it, and be grieved; he shall gnash with his teeth, and melt away: the desire of the wicked shall perish.

themselves, take up their cross, follow, suffer, pray, praise; yea, utterly to devote themselves, with all they have and are, to the advancement of the kingdom of their great Priest and King. C.

Ver. 5. The LORD at thy right hand. It is distinctly to be remarked, that he who is called Adon, Lord, ver. 1, is placed at the right hand of JEHOVAH, God supreme. But now, ver. 5, he is distinctly called Jehovah—a mode of speech clearly evincing the Godhead equality of Father and Son, and with the office-subordination of the Son to the Father. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How high is the dignity of our Redeemer! Glorious is his reward for his work of obedience and suffering. And all his enemies—sin, Satan, the world, and death—are made to bow under his feet.

blessings of salvation, from this great High-priest of our profession. Horrid is the crime, if for a moment we dare question his power and grace, and stagger at promises confirmed by two immutable things—the word and oath of that God who cannot lie. And while Jesus, finishing his obedience, and strengthened by the Holy Ghost, lifts up his head in everlasting triumph, dreadful is the ruin of his malicious and powerful opposers, Jews, heathens, antichristians, and others.

PSALM CXI. Ver. 1. On comparing this ver. with Ps. 18.
49, explained by Ro. 15.9, there can be no question that both are the words of Christ. But were this proof wanting, the confident conformable to his righteous nature, and must be obeyed in simplicity by them that serve him. Everlasting, ordered in all things and sure, is his word, and all the redemption it offers and communicates to men. And they are the only wise persons who fear him and keep his commandments; everlasting shall be their honour and reward.

PSALM CXII. Ver. 3. Every torture of accommodation has been exhausted in applying this psalm to every believer, at least to every one of high attainments. But surely a comparison of this single verse with Ro. 3. 10, 21, 22, should have convinced every interpreter, that, though not altogether a prophecy, it was still a description, a spiritual picture of Messiah, whereby the church might recognize him at his coming.

An exhortation to praise God,

PSALM CXIII.

An exhortation to praise God for his merciful condescension to his creatures.

PRAISE ye the LORD.<sup>1</sup> Praise, O ye servants of the LORD, praise the name<sup>2</sup> of the LORD.
2 Blessed<sup>3</sup> be the name of the LORD from this time forth and for evermore.
3 From<sup>4</sup> the rising of the sun, unto the going down<sup>3</sup> of the same, the LORD's name is to be praised.
4 The<sup>2</sup> LORD is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens.
5 Who<sup>6</sup> is like unto the LORD our God, who dwelleth on high;<sup>4</sup>
6 Who<sup>9</sup> humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven, and in the earth!
7 He<sup>8</sup> raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifeth the needy out of the dunghill;
8 That<sup>1</sup> he may set him with princes, even with the princes of his people.
9 He<sup>1</sup> maketh the barren woman <sup>5</sup>to keep house,<sup>6</sup> and to be a joyful mother of children. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXIV.

The miracles of God's power, when he brought his people out of Egypt, are a just ground of fearing him.

WHEN Israel<sup>a</sup> went out of Egypt, the house of Jacob from a people of <sup>1</sup>strange language,<sup>1</sup>
2 Judah<sup>c</sup> was his sanctuary,<sup>2</sup> and Israel<sup>3</sup> his dominion.
3 The<sup>a</sup> sea saw it, and fled; Jordan was driven back.
4 The<sup>a</sup> mountains skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs.
5 What<sup>9</sup> ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest? thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?
6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams; and ye little hills, like lambs?
7 Tremble,<sup>a</sup> thou earth, at the presence of the LORD, at the presence of the God of Jacob;
8 Which<sup>1</sup> turned the rock into a standing water, the flint<sup>4</sup> into a fountain of waters.

PSALM CXV.

1 Because God is truly glorious, 4 and idols are vanity, 9 the psalmist exhorteth to confidence in God. 12 God is to be praised for his blessings.

PSALM CXVI.

1 The psalmist professeth his love and duty to God for his deliverance. 12 He studieth to be thankful.

I LOVE the<sup>a</sup> LORD, because <sup>b</sup>he hath heard my voice and my supplications.

2 Because<sup>c</sup> he hath inclined his ear unto me, therefore will I call upon him as long as I live.<sup>1</sup>

3 The<sup>d</sup> sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell gat hold upon me:<sup>2</sup> I found trouble and sorrow.

4 Then<sup>e</sup> called I upon the name of the LORD; O LORD, I beseech thee, deliver my soul.

5 Gracious<sup>h</sup> is the LORD, and <sup>i</sup>righteous; yea, our God is merciful.

The psalmist studieth to be thankful.

7 Return<sup>1</sup> unto thy rest, O my soul; for the LORD hath dealt bountifully with thee.<sup>3</sup>

8 For<sup>a</sup> thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling.<sup>4</sup>

9 I<sup>b</sup> will walk before the LORD in the land of the living.

10 I<sup>c</sup> believed, therefore have I spoken: I was greatly afflicted;<sup>5</sup>

11 I<sup>a</sup> said in my haste, All men are liars.

12 What<sup>r</sup> shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits toward me?

13 I<sup>a</sup> will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the LORD.

14 I<sup>a</sup> will pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all his people.

15 Precious<sup>a</sup> in the sight of the LORD is the death of his saints.

16 O LORD, truly I am thy servant; I am thy servant, and the son of thine handmaid: thou hast loosed my bonds.

17 I<sup>a</sup> will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD.

18 I<sup>a</sup> will pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all his people, 19 In<sup>a</sup> the courts of the LORD's house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXVII.

An exhortation to praise God for his mercy and truth.

dishonouring to God, is the worshipping of idols. And how absurd it is for idolaters to upbraid the saints with their all-present, all-creating, and all-governing JEHOVAH. Great is their encouragement to trust in a God, who is so much, and gives so much to his people; nay, gives so much to men! They can never fail whose faith stands firm. And greatly then should we exert ourselves in praising and serving God here, as in death we shall have no such opportunities for it.

PSALM CXVI. Ver. 3. Can this be true of any but the 'Man of Sorrows, acquainted with grief?'—of him who was exceeding 'sorrowful even unto death,' which death lies within the dominion of Satan, by whom its power is still vindictively exercised? See He. 2. 14. C.

Ver. 10. Were there yet any question that Jesus, in his sorrows, is the speaker, the quotation of this verse by Paul (2 Co. 4. 13) would put the matter beyond controversy. 'The same spirit of faith' spoken of, ver. 13, cannot possibly have a correspondent, but 'the life of Jesus,' referred to in ver. 11. C.

Ver. 11. In my haste. 'In my ecstasy.'—Sept. 'My agitation.'—Horsley. All men are liars—are deceitful.—Green. The very fact which our Lord, returning from his agony in Gethsemane, implied, 'when he came to his disciples, and found them ful, to walk always as under his eye, and in conformity to him; in subjection to his will as our Father, and in dependence on him as our all-sufficient portion. The consideration that we are in the land of the living should quicken us to it. And it is delightful to speak and practise that which our heart believes upon God's testimony, ratified by the blood of his Son. But often, under strong temptations and in deep afflictions, the strongest believers have had their faith shaken, and have been surprised into thoughts and words extremely dishonourable to God. Yet he upholds all believers, and makes them quickly to change their voice. And O how pleasant it is to be so overwhelmed with a sense of God's love, that we scarcely know what praise, what vows, or what service to return him in gratitude! But while we praise him for what we have received, we must eagerly drink more and more of his cup of salvation, and receive more and more out of his fulness, and grace for grace. How precious and delightful to God is the death of his saints for, or in, the Lord! But much more that unparalleled death of Jesus Christ for Amid severe bodily suffering, and deep mental anguish, when earthly comfort would have been vain, the writer looks to and trusts in God. An exhortation to praise God.

PSALM CXVIII.

1 An exhortation to praise God for his mercy. 5 The psalmist by his own experience sheweth how good it is to trust in God. 19 Under the type of the psalmist the coming of Christ in his kingdom is expressed.

O GIVE thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: because his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Let<sup>a</sup> Israel now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

3 Let<sup>a</sup> the house of Aaron now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Let<sup>a</sup> them now that fear the LORD say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

5 I<sup>b</sup> called upon the LORD in distress:<sup>1</sup> the LORD answered me, and set me in a large place.

6 The<sup>a</sup> LORD is on my side;<sup>2</sup> I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

7 The<sup>a</sup> LORD taketh my part with them that help me; therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

8 It<sup>a</sup> is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.

9 It<sup>a</sup> is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in princes.

10 All<sup>a</sup> nations compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I destroy them.<sup>3</sup>

11 They compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

12 They<sup>a</sup> compassed me about like bees; they are quenched as the fire of thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.<sup>5</sup>

13 Thou<sup>a</sup> hast thrust sore at me that I might fall; but the LORD helped me.

14 The<sup>a</sup> LORD is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

15 I called upon the LORD, and he answered me, and set me in a large place.

16 The LORD is on my side, and I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

17 The LORD taketh my part with them that help me; therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

18 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.

19 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in princes.

23 Thou hast thrust sore at me that I might fall; but the LORD helped me.

24 The LORD is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

25 I called upon the LORD, and he answered me, and set me in a large place.

32 They compassed me about like bees; they are quenched as the fire of thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

33 Thou hast thrust sore at me that I might fall; but the LORD helped me.

34 The LORD is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

35 I called upon the LORD, and he answered me, and set me in a large place.

36 The LORD is on my side, and I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

37 The LORD taketh my part with them that help me; therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

38 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.

39 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in princes.

93 Thou hast thrust sore at me that I might fall; but the LORD helped me.

94 The LORD is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

95 I called upon the LORD, and he answered me, and set me in a large place.

96 The LORD is on my side, and I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

97 The LORD taketh my part with them that help me; therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

98 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.

99 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in princes.

100 All nations compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I destroy them.

101 They compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

102 They compassed me about like bees; they are quenched as the fire of thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

103 Thou hast thrust sore at me that I might fall; but the LORD helped me.

104 The LORD is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

105 I called upon the LORD, and he answered me, and set me in a large place.

106 The LORD is on my side, and I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

107 The LORD taketh my part with them that help me; therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

108 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.

109 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in princes.

110 All nations compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I destroy them.

111 They compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

112 They compassed me about like bees; they are quenched as the fire of thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

113 Thou hast thrust sore at me that I might fall; but the LORD helped me.

114 The LORD is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

115 I called upon the LORD, and he answered me, and set me in a large place.

116 The LORD is on my side, and I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

117 The LORD taketh my part with them that help me; therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

118 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.

119 It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in princes.

120 All nations compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I destroy them.

121 They compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

122 They compassed me about like bees; they are quenched as the fire of thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

123 Thou hast thrust sore at me that I might fall; but the LORD helped me.

15 The<sup>r</sup> voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous: the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.

16 The right hand of the LORD is exalted; the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.

17 I<sup>t</sup> shall not die, but live, and declare the works of the LORD.

18 The<sup>r</sup> LORD hath chastened me sore; but he hath not given me over unto death.<sup>7</sup>

19 Open<sup>e</sup> to me the gates of righteousness: I will go into them, and I will praise the LORD:

20 This gate of the LORD, into which the righteous shall enter.

21 I<sup>l</sup> will praise thee; for thou hast heard me, and art become my salvation.

22 The<sup>r</sup> stone which the builders refused is become the head-stone of the corner.<sup>8</sup>

23 This is the LORD's doing:<sup>9</sup> it is marvelous in our eyes.

24 This<sup>b</sup> is the day which the LORD hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it.

25 Save<sup>e</sup> now, I beseech thee, O LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, send now prosperity.

26 Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the LORD: we have blessed<sup>1</sup> you out of the house of the LORD.

27 God<sup>e</sup> is the LORD, which hath showed us light: bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar.

28 Thou<sup>h</sup> art my God, and I will praise thee: thou art my God, I will exalt thee.

29 O<sup>i</sup> give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Thou<sup>e</sup> hast commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently.

5 Oh<sup>h</sup> that my ways were directed to keep thy statutes!

6 Then shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect unto all thy commandments.<sup>2</sup>

7 I<sup>l</sup> will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I shall have learned thy righteous judgments.<sup>4</sup>

8 I<sup>f</sup> will keep thy statutes: O forsake me not utterly.

BETH.

9 Wherewithal<sup>e</sup> shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed thereto according to thy word.<sup>5</sup>

10 With<sup>1</sup> my whole heart have I sought thee: O let me not wander from thy commandments.

11 Thy<sup>o</sup> word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee.

12 Blessed art thou, O LORD: teach me thy statutes.

13 With<sup>a</sup> my lips have I declared all the judgments of thy mouth.

14 I<sup>r</sup> have rejoiced in the way of thy testimonies, as much as in all riches.

15 I<sup>s</sup> will meditate in thy precepts, and have respect unto thy ways.

16 I<sup>t</sup> will delight myself in thy statutes: I will not forget thy word.

GIMEL.

17 Deal<sup>e</sup> bountifully with thy servant, that I may live, and keep thy word.

18 Open<sup>6</sup> thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law.

19 I<sup>am</sup> a stranger in the earth: hide not thy commandments from me.

And believingly claiming him and his Father as our God, our all in all, let us ever exult in his suns in the firmament; this is a constellation of suns—a galaxy of divine light and glory—Jesus sits 'all and in all.' That this may appear, the attention of the unprejudiced and godly reader is humbly solicited to the following facts: (1) One speaker, whoever he be, speaks of himself throughout the whole psalm. (2) The following is the speaker's character, drawn by himself, under the sure guidance of the Spirit of God: 'With my whole heart have I sought thee, ver. 10.—Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee, 11.—With my lips have I declared all the judgments of thy mouth, 12.—I will not forget thy statutes, 13.—I have kept thy testimonies, 14.—I have hoped for thy salvation, and done thy commandments, 15.—I have kept thy precepts and thy testimonies, for all my ways are before thee, 16.—I have chosen thy precepts; I do not forget thy commandments, 17.—173-176.

25 My<sup>a</sup> soul cleaveth unto the<sup>a</sup> dust: <sup>a</sup>quicken thou me according to thy word.

26 I<sup>a</sup> have declared my ways,<sup>1</sup> and thou heardest me; <sup>a</sup>teach me thy statutes.

27 Make me to understand the way of thy precepts: <sup>a</sup>so shall I talk of thy wondrous works.

28 My soul melteth<sup>2</sup> for heaviness: <sup>a</sup>strengthen thou me according unto thy word.

29 Remove<sup>a</sup> from me the way of lying;<sup>3</sup> and grant<sup>a</sup> me thy law graciously.

30 I<sup>a</sup> have chosen the way of truth: thy judgments have I <sup>a</sup>laid before me.

31 I<sup>a</sup> have stuck unto thy testimonies: O LORD, <sup>a</sup>put me not to shame.

32 I<sup>a</sup> will run the way of thy commandments, when thou shalt enlarge<sup>4</sup> my heart.

HE.

33 Teach<sup>a</sup> me, O LORD, the way of thy statutes; and <sup>a</sup>I shall keep it unto the end.

34 Give<sup>a</sup> me understanding, and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it <sup>a</sup>with my whole heart.

35 Make<sup>a</sup> me to go in the path of thy commandments; for therein do I delight.

36 Incline<sup>a</sup> my heart unto thy testimonies, and<sup>b</sup> not to covetousness.

37 Turn away<sup>5</sup> mine eyes <sup>a</sup>from beholding vanity; and <sup>a</sup>quicker thou me in thy way.<sup>6</sup>

38 Stablish<sup>a</sup> thy word unto thy servant, who is devoted to thy fear.

39 Turn<sup>a</sup> away my reproach which I fear: for thy judgments are good.

40 Behold, <sup>a</sup>I have longed after thy precepts: <sup>a</sup>quicken me in thy righteousness.

LAMED.

but I will keep thy precepts <sup>with my whole heart.</sup>

70 Their heart is as fat as grease: <sup>but</sup> I delight in thy law.

71 It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes.

72 The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver.

JOD.

73 Thy hands have made me, and fashioned me: <sup>give</sup> me understanding, that I may learn thy commandments.

74 They that fear thee will be glad when they see me; because I have hoped in thy word.

75 I know, O LORD, that thy judgments are right, <sup>and that thou</sup> in faithfulness hast afflicted me.

76 Let, I pray thee, thy merciful kindness be for my comfort, <sup>according to thy word</sup> unto thy servant.

77 Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live: for thy law is my delight.

78 Let the proud be ashamed; for they dealt perversely with me without a cause: <sup>but</sup> I will meditate in thy precepts.

79 Let those that fear thee turn unto me, <sup>and those that have known thy testimonies.</sup> 80 Let my heart be sound in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed.

CAPH.

81 My soul fainteth for thy salvation: <sup>but</sup> I hope in thy word.

82 Mine eyes fail for thy word, saying, When wilt thou comfort me?

83 For I am become like a bottle in the smoke; yet do I not forget thy statutes.

84 How many are the days of thy servant? when wilt thou execute judgment on them that persecute me?

85 The proud have digged pits for me, which are not after thy law.

86 All thy commandments are faithful: they persecute me wrongfully; help thou me.

87 They had almost consumed me upon earth: but I forsook not thy precepts.

88 Quickened me after thy loving-kindness; so shall I keep the testimony of thy mouth.

1 The meaning is, that at creation God established those great natural laws by which the physical universe is governed.
These laws were the products of the divine will, and they are sustained in operation by the direct exercise of the divine power. They are the servants of God, acting in obedience to his commands, and subject to be regulated and changed at his pleasure. Law is not above God; on the contrary, God is the author of all law, as well that which regulates the physical, as that which regulates the moral world.—P—

89 For ever, O LORD, thy word is settled in heaven.<sup>7</sup>

90 Thy faithfulness is unto all generations: thou hast established the earth, and it abideth.

91 They continue this day according to thine ordinances: for all are thy servants.<sup>1</sup>

92 Unless thy law had been my delights, I should then have perished in mine affliction.

93 I will never forget thy precepts: for with them thou hast quickened me.

94 I am thine, save me: for I have sought thy precepts.

95 The wicked have waited for me to destroy me: <sup>but</sup> I will consider thy testimonies.

96 I have seen an end of all perfection: <sup>but</sup> thy commandment is exceeding broad.

MEM.

97 O how love I thy law! it is my meditation all the day.

98 Thou, through thy commandments, hast made me wiser than mine enemies; <sup>for they are ever with me.</sup>

99 I have more understanding than all my teachers: for thy testimonies are my meditation.

100 I understand more than the ancients, because I keep thy precepts.

101 I have refrained my feet from every evil way, that I might keep thy word.

102 I have not departed from thy judgments: for thou hast taught me.

103 How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!

104 Through thy precepts I get understanding: therefore I hate every false way.

NUN.

105 Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

106 I have sworn, and I will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments.

107 I am afflicted very much: quicken me, O LORD, according unto thy word.

108 Accept, I beseech thee, the free-will offerings of my mouth, O LORD, and teach me thy judgments.

mode of construction would give a somewhat stiff and constrained formality to the whole poem; yet such is not the case. The genius of the Hebrew poet overcame all restraints, and produced a work, perfect in form, and yet free, beautiful, and inspiring.

Who else ever declared all the judgments of God?—Note, Law, testimonies, precepts, statutes, commandments, judgments, having been explained in notes on ver 1-7, will not again be noticed. C.

Ver. 67. I went astray. Whether these be taken as the words of Christ or of some of the prophets, they cannot be taken morally, for that would contradict ver. 22, 31, 51, 55, 56, 61. But these 109 My<sup>s</sup> soul is continually in my hand; yet<sup>k</sup> do I not forget thy law.

110 The<sup>s</sup> wicked have laid a snare for me; yet I erred not from thy precepts.

111 Thy<sup>s</sup> testimonies have I taken as an heritage for ever: for they are the rejoicing of my heart.

112 I<sup>s</sup> have inclined mine heart to perform<sup>s</sup> thy statutes alway, even unto the end.

SAMECH.

113 I<sup>s</sup> hate vain thoughts:<sup>7</sup> but<sup>s</sup> thy law do I love.

114 Thou<sup>t</sup> art my hiding-place<sup>8</sup> and my shield: I hope in thy word.

115 Depart<sup>s</sup> from me, ye evil-doers: for I will keep the commandments of my God.

116 Uphold<sup>s</sup> me according unto thy word, that I may live: and let me not be ashamed of my hope.

117 Hold<sup>s</sup> thou me up, and I shall be safe: and<sup>a</sup> I will have respect unto thy statutes continually.

118 Thou<sup>b</sup> hast trodden down all them that err from thy statutes: for their deceit is falsehood.

119 Thou puttest away<sup>9</sup> all the wicked of the earth like dross: therefore I love thy testimonies.

120 My<sup>e</sup> flesh trembleth for fear<sup>1</sup> of thee; and I am afraid of thy judgments.

AIN.

121 I<sup>s</sup> have done judgment and justice: leave me not to mine oppressors.<sup>2</sup>

122 Be<sup>t</sup> surety for thy servant for good: let not the proud oppress me.

123 Mine<sup>j</sup> eyes fail for thy salvation, and for the word of thy righteousness.

124 Deal<sup>k</sup> with thy servant according unto thy mercy, and teach me thy statutes.

teaches by words; but his Spirit is the teacher that effects the entrance and diffuses the light of Jesus! C.

Ver. 139. My zeal hath consumed me. The quotation (Jn. 2. 17) from Ps. 69. 9, and, so far as it goes, its perfect parallelism to that in this verse, affords a farther evidence that this psalm is dictated by the Spirit in the person of Christ. C.

Ver. 142. The righteousness of God never means a rule of righteousness, any more than the love of God means a mere rule of love. The love of God means just the love of God; and the righteousness of God means just the righteousness of God, neither more nor less. It is the work which God the Father gave the Son to do; it is the work which God the Son performed. The creature righteousness was dissolved: the Godhead righteousness abideth for ever. C.

Ver. 148. Study, business, and piety alike court early and late hours. The student of nature, art, literature, or science awakes before the sun, outwatches the stars, and often disregards the sacrifice of health at the shrine of his beloved idol. The pursuit of riches claims votaries still more numerous and decided. And surely piety can claim no less. Wherefore, if its studies, privileges, and duties be shuffled into some mere corner of time and attention, what is it but a sure preparative for being speedily and dom of Christianity and the circumstances of society. If piety were a restraint or a burden, this opinion might be true; but since it is a privilege and a blessing, it must be unfounded. C.

Ver. 169. Let my cry. A cry is the voice of a child in want or pain, or of man or woman in deep and poignant distress. Of the cries of our Lord in his distress we have no special record beyond that contained in Mat. 27. 46, 50. But Paul, by the Spirit, leads us more into the secret history of our Lord's heart, feelings, and sufferings, and declares, in accordance with all that is written of him in the Psalms, that, 'in the days of his flesh,' he 'offered up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears, unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared,' He. 5. 7. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Let this psalm be a touchstone by which I may try my heart and my life. Let me constantly inquire—Are these gracious tempers and holy exercises of faith, love, hope, humility, patience, and zeal, to be found in my soul? Has my heart, purged from an evil conscience in Jesus' blood, made these meditations, prayers, resolutions, and confessions truly

Ver. 1. In my distress. There can be no question that Ps. cxviii. is delivered in the name of Christ. See ver. 22. On comparing this verse with Ps. 118. 5, the identity of the speaker in the two psalms will scarcely be questioned. Comp. also Ps. lii. C.

Ver. 4. In ver. 3 a question is asked substantially as follows:—'What shall the deceitful tongue give thee—what will it do to thee?' Reference is made to the person who uses his tongue in this manner. What effect will it entail upon him—what punishment will it bring? The reply is given in ver. 4, in language highly figurative. It will entail such punishment as would be inflicted by the sharp arrows of the warrior; it will bring such exquisite pain as would be produced by the glowing coals of juniper, the heat of which is intense. P.

REFLECTIONS.—Inveterate malice against the saint never refuses the basest means of venting itself: and it is the saints' ordinary lot to be virulently reproached by the wicked. But dreadful, penetrating, destructive, furious, and lasting is the ruin of their reproachers at last! It is grievous for the lovers of God to be long

DAMASCUS GATE—OPENING TOWARDS NAZARETH. [Psalms, cxvii:2].—
 "Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem." Damascus gate, or the gate of the column through which passes the north road to Galilee and Damascus, is the most ornamental of all the gates which stand in the walls of Jerusalem. It is made picturesque because of its many turrets and battlements. The Damascus gate, according to Bartlet, is a fine piece of Saracenic architecture. Other authorities claim that it dates back to a more remote antiquity than Bartlet supposes. This gate is not a great ways from the place supposed by many now to be the site of Mount Calvary. The tombs of the kings are about 1100 paces north of Damascus gate. Next to Jaffa gate, the Damascus gate is the one most frequently used of any in the Jerusalem walls.

The great safety of the godly.

PSALM CXXI.

The great safety of the godly, who put their trust in God's protection.

A song of degrees.

I WILL lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.<sup>1</sup>

2 My help cometh from the LORD, which made heaven and earth.

3 He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: he that keepeth thee will not slumber.

4 Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep.

5 The LORD is thy keeper: the LORD is thy shade upon thy right hand.<sup>2</sup>

6 The sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night.

7 The LORD shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy soul.

8 The LORD shall preserve thy going out, and thy coming in, from this time forth, and even for evermore.

David expresseth his joy for the church, and prayeth for the peace thereof.

A song of degrees of David.

I WAS glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the LORD.

2 Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem.

3 Jerusalem is builded as a city that is compact together;

4 Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the LORD, unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the LORD.

5 For there are set thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David.

6 Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee.<sup>2</sup>

7 Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity within thy palaces.

8 For my brethren and companions' sakes, I will now say, Peace be within thee.

PSALM CXXIV.

The church blesseth God for a miraculous deliverance.

A song of degrees of David.

IF it had not been the LORD who was on our side, now may Israel say;

2 If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, when men rose up against us:

3 Then they had swallowed us up quick, when their wrath was kindled against us:

4 Then the waters had overwhelmed us, the stream had gone over our soul:

5 Then the proud waters had gone over our soul.

6 Blessed be the LORD, who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth.

7 Our soul is escaped as a bird out of the snare of the fowlers: the snare is broken, and we are escaped.

8 Our help is in the name of the LORD, who made heaven and earth.

PSALM CXXV.

The safety of such as trust in God. A prayer for the godly, and against the wicked.

A song of degrees.

THEY that trust in the LORD shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever.

2 As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the LORD is round about his people from henceforth, even for ever.

3 For the rod of the wicked shall not rest upon the lot of the righteous; lest the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity.

4 Do good, O LORD, unto those that be good, and to them that are upright in their hearts.

5 As for such as turn aside unto their

MOUNT OF OLIVES—OVER WHICH CHRIST WALKED TO THE HOME OF MARY AND MARTHA. [Psalms, cxv:2.]—"As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever." East of the valley of Jehoshaphat rises the Mount of Olives. This is one of the mountains which the Psalmist refers to as standing round about Jerusalem. There are a number of olive trees still found upon the mountain, and upon its western base is a cluster of ancient ones known throughout the world to indicate the Garden of Gethsemane. The top of this mountain is held by many to be the place where the Savior left the earth, and his footsteps are still shown to those who are willing to believe extraordinary things. According to the Scripture, Christ ascended from Bethany. From the top of the Mount of Olives we have the most commanding view of the city of Jerusalem.

crooked ways, the LORD shall lead them forth with the workers of iniquity: but peace shall be upon Israel.

PSALM CXXVI.

1 The church, celebrating her incredible return out of captivity, 4 prayeth for, and prophesieth her own future joyfulness.

a A song of degrees.

WHEN the LORD turned again the captivity of Zion,<sup>1</sup> we<sup>b</sup> were like them that dream.

2 Then<sup>c</sup> was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: then <sup>a</sup>said they among the heathen, The LORD hath done great things for them.<sup>2</sup>

3 The<sup>e</sup> LORD hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.

4 Turn<sup>o</sup> again our captivity, O LORD, as the streams in the <sup>3</sup>south.<sup>4</sup>

5 They<sup>h</sup> that sow in tears shall reap in joy.<sup>5</sup>

6 He<sup>i</sup> that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed,<sup>6</sup> shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him.

PSALM CXXVII.

1 The vanity of human endeavours without God's blessing. 3 Children are God's gift.

a A song of degrees for Solomon.<sup>1</sup>

EXCEPT <sup>b</sup>the LORD build the house, they labour in vain that build it: except the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.

2 It is vain for you to <sup>c</sup>rise up early, to sit up late, to eat <sup>a</sup>the bread of sorrows; for <sup>e</sup>so he giveth his beloved sleep.

3 Lo,<sup>o</sup> children are an heritage of the LORD; and the fruit of the womb is his reward.

4 As<sup>h</sup> arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth.

5 Happy<sup>i</sup> is the man that hath his quiver full of<sup>2</sup> them: they<sup>j</sup> shall not be ashamed, but they shall speak<sup>3</sup> with the enemies in the gate.

PSALM CXXVIII.

The sundry blessings which follow them that fear God.

a A song of degrees.

BLESSED <sup>b</sup>is every one that feareth the LORD; that walketh in his ways.

2 For<sup>c</sup> thou shalt eat the labour of thine hands: <sup>a</sup>happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee.

3 Thy<sup>e</sup> wife shall be as a fruitful vine by the sides of thine house; <sup>a</sup>thy children like olive plants round about thy table.

PSALM CXXIX.

1 An exhortation to praise God for saving Israel in their great afflictions. 5 The haters of the church are cursed.

a A song of degrees.

MANY <sup>a</sup>time have they afflicted me from my <sup>b</sup>youth, may Israel now say:

2 Many a time have they afflicted me from my youth; yet <sup>a</sup>they have not prevailed against me.

3 The <sup>a</sup>ploughers ploughed upon my back: they made long their furrows.

5 Let<sup>h</sup> them all be confounded and turned Israel exhorted to hope in God.

8 And<sup>1</sup> he shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities.

PSALM CXXXI.

1 David, professing his humility, 3 exhorteth Israel to hope in God.
A song of degrees of David.

LORD, my heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty; neither do I exercise<sup>1</sup> myself in great matters, or in things too high<sup>2</sup> for me.

2 Surely I have behaved and quieted<sup>3</sup> myself, as a child that is weaned of his mother: my soul is even as a weaned child.

3 Let<sup>4</sup> Israel hope in the LORD from henceforth<sup>4</sup> and for ever.

PSALM CXXXII.

1 David, in his prayer, commendeth unto God the religious care he had for the ark. 8 His prayer at the removing of the ark, 11 with a repetition of God's promises.

A song of degrees.

LORD, remember<sup>1</sup> David, and all his afflictions: 2 How<sup>2</sup> he swore unto the LORD, and vowed unto the mighty God of Jacob;

3 Surely I will not come into the tabernacle of my house, nor go up into my bed;

4 I will not give sleep to mine eyes, or slumber to mine eyelids,

5 Until I find out<sup>3</sup> a place for the LORD, an habitation<sup>1</sup> for the mighty God of Jacob.

6 Lo, we heard of it at Ephratah:<sup>2</sup> we found it in the fields of the wood.<sup>4</sup>

7 We<sup>1</sup> will go into his tabernacles: we will worship at his footstool.<sup>5</sup>

10 For<sup>1</sup> thy servant David's sake turn not away the face of thine anointed.

Israel into apostasy, as Midian, Nu. 25.2, 3, and afterwards Antiochus, severally attempted—nor have they prevailed to extirpate the nation, as Haman sought, and several Gentile nations have since endeavoured. C.

REFLECTIONS.—In every age the seed of the serpent has raged in enmity against Jesus Christ and his church. There is no going honourably to heaven but through great tribulation. But let the wicked lay their plots, and execute them as they will, God will deliver all who accept Christ; and unbelievers shall plunge themselves at last into the most dreadful disappointment and ruin. The curse of God shall blast them, with all their schemes and attempts.

PSALM CXXX. Ver. 1. On comparing this verse with Ps. 40. 1, 2, &c., there can be no doubt of their parallelism; but that Ps. xl. is spoken in the person of Christ, is settled by the quotation, He. 10. 5, whence it follows that in this psalm the speaker also is Messiah. C.

Ver. 3. If thou shouldst mark down sins indelibly, instead of cleansing them away in the blood of the Lamb, who would dare to appear before thee under such innumerable and condemning stains? C.

PSALM CXXXIV.

The blessedness of unity among brethren.

11 The<sup>1</sup> LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body<sup>6</sup> will I set upon thy throne.

12 If<sup>2</sup> thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for evermore.

13 For<sup>2</sup> the LORD hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation.

14 This<sup>3</sup> is my rest for ever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it.

15 I<sup>3</sup> will abundantly<sup>7</sup> bless her provision; I will satisfy her poor with bread:

16 I<sup>4</sup> will also clothe her priests with salvation; and her saints shall shout aloud for joy.

17 There<sup>5</sup> will I make the horn of David to bud: I have ordained a lamp<sup>8</sup> for mine anointed.

18 His<sup>2</sup> enemies will I clothe with shame: but upon himself shall his crown flourish.

PSALM CXXXIII.

The blessedness of unity among brethren.

A song of degrees of David.

BEHOLD, how<sup>1</sup> good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!<sup>1</sup>

2 It is like the precious ointment<sup>2</sup> upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments;

3 As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the LORD commanded the blessing, even life for evermore.

141. 5. Pr. 27.9.

11 The LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.

12 If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for evermore.

13 For the LORD hath chosen Zion; he hath desired it for his habitation.

14 This is my rest for ever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it.

15 I will abundantly bless her provision; I will satisfy her poor with bread:

16 I will also clothe her priests with salvation; and her saints shall shout aloud for joy.

17 There will I make the horn of David to bud: I have ordained a lamp for mine anointed.

18 His enemies will I clothe with shame: but upon himself shall his crown flourish.

BEHOLD, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!

2 It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard; that went down to the skirts of his garments;

3 As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the LORD commanded the blessing, even life for evermore.

BEHOLD, bless ye the LORD, all ye servants of the LORD, which by right stand in the house of the LORD.

God's throne of grace. They shall receive a gracious answer at last. Lively and zealous saints can never be at ease till the ordinances of God be regularly and honourably settled, and his presence vouchsafed, to the comfort and edification of both ministers and people. However meanly the ark of God, or even Jesus Christ himself, reside for a time, its dwelling shall at last, and for ever, be glorious. Multitudes shall flock to it; and great fellowship with God shall be there enjoyed. Happy was David's family and kingdom on Christ's account: but infinitely happier in this is the family and church of God. In virtue of JEHOVAH's new covenant with him, his people are blessed with his presence, and with spiritual dignity, provision, salvation, and joy; while Jesus himself triumphs in everlasting honours, and unbelievers are reduced to disappointment, misery, and shame.

PSALM CXXXIII. REFLECTIONS.—Scarcely anything more ruinous hath befallen the church of God than the perfect redemption of all his people from sin and all its consequences.

PSALM CXXXI. Ver. 1. My heart is not haughty. The true description of him who said, 'Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden,' I learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls,' Mat. 11. 28, 29. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Humility is the ornament of every station. A child-like spirit, meek and weaned from the things of this world, is a good symptom of a gracious heart. But to wade out of our depth, either in religion, learning, or power, is dangerous. And proud looks show a proud heart. If we are in trouble, let us patiently hope and wait till God bring us out of it. They who hope in Jesus Christ, and wait for his salvation, shall partake of it in time and in eternity.

PSALM CXXXII. Ver. 1. (1) Some suppose this psalm was written on occasion of bringing the ark from Baale, 2 Sa. vi. (2) Others, from comp. ver. 8, 9 with 2 Ch. 6.41, 42, suppose it written by Solomon for the dedication of the temple. (3) While A.

Ver. 3. If thou shouldst mark down sins indelibly, instead of cleansing them away in the blood of the Lamb, who would dare to appear before thee under such innumerable and condemning stains? C.

* This psalm relates to the omnipresence of God, and contains such reflections as would recur to one meditating on that attribute of Deity. It is the most distinct and full statement of that doctrine which is to be found in the Hebrew Scriptures, and the doctrine is presented in language which has never been surpassed for sublimity and beauty. The leading idea in the psalm seems to be that of

1 David praiseth God for his all-seeing providence, 17 and for his infinite mercies. 19 He defeth the wicked. 23 He prayeth for sincerity.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

O LORD, thou<sup>a</sup> hast searched me, and known me.

2 Thou knowest my "down-sitting, and mine up-rising; "thou understandest my thought afar off.<sup>1</sup>

3 Thou compasses<sup>2</sup> my path, and my lying down, and art "acquainted with all my ways.

4 For there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O LORD, "thou knowest it altogether.

5 Thou<sup>o</sup> hast beset me behind and before, and laid thine hand upon me.

13 For 'thou hast possessed my reins: thou hast covered me in my mother's womb.

14 I will praise thee; for 'I am fearfully and wonderfully made: 'marvellous are thy works; and that my soul knoweth right well.<sup>8</sup>

15 My<sup>9</sup> substance<sup>9</sup> was not hid from thee, when I was made in 'secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth.<sup>1</sup>

16 Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being imperfect; and in thy book all<sup>2</sup> my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned,<sup>3</sup> when<sup>4</sup> as yet there was none of them.<sup>4</sup>

17 How<sup>5</sup> precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them!

18 If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand: 'when I awake, I am still with thee.

19 Surely<sup>6</sup> thou wilt slay the wicked, O God: depart<sup>7</sup> from me therefore, ye bloody men.

20 For<sup>8</sup> they speak against thee wickedly, and thine enemies take thy name in vain.

21 Do<sup>9</sup> not I hate<sup>5</sup> them, O LORD, that hate thee? and am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee?

22 I hate them with perfect hatred; I count them mine enemies.

23 Search<sup>10</sup> me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts;

24 And<sup>11</sup> see if there be any 'wicked way<sup>7</sup> in me, and lead me in 'the way everlasting.

Ver. 7. Spirit, when contrasted with presence, literally faces, means the Holy Spirit, Jn. 14.16, 17, 26. This passage asserts, in the strongest manner, the omnipresence of the Spirit: but whoever is omnipresent must be God. C.

PSALM CXLI.

1 David prayeth that his suit may be acceptable, 3 his conscience free from guilt, 7 and his life safe from the snares of the wicked.

A psalm of David.

2 Let my prayer be set forth<sup>2</sup> before thee 'as incense; 'and the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice.

enemies my intimates. They who hate God hate his name and image wherever it appears. Let me therefore hate the ways of sinners, while I have true love and pity to their souls. And let a thorough cleansing from sin, and progress in holiness, be the earnest desire and ineffable delight of my soul.

PSALM CXL. Ver. 1. 'Of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?' Ac. 8.34. Let the prayerful inquirer consult Ps. xl., interpreted by He. 10.5; then compare Ps. 2.4, interpreted by Ac. 4.26, with Ps. 59.8, and consider its prayer for deliverance, compared with the similar prayer of this psalm, see also Ps. xlii. lix. lxi. lxxi.—and the parallelism, nay the identity of the descriptions and petitions must point to Messiah in the days of his flesh, as the speaker in this psalm. The chief object of the prayer is deliverance from Judas and his employers, the high-priest and Pharisees, and from Antichrist, that wicked one, 2 Th. 2.8, and his persecuting followers in apostate Babylon. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Behold, as in a glass, how maliciously Jesus Christ was reproached and persecuted.

4 Incline<sup>e</sup> not my heart to any evil thing, to practise wicked works with men that work iniquity: <sup>a</sup>and let me not eat of their dainties.<sup>3</sup>

5 <sup>a</sup>Let<sup>d</sup> the righteous smite me;<sup>5</sup> it shall be a kindness: and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head: for <sup>a</sup>yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities.

7 Our<sup>d</sup> bones are scattered at the grave's mouth,<sup>6</sup> as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth.

PSALM CXLIII.

1 David prayeth for favour in judgment. 3 He complaineth of his griefs. 5 He strengtheneth his faith by meditation and prayer. 7 He prayeth for grace, 9 for deliverance, 10 for sanctification, 12 and for the destruction of his enemies.

A psalm of David.

HEAR my<sup>a</sup> prayer, O LORD; give ear to my supplications: <sup>b</sup>in thy faithfulness answer me, and in thy righteousness.<sup>1</sup>

2 And<sup>c</sup> enter not into judgment with thy servant: for <sup>a</sup>in thy sight shall no man living be justified.

3 For<sup>d</sup> the enemy hath persecuted my soul; he hath smitten my life down to the ground; he hath made me to dwell in darkness, as those that have been long dead.

4 Therefore<sup>d</sup> is my spirit overwhelmed within me; my heart within me is desolate.

5 I<sup>b</sup> remember the days of old; I meditate on all thy works; I muse on the work of thy hands.

6 I <sup>a</sup>stretch forth my hands unto thee: <sup>a</sup>my soul thirsteth after thee, as a thirsty land. <sup>a</sup>Selah.

7 Hear<sup>k</sup> me speedily, O LORD; my spirit faileth: hide not thy face from me, lest I be like<sup>3</sup> unto them that go down into the pit.

8 Cause<sup>d</sup> me to hear thy loving-kindness in the morning;<sup>4</sup> for in thee do I trust: <sup>a</sup>cause me to know the way wherein I should walk; <sup>a</sup>for I lift up my soul unto thee.

David prayeth for deliverance.

and destroy all them that afflict my soul: <sup>9</sup>for I am thy servant.

PSALM CXLIV.

A psalm of David.<sup>1</sup>

BLESSED be the LORD my strength,<sup>2</sup> which teacheth my hands to war,<sup>3</sup> and my fingers to fight.

<sup>2</sup> My<sup>5</sup> goodness,<sup>4</sup> and my fortress; my high tower, and my deliverer; my shield, and he in whom I trust; who subdueth my people under me.

<sup>9</sup> I will sing a new song unto thee, O God: upon a psaltery and an instrument of ten strings will I sing praises unto thee.

<sup>14</sup> That our oxen may be strong to labour;<sup>4</sup> that there be no <sup>1</sup>breaking in, nor going out; that there be no complaining in our streets.

PSALM CXLIV.

1 This psalm is mainly a compilation made, probably by the author himself, from portions of other psalms, and arranged in one complete form for some special purpose. The principal portions of it are found in Ps. 18. 8;

xxxiii. civ. The general burden is a prayer to Jehovah for help and deliverance in prospect of some impending danger. It is the song of a warrior, but of one who feels that his courage, his skill, and his physical strength must be sustained by God.—P.

PSALM CXLV.

<sup>1</sup> David praiseth God for his fame, 8 for his goodness, 11 for his kingdom, 14 for his providence, 17 and for his saving mercy.

David's psalm of praise.<sup>1</sup>

I WILL extol thee, my God, O King; and I will bless thy name<sup>2</sup> for ever and ever.

<sup>2</sup> Every day will I bless thee; and I will praise thy name for ever and ever.

<sup>5</sup> I will speak of the glorious honour of thy majesty, and of thy wondrous works.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>6</sup> And men shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts; and I will declare<sup>5</</sup>

20 The<sup>s</sup> LORD preserveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he destroy.

21 My<sup>t</sup> mouth shall speak the praise of the LORD: and let *all flesh bless his holy name for ever and ever.<sup>5</sup>

PSALM CXLVI.

1 The psalmist voweth perpetual praises to God. 3 He exhorteth not to trust in man. 5 God, for his power, justice, mercy, and kingdom, is only worthy to be trusted.

PRAISE ye the LORD.<sup>1</sup> Praise<sup>a</sup> the LORD, O my<sup>s</sup> soul.<sup>2</sup>

2 While<sup>b</sup> I live will I praise the LORD: I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being.<sup>3</sup>

3 Put<sup>c</sup> not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help.<sup>4</sup>

4 His<sup>d</sup> breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish.

5 Happy<sup>e</sup> is he that hath the God of Jacob<sup>5</sup> for his help, whose hope is in the LORD his God;

6 Which<sup>9</sup> made heaven, and earth, the sea, and all that therein is; which keepeth truth for ever;

7 Which<sup>i</sup> executeth judgment for the oppressed; which giveth food to the hungry. The<sup>k</sup> LORD looseth the prisoners:

8 The<sup>l</sup> LORD openeth the eyes of the blind:<sup>6</sup> the LORD raiseth them that are bowed down: the LORD loveth the righteous:

9 The LORD preserveth the strangers; he relieveth the fatherless and widow: but the way of the wicked he turneth upside down.<sup>7</sup>

10 The<sup>r</sup> LORD shall reign for ever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXLVII.

1 The prophet exhorteth to praise God for his care of the church, 4 his power, 6 and his mercy: 7 to praise him for his providence: 12 to praise him for his blessings upon the kingdom, 15 for his power over the elements, 19 and for his ordinances in the church.

PRAISE ye the LORD: for it is good to sing praises unto our God; for it is pleasant; and praise is comely.

2 The<sup>b</sup> LORD doth build up Jerusalem: he gathereth together the outcasts of Israel.

3 He<sup>d</sup> healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds.<sup>1</sup>

4 He<sup>e</sup> telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names.

PSALM CXLIX.

1 The prophet exhorteth to praise God for his love to the church, 5 and for that power which he hath given to his saints.

PRAISE ye the LORD.<sup>1</sup> Sing<sup>a</sup> unto the LORD a new song,<sup>2</sup> and his praise in the congregation of saints.<sup>3</sup> in himself, when his greatness, wisdom, power, and goodness are so manifested in all his works. And when he so observes and provides for all his creatures, how impossible is it that his ransomed children should be overlooked or starved! Much of God is to be seen in all around us—in luminaries, in animals, in crops, in seasons, in human persons or societies; but, above all, in his church and in his word. If these be abused by us, it will be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for us.

PSALM CL.

An exhortation to praise God with all kinds of musical instruments.

PRAISE ye the LORD.<sup>1</sup> Praise<sup>a</sup> God in his sanctuary: praise him in <sup>b</sup>the firmament of his power.<sup>2</sup>

2 Praise him <sup>c</sup>for his mighty acts: praise him according to his excellent greatness.

3 Praise<sup>d</sup> him with the sound of the trumpet:<sup>3</sup> praise him with the psaltery and harp.

4 Praise him with the timbrel and <sup>e</sup>dance: praise him with stringed instruments and organs.

5 Praise<sup>f</sup> him upon the loud cymbals: praise him upon the high-sounding cymbals.

6 Let<sup>g</sup> every thing that hath breath praise the LORD. Praise ye the LORD.

REFLECTIONS.—How great and good must God appear to his people, when their minds are so overcharged with their debt of praise! And indeed, had the praises of God but due room on earth, it would much resemble heaven. But none are more deep in the debt of praise than faithful men; sometime afar off, but now brought near to him by the blood of his Son!

PSALM CXIX. Ver. 2. Israel. They that have obtained a 'new name,' who wrestle with God in prayer, and prevail, by faith, in the name of Jesus, Ge. 22. 24, 28; Ho. 12. 3, 4; Jn. 14. 13. C. Ver. 3. Dance. The word translated dance signifies a pipe, or some other fustular instrument of music, and not any mode of marching or saltation. C.

Ver. 6. Two-edged sword. The two-edged sword of the Word—the law of fire and the gospel of grace, Ep. 6. 17; He. 4. 12; De. 33. 2; Ac. 20. 24; Tit. 2. 11. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Behold here Jesus and his gospel church chiefly in her millennial state. He and his people mutually rejoice in one another:—while they praise him, he imparts the blessings of salvation to them; and while he goes forth in his chariots of salvation, conquering sinners by his grace, or in his chariots of judgment, to oppose his Jewish, heathen, and anti-christian enemies, by their prayers and influence they work together with him.

PSALM CL. Ver. 1. The first verse marks the place where the Lord is to be praised—the sanctuary on earth, the firmament above. C.

Ver. 2. The second verse assigns reasons for praise—God's mighty acts, and the multitude of his acts. C.

Ver. 3-6. The remaining portion of the psalm calls first upon instruments of every construction, and finally upon everything that breathes, to praise the Lord. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Happy are they who dwell in God's house above—they are always praising him on the highest key! And happy are they who are on the way to it—they have always matter, and often a heart, for praise.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

The Hebrew title of the Book of Psalms is 'Praises,' because the praise of God as Creator, Upholder, and Governor—as Father, Redeemer, and Sanctifier—con-wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing; and in ascribing 'blessing, and honour, and glory, and power unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, bears witness of their heavenly origin—we have, in the New Testament, more frequent attestations of their divine origin, than for any other book of the whole Scripture collection. They are at least fifty times quoted by our Lord or his apostles. And besides furnishing to our Lord the most powerful of his arguments against the unbelieving Jews, they also furnished him the words in which, upon the cross, he both prayed and expired.

According to the Masoretic copies and the Syriac version, the Psalms are divided into five books: the first extending from Ps. i.—xl.—the second from Ps. xli.—lxxii.—the third from Ps. lxxiii.—lxxxix.—the fourth from Ps. xc.—cvi.—and the fifth from Ps. cvii.—cl. The first four of these end with 'Amen and Amen;' the last with 'Hallelujah.' This division was very ancient, as it evidently existed before the Septuagint translation.

Most of the Psalms have titles prefixed, which by some, as ancient traditionary expositions of the contents, are held in high esteem, and considered as endued with a kind of canonical authority. But some of the highest authorities amongst the ancient Christian writers—as Augustine and Theodoret—have freely admitted that these titles have often no relation to the body of the psalm, and seldom contribute anything to the discovery of the meaning. In their great obscurity all are agreed; and conjectural meanings are so various that they cease to be of value. These titles have accordingly been retained, partly out of respect to those that, in any degree, value them; and partly as mere relics of antiquity, esteemed not for any intrinsic worth, but as samples and memorials of the works of other times.

That the Psalms are occasionally prophetic of Christ no Christian can overlook or deny. That but few, however, are thus prophetic of him, has been an opinion extensively circulated and received—the number of such specialty prophetic psalms being ordinarily confined to Ps. ii. xvi. xxii. xl. xlv. lxxviii. lxxix. lxxxvii. cx. and cxviii. But were the correctness of this meagre enumeration admitted, still the real relation of the Psalms to Christ remains unsettled. For the real question is, not how many psalms are prophetic, but how many are descriptive of Christ, and proved to be descriptive of him, because they apply accurately to him, and however they may be strained by the efforts of 'accommodation,' still utterly refuse to become applicable to any other. Could we conclude with Origen, Chrysostom, Theodoret, Augustine, Ambrose, Euthymius, and others of the ancient Christian writers, that David was the author of all the Psalms—or admitting, as is commonly believed, that other inspired authors wrote a part of the collection—yet could we accurately ascertain how many were composed by David—and it is upon all hands admitted that he composed a large portion—we would then be able, upon David's own authority, or rather upon that of the Spirit speaking by him, greatly to extend, if not to universalize, the prophetic boundaries of the Psalms. For that the psalms written by David himself were prophetic we have David's own authority, which, as Horsley observes, may be allowed to overpower a host of modern expositors. For thus king David at the close of his life describes himself and his sacred songs: 'David the son of Jesse said, and the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet psalmist of Israel said, The Spirit of Jehovah spake by me, and his word was my tongue,' 2 Sa. 23. 1, 2. It was the word, therefore, of Jehovah's Spirit which was uttered by David's tongue. But it should seem the Spirit of Jehovah would not be wanting to enable a mere man to make complaint of his own enemies, to describe his own sufferings just as he felt them, and his own escapes just as they happened. But the Spirit of Jehovah described, by David's utterance, what was known to that Spirit only, and that Spirit only could describe. So that if David be allowed to have had any knowledge of the true subject of his own compositions, it was nothing in his own life, but something put into his mind by the Holy Spirit of God; and the misapplication of the Psalms to the literal David has done more mischief than the misapplication of any other parts of the Scriptures among those who profess the belief of the Christian religion. (See Horsley on the Psalms, vol. i. p. 14.) Nor do we hesitate to express our firm conviction, that a right interpretation of the Psalms, whereby Christ is so clearly discovered in his person, his offices, his passion, his victories, his glories, and his judgment, will bring a light, a comfort, and a joy to the heart of the believer, unknown while darkness lay upon this blessed portion of the Sacred Volume. ## THE BOOK OF PROVERBS,

And the two immediately following, were penned by Solomon, the renowned king of Israel. Its Hebrew name MISCHLIM imports sentences well pressed together, and powerful to command our assent and regulate our conduct. Teaching by such proverbs, or short substantial sentences, was a very ancient, and is a very plain, profitable, and easy method of instruction. These Proverbs of Solomon are not a mere collection of the wise sayings which had been uttered before his time, but are the inspired dictates of the Holy Ghost to him; and are often quoted or alluded to as such in other inspired books. This book comprehends: (1) A preface; consisting of manifold exhortations to the study and improvement of true wisdom, and of warnings to avoid connections or intimacy with wicked persons, whoredom, rash suretiship, sloth, &c. ch. i.—ix. (2) The Proverbs themselves; published from the beginning, x.—xxiv., or copied out by the direction of Hezekiah, xxv.—xxix. (3) The appendix; containing the prophecy of Agur, and the directions of his mother to him, xxx. xxxi. As the Book of Psalms is calculated to make our hearts warm towards God in holy and pious affections, the scope of this is to make our face shine before men in a prudent, discreet, honest, and useful conversation; which is a no less necessary part of religion. And no book in the world, in so small a compass, affords us such a complete body of rules for directing our personal and relative behaviour.

CHAPTER I.

1 The use of the Proverbs. 7 An exhortation to fear God, and regard the advice of parents. 10 To avoid the enticings of sinners. 20 Wisdom complaineth of the contempt of scornors. 24 She threateneth them.

Framed by the Spirit of God to teach men true and solid wisdom in things pertaining to God and their neighbour, to enable them to true wisdom should begin with, and chiefly study, the saving knowledge of God, and live under a holy awe in the love, worship, and service of him; as, without this, all other knowledge is vain and useless; and, for want of it, wicked men, who prefer trifles to things of infinite importance, pour contempt on the wisest instrucrobbery, or any other wickedness, abhor their counsels and flee from their company: 16. For, being set on mischief themselves, if they once entangle you, they will perpetually hurry you from one horrid crime to another. 17. And while they lay snares for others whom they reckon rash and inconsiderate, themselves.

PALMYRA ROAD—LEADING FROM DAMASCUS TO TADMOR, THE CITY SOLOMON BUILT IN THE DESERT. [PROVERBS, i: 1.]—Solomon inherited from his father David a vast kingdom. His dominion stretched from the river Euphrates to the Mediterranean Sea, south to the river of Egypt, and north to near where the city of Aleppo now stands. Damascus was within his territory, and he built Palmyra, called Tadmor, in his day. This is a city in the wilderness, and that Solomon built it we learn from I. Kings, ix: 18, and II. Chronicles, viii: 4. Tadmor is between the Euphrates and Hamath, and is situated in an oasis of the desert. The celebrated Queen Zenobia had her capital and home in Palmyra. She built up a mighty kingdom which rivaled and defied the Roman power. She was captured and brought to Rome by the emperor Aurelian, A. D. 273. We give here as illustrating this first chapter of Proverbs, written by Solomon, a picture of a road leading out from Damascus to Tadmor, the city he built

8 My<sup>a</sup> son, <sup>a</sup>hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother:

9 For<sup>a</sup> they shall be an ornament<sup>2</sup> of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck.

10 ¶ My son, <sup>a</sup>if sinners entice thee, consent thou not.

11 If they say, <sup>a</sup>Come with us, let us lay wait for blood, let us lurk privily for the innocent without cause;

12 Let<sup>a</sup> us swallow them up alive as the grave; and whole, as those that go down into the pit:

13 We<sup>a</sup> shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoil:

14 Cast in thy lot among us; let us all have one purse:

15 My son, <sup>a</sup>walk not thou in the way with them; <sup>a</sup>refrain thy foot from their path:

16 For<sup>a</sup> their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood:

17 (Surely<sup>a</sup> in vain the net is spread <sup>a</sup>in the sight of any bird:)<sup>4</sup>

18 And<sup>a</sup> they lay wait for their own blood; they lurk privily for their own lives.<sup>5</sup>

19 So are the ways of every one <sup>a</sup>that is greedy of gain; which taketh away the life of the owners thereof.

They rejected and despised the divine counsels and warnings for centuries; but at length judgment came. It would be observed also that the teaching of the New Testament is in this entire harmony with that of the Old. Witness our Lord's judgments on Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum, and Paul's sweeping statement in Ro. 1. 28.—And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind.—P.

But in the most solemn manner he warns you, that if you persist in despising his gracious calls, instructions, and offers, his righteous judgment shall overtake and ruin you and your nation, in the most unexpected, fearful, complete, and remediless manner;—and that, while your most rueful cries for deliverance shall be disregarded, your own counsels and contrivances shall render you inexpressibly miserable, and your occasional escapes, and even prosperity, shall, by encouraging your folly, pride, and wickedness, prove means of hastening and aggravating your ruin; 33. While they who hearken to his instructions, and believe on his name, shall, by his watchful providence, be marvellously protected, comforted, and eternally saved.

Ver. 1. The Hebrew word rendered 'proverb,' literally signifies 'likeness' or 'comparison.' It originally involved, therefore, the idea of a simile, but it had given to it at an early period a wider signification. It came to denote 'such short, pointed sayings, as do not involve a comparison directly, but still convey their meaning by the help of a figure. From this stage of its application it passed to sententious maxims generally, many of which, however, still involve a comparison. Such comparisons are either expressed, or the things compared are placed side by side, and the comparison left for the hearer or reader to supply.

hear,' Mat. 13. 9. It is the special claim of the Spirit: 'Let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches,' Re. xxvii. It is the great principle of the spiritual life: 'Hear; and your soul shall live,' Is. 55. 3. It is the great channel of faith: 'Faith cometh by hearing,' Ro. 10. 17. C.

Ver. 7. The fear of the Lord. 'Doth not perfect love cast out fear?' True, but not the fear of God. It casteth out the fear of condemnation, Ro. 8. 1; it triumphs over the fear of death, 1 Co. 15. 57; but it implants and cherishes the fear of reverence for the majesty, the holiness, and the mercy of God. ## CHAPTER II.

<sup>1</sup> The study of wisdom tendeth to promote godliness, 10 and safety from evil company, 20 and to direct men in good and salutary ways.

MY son, 'if thou wilt receive my words, and hide my commandments with thee;

2 So that 'thou incline thine ear unto wisdom, and apply thine heart to understanding;

3 Yea, 'if thou criest after knowledge, and liftest up thy voice<sup>1</sup> for understanding;

4 If<sup>a</sup> thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures;

5 Then<sup>b</sup> shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God.

6 For<sup>c</sup> the LORD giveth wisdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding.

7 He layeth up 'sound wisdom for the righteous: he is a 'buckler to them that walk uprightly.

8 He 'keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of his saints.

9 Then<sup>k</sup> shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment, and equity; yea, every good path.<sup>2</sup>

10 ¶ When<sup>l</sup> wisdom entereth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul,

11 Discretion<sup>m</sup> shall preserve thee, understanding shall keep thee;

12 To<sup>o</sup> deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh<sup>n</sup> froward things;

13 Who<sup>a</sup> leave the paths of uprightness, to walk in the ways of darkness;

14 Who<sup>r</sup> rejoice to do evil, and delight in the frowardness of the wicked;

l This verse is more immediately connected with ver. 5, and follows like the latter, as a result of the diligent search after wisdom. Righteousness is that adherence to strict law and justice which characterizes every act of God's government, and ought to characterize the doings of his people. Judgment embraces those punishments inflicted upon sinners, and those judicial acts done in vindication of the divine character, and in defence and for the promotion of God's kingdom. Equity embraces the whole scheme of redemption and of grace, with the whole sphere of Christian work and duty.—P.

CHAPTER II. Ver. 1-5. And for your excitement and encouragement, know assuredly, my children, that if you entertain, receive, and lay up in your heart the instructions and directions which I now give you; if you earnestly study, and importunately pray for, the enjoyment of Jesus Christ, and of all true and spiritual wisdom and knowledge in him, as infinitely more precious, useful, and desirable than all the treasures on earth, then you shall, by the influences of the Holy Spirit, happily obtain your desire, and be enabled and directed to know, obey, fear, love, worship, and serve God in a proper and truly acceptable manner. 6-9. For as wisdom and every other blessing is the free gift of God, he in his Word hath revealed, and by his Spirit bestows it upon men, and gives them a true and spiritual knowledge of himself and his ways. He hath in store, and is always ready to bestow upon such as ask it, true, solid, and substantial wisdom. And while he instructs and directs, he, by his almighty providence, infallibly preserves from soul-ruining mischiefs such as walk in a sincere, candid, and upright manner. He guides and enables the lovers of holiness to persevere in their integrity according to the rules of his Word, and preserves them from being drawn aside from it or endangered in it. And in seeking wisdom from him, you shall come to understand his righteousness and wisdom in all his administrations, and be enabled to imitate their own husbands, and disregarding the solemn vows made to them at marriage; 18. And who really love no one, but promote the death and eternal damnation of all such as cultivate any familiarity with them. 19. Very few who are once ensnared into their impure embraces are ever, by the grace of God, recovered to a penitent, chaste, and virtuous life on earth, or to everlasting glory in heaven.—20-22. And, moreover, while you are preserved from the ruinous infection of these wicked seducers, you shall be enabled to follow the example of the holy patriarchs and prophets; and, in consequence of this, shall happily dwell in this promised land of Canaan, and inherit the spiritual and everlasting felicity prefigured by it.—While these wicked seducers and their followers shall, after a short-lived flourish of prosperity, be furiously driven from this land and earth, and cast into the woe and depths of hell.

Ver. 4. Pearls are brought up from the depths of the sea; gold is washed from the earth and sands; silver is dug from the deep and dark mine; gems are extricated from the solid rock; the relics of antiquity are separated from rubbish and ruins—and shall the unsearchable riches of Christ be expected on the surface, as the reward of the indolent, or the discovery of accident? No. The believer searches in study of the Word, in study of the ways of Providence, in study of his own heart, in the depths of sovereign grace and eternal love—and discovers those treasures that lie hid from the wise and prudent, but which God by his Spirit reveals unto babes. C.

Ver. 9. Understand righteousness. It should never be for-we attend to all the exercises of true religion. The Lord is ready to bless such as are diligent with great success; and usually bestows upon them remarkable instruction, satisfaction, and protection. There is need of real religion to season and rule our heart; and of God's special preservation and our utmost caution while we live in this world, where men of corrupt principles, and women of treacherous and corrupt practices, so greatly abound. In their sinful courses such are generally obstinate, active, and crafty. Ensnaring are their enticements, and dangerous and ordinarily ruinous their connections; and few, once entangled in their wickedness, ever seriously repent, or turn to Jesus Christ for life and salvation. Happy then are they who are delivered from them, and enabled to walk as truly pious and circumspect. Godliness has the promise of this life and of that which is to come. Even now the saints alone have a blessed portion on earth; and at last they only shall inhabit the new earth, into which no wicked person shall ever enter.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1, 2. Let me therefore again entreat you, my dear children, to receive, and rivet in your judgment, memory, will, and affections, the counsels and commands which I now give, that you may practise them in your lives: thus shall your temporal life be long, happy, and successful.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Solomon, to persuade obedience, 3 sheweth what instruction he had of his parents, 5 to study wisdom, 14 and to shun the path of the wicked. 20 He exhorteth to faith, 23 and sanctification.

HEAR, ye<sup>a</sup> children,<sup>1</sup> the instruction of a father, and attend to know understanding.

2 For I give you<sup>b</sup> good doctrine, forsake ye not my law.

3 For<sup>c</sup> I was my father's son, tender and only beloved in the sight of my mother.<sup>2</sup>

4 He<sup>d</sup> taught me also, and said unto me, Let<sup>e</sup> thine heart retain my words: keep my commandments, and live.

5 ¶ Get<sup>f</sup> wisdom, get understanding: forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth.

6 Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee; <sup>h</sup>love her, and she shall keep thee.

7 Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding.

8 Exalt<sup>i</sup> her, and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honour,<sup>3</sup> when thou dost embrace her.

9 She shall give to thine head<sup>k</sup> an ornament of grace: <sup>l</sup>a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee.<sup>5</sup>

10 Hear, O my son, and receive my sayings; and <sup>m</sup>the years of thy life shall be many.

12 When<sup>a</sup> thou goest, thy steps shall not be straitened; and when thou runnest, thou shalt not stumble.

13 Take<sup>b</sup> fast hold of instruction; let her not go: keep her; for she is thy life.

14 ¶ Enter<sup>c</sup> not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men.<sup>7</sup>

15 Avoid<sup>d</sup> it, pass not by it, turn from it, and pass away.

16 For<sup>e</sup> they sleep not, except they have done mischief; and their sleep is taken away, unless they cause some to fall.

17 For<sup>f</sup> they eat the bread of wickedness, and drink the wine of violence.

18 But<sup>g</sup> the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

19 The<sup>h</sup> way of the wicked is as darkness: they know not at what they stumble.<sup>8</sup>

20 ¶ My son, <sup>i</sup>attend to my words; incline thine ear unto my sayings:

21 Let them not depart from thine eyes; keep them in the midst of thine heart:

22 For<sup>j</sup> they are life unto those that find them, and health<sup>k</sup> to all their flesh.

23 ¶ Keep<sup>l</sup> thy heart with all diligence;<sup>1</sup> for out of it are the issues of life.<sup>2</sup>

24 Put<sup>m</sup> away from thee a froward mouth, and perverse lips<sup>n</sup> put far from thee.

25 Let<sup>o</sup> thine eyes look right on, and let thine eyelids look straight before thee.

26 Ponder<sup>p</sup> the path of thy feet, and let all thy ways be established.<sup>4</sup> that secret acquittal which he reports to their consciences, in the midst of all the public calumnies they may be condemned to underlie. C.

Ver. 34. Giveth grace unto the lowly. It does not signify that God gives grace to men who have become lowly, previous to grace, or without grace, by a mere effort of unrenowned nature, but that he first gives lowliness, which is a grace of the Spirit, and then, where he has already sown the seed, continues to water and give the increase. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Real religion has a glorious and blessed tendency to render men happy in themselves, and blessings to all around them. And those who neglect and despise it are in general mean-spirited, foolish, and self-ruining wretches, dishonourers of God, and plagues to mankind. But great is the shame that the professors of religion so little conform their lives to the excellent rules thereof, that they so little exemplify them in their behaviour and conduct. And comely would the church of God appear if that regard to God's law, faith in him, devotion, resignation to his will, diligence in his work, and that truth, mercy, equity, peacefulness, humility, and prudence towards men, required in his Word, were duly exercised.

cleaving thereto, as the grand and effectual means of preservation from sin and danger, and of obtaining happiness and honour both in time and eternity.* 10-13. As you wish to live long and prosperously, receive, and observe in your practice, these my instructions. I do not direct you into paths of folly, fraud, or perverseness, but into a course of wisdom, integrity, and virtue; in which you may prosecute business without any entangling difficulties, and with ease, despatch, and certain success. Carefully fix these instructions in your mind and heart, and persevere in the practice of them, as on this your happiness in time and eternity depends. 14-19. With the utmost care and abhorrence avoid the company and course of wicked men, and every temptation thereto; and with the greatest speed and earnestness flee from it if you have been entangled; for such is the malignity of their dispositions, that they can take no rest till they execute their villanous intentions, and are perpetually disturbing themselves in order to ruin others. They neither have, nor desire any other provision.

nal happiness or misery of mankind. Resolutely shun all impure or wicked discourse; and never let any corrupt, false, filthy, idle, passionate, or scornful communication proceed from your lips. Let your mind and thoughts be fixed only upon the right paths of holiness and virtue, that you may walk in them without ever turning from them; and never let your eyes, by fixing on improper objects, seduce you into sin or danger. Before you fix upon any action, carefully examine whether it be agreeable to God's law, and answerable to the end for which you intend it; and let every step you take in life be rightly ordered, according to the rule of his Word. And, by shunning extremes on every hand, labour to avoid everything offensive or injurious either to God or men.

Ver. 18. Even the private path of the just (the believer justified by faith, Ro. iii.) is as the shining light. It shineth more and more before God, in faith and love; more and more before men, in diligence and zeal; more and more before the church, in knowledge and edification; more and more before God, in humility and holiness. C.

4 Give<sup>b</sup> not sleep to thine eyes, nor slumber to thine eyelids.

5 Deliver thyself as a roe from the hand of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.<sup>4</sup>

9 How<sup>e</sup> long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?

10 Yet<sup>a</sup> a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep:

11 So shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth,<sup>6</sup> and thy want as an armed man.

12 ¶ A<sup>b</sup> naughty person, a wicked man, walketh with a froward mouth.

13 He<sup>d</sup> winketh with his eyes, he speaketh with his feet, he teacheth with his fingers;<sup>7</sup>

14 Frowardness<sup>i</sup> is in his heart, <sup>b</sup>he deviseth mischief continually, he soweth<sup>8</sup> discord:

15 Therefore<sup>i</sup> shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall he be broken without remedy.

16 ¶ These six things doth the LORD hate; yea, seven are an abomination unto him:<sup>9</sup>

17 A<sup>a</sup> proud <sup>1</sup>look, <sup>a</sup>a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood,

18 An<sup>p</sup> heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, <sup>4</sup>feet that be swift in running to mischief, 19 A<sup>r</sup> false witness that speaketh lies, and him<sup>s</sup> that soweth discord among brethren.

enslaved yourself by such obligations, endeavour, as quickly as possible, by every humble and persuasive method you can think of; nay, struggle as for life, to disengage yourself, by pressing the debtor to pay what he owes, or the creditor to acquit you of your bond.—6–11. Meanwhile, never indulge yourself in sloth, and want of provident care; but learn, from those puny insects the ants, to labour diligently in your calling, and carefully improve every opportunity of honestly providing for yourself and your family: and remember that, if that inclination to idleness and sloth, so common to mankind, be indulged by you, whether in greater or smaller degrees, unexpected and at last extreme poverty shall irresistibly come upon you.—12–15. Remember too, that it is the property of persons vile and wicked to accustom themselves to profane, blasphemous, proud, passionate, lewd, or reproachful discourse, or by signs made with their eyes, feet, or fingers to stir up others to mischief. The heart of such being filled with perverse inclinations, they are perpetually contriving mischief, and stirring up hatred law of God, as a lamp, guides in adversity, and, as the light of the sun, directs and comforts in prosperity; and the reproofs of his Word are excellent means of preserving from ruin, and leading to true happiness; and are particularly useful to preserve from being deluded by the flattering speeches and enticements of lewd women, those sinks of wickedness and plagues of mankind. 25–29. As you regard your temporal or eternal welfare, never gaze on the beauty or fine attire of such: never let their wanton and enticing looks engage you to the most distant desire after their dangerous embraces; for if once they insnare you, they will never quit their hold till they have reduced you to extreme beggary, or to a miserable and ignominious death. You may more safely take fire into your bosom, or walk upon burning coals, than intermeddle, however privately or transiently, with a whorish woman, particularly if either party be married. 30–33. If one merely steal to fill his hungry belly, he is not exposed to shame or punishment; and if it be found that he has stolen more, it is only required, that he should by implication, altogether forbid the aid of suretyship to friends? This cannot be; for in many instances such suretyship is indispensable. Does it, then, covertly condemn merely such rash and inconsiderate engagements as arise from an undue facility of temper, rather than from a deliberate calculation of duty? Such covert insinuation of a principle is inconsistent with the plainness of Scripture. With great deference, the following slight and well warranted change in the translation is suggested:—“My son, if thou be surety to thy friend,” see Ge. 24. 54. This makes the object of the passage to be a warning against any neglect of a friend's interest (for which we have become accountable), from any undue presumptuous draft upon his friendship—a most necessary warning; for in practice there are many who will neglect their own interests, and the interests of their best friends, for the éclat that may result from their attention and liberality to strangers. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Greatly advantageous, even to the outward interests of persons, families, and nations, is an exact obedience to God's commandments. And it is sinful and foolish to ruin our estates or families by engaging for other people's debts: but infamously wicked are those debtors who exert not themselves to the utmost to relieve their sureties. put forth her voice?"<sup>1</sup>

3 She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the doors:

4 Unto<sup>b</sup> you, O men, I call; and my voice is to the sons of man.

6 ¶ Hear, for I will <sup>6</sup> speak of excellent things; and the opening of my lips shall be right things.
7 For<sup>7</sup> my mouth shall speak truth, and 7 For my mouth shall speak truth; and wickedness is an abomination to my lips.<sup>2</sup>

8 All the words of my mouth are in right

8 All the words of my mouth are in righteousness; there is nothing <sup>h</sup>froward<sup>3</sup> or perverse in them.

9 They<sup>i</sup> are all plain to him that understand-th, and right to them that find knowledge.

10 ¶ Receive<sup>d</sup> my instruction, and <sup>not</sup> silver:

11 For wisdom is better than rubies: and manner | pelled him to follow her, as willingly, and no less stupidly, than an ox goeth to the slaughter, or a madman to the stocks,—never thinking of anything but pleasure, till the enraged husband sheath his sword in ready to slay, and the enraged husband sheath his sword in his bowels, or the judgments of God accomplish his irretrievable ruin!—24-27. Let me therefore beseech you, my dear young men, whom I unfeignedly regard, all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it.

12 ¶ I<sup>a</sup> wisdom dwell with prudence,<sup>4</sup> and find out knowledge of witty inventions.

13 The<sup>a</sup> fear of the LORD is to hate evil: pride,<sup>9</sup> and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the froward mouth, do I hate.

14 Counsel<sup>2</sup> is mine, and sound wisdom: I am understanding; <sup>5</sup> I have strength.

15 ¶ By<sup>a</sup> me kings reign, and princes decree justice.

16 By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth.

17 I<sup>a</sup> love them that love me; and <sup>a</sup>those that seek me early shall find me.

18 Riches<sup>a</sup> and honour are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness.

19 My<sup>a</sup> fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice silver.

20 I<sup>a</sup> lead<sup>6</sup> in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment;

21 That I may cause those that love me <sup>a</sup>to inherit substance; and I will fill their treasures.

22 ¶ The<sup>a</sup> LORD possessed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old.<sup>7</sup>

23 I<sup>b</sup> was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was.

24 When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water.

25 Before<sup>a</sup> the mountains were settled, before the hills was I brought forth:

26 While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the fields,<sup>8</sup> nor the highest part<sup>9</sup> of the dust of the world.

27 When he <sup>a</sup>prepared the heavens, I was there; <sup>a</sup>when he set a compass<sup>1</sup> upon the face of the depth;

28 When he <sup>a</sup>established the clouds above; when he strengthened the fountains of the deep;

29 When<sup>b</sup> he gave to the sea his decree, that the waters should not pass his commandment; when he <sup>a</sup>appointed the foundations of the earth:

30 Then<sup>1</sup> I was by him, as one brought up with him: and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him;

31 Rejoicing in the <sup>a</sup>habitable part of his earth; and <sup>a</sup>my delights were with the sons of men.

32 ¶ Now therefore <sup>a</sup>hearken unto me, O ye children: for <sup>a</sup>blessed are they that keep my ways.

33 Hear<sup>9</sup> instruction, and be wise, and refuse it not.

34 Blessed<sup>a</sup> is the man that heareth me, <sup>a</sup>watching daily at my gates, waiting at the posts of my doors.<sup>2</sup>

36 But<sup>a</sup> he that sinneth against me wrongeth his own soul: all they that hate me love death.

the grace of God into licentiousness is a constant inclination in man, and a constant temptation of Satan. Let believers watch and pray that they follow neither. C.

Ver. 18. It is thus that by the misapplication of words, the world, the flesh, and the devil continue to seduce and destroy. Love is an attribute, a name for God himself; yet, under this name, the seducer covers her own perjury, her victim's lewdness, and the disregard and enmity of both to God. C.

REFLECTIONS.—It is necessary to love, search, and meditate on God's law day and night; and to make it the constant food of our heart and standard of our life. Then should we find therein the most sanctifying virtue. Magistrates and ministers should carefully inspect the people committed to their charge! And there is need of frequent and fervent prayers to God for our friends and neighbours, as we know not in what guilt fearful temptations may involve them if not overcome. The devil quickly finds business for idle and unseasonable saunterers, especially if young. And when women are once addicted to flaunting, loose, and gaudy apparel, and to wheedling in love matters, and are extremely talkative, and given to an unsettled and dissipated course, it will require no great pains to make harlots of them. Terribly base and impudent these women become who have thrown off the restraints of modesty peculiar to their sex. And sad is the case when husbands and wives are glad to be rid of one another's company. It is shameful, wicked, and ruinous, when Satan and his abominable agents or lusts are, in days of youth, preferred to Jesus Christ and his grace. But fearful and speedy destruction, from the crime itself, or from the hand of God or man, awaits the whorish adulterer. Surely then we should be solicit-precious, and infinitely useful oracles of his Word: 12-31. And in order to enforce his call, and recommend his instructions, represents himself as the infinitely wise God, the source of all wisdom and prudence; the infinitely Holy One, who detests everything proud, polluted, or perverse;—and the Almighty God, able to execute all his purposes, and by whose deputed authority all the magistrates on earth govern their subjects;—the infinite lover and rich rewarder of all that seek him, particularly in youth;—the inexhaustible portion and unerring guide of all those who receive him by faith;—the eternal and only begotten Son of JEHOVAH, appointed to be our Mediator;—the almighty Maker of all things in heaven and earth;—and who, from his infinite and peculiar love to mankind, took a distinguished pleasure in forming the earth as a theatre, whereon he should appear, save, and hold intimate fellowship with the sons and daughters of Adam. 32-36. On account of all which excellencies and kindness he, in the most earnest and condescending manner, entreats and charges you to hear, receive, and practically observe his instructions, attend his ordinances, and receive himself in them, as the free gift of God, and as the only mean of true and everlasting happiness;—and warns you, that if you refuse and hate him, you will infallibly and eternally ruin yourselves.

Ver. 1. He that would understand this, and similar passages, may consult Is. 11. 2, 3, where he will find the seven gifts of the Spirit enumerated as the endowments of Christ. And as every attribute of God is but a name for his being—so the forth-putting of every separate attribute is but an account of the actings of his being in that special view. Accordingly, 'wisdom and understanding' are here both used as titles of Christ—wisdom, to indication for coming events. It is an attribute of God, Ep. 1. 8; and, rightly understood, a precious grace of the Spirit in man, Is. 52. 13.—Witty. This word is here used in the sense of ingenious, skilful. To the Spirit of God all human ingenuity is to be attributed, Ex. 31. 2, 3, the administration of whose gifts are all in the hands of Christ, the eternal Wisdom. C.

Ver. 18. Were further proof required that the Wisdom here speaking is Christ, it would here be furnished: none but he is righteous, Ro. 3. 10; 1 Jn. 2. 1; none but he has righteousness, Ro. 3. 22. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How public, earnest, and extensive are the calls of the gospel! Infinitely excellent is that Jesus Christ and his salvation therein exhibited and offered, and that religion which is therein prescribed. And happy, in the blessings of time and eternity, are those persons, families, and nations in which the knowledge of Christ and his truths prevail and reign! They are enriched with the fruits of his mediation, and filled with all the fulness of God. But is it not infinitely amazing, that God's eternal Son, the Creator and Preserver of all things, should have, from everlasting, entered into the room of, and fixed his thoughts, his delights upon, the children of men? Surely then he deserves our strictest attention, our earliest and strongest affection. And just and righteous is the sorest punishment which can be inflicted upon those self-ruiners who refuse him, and neglect and despise the ordinances of his grace. Let me consider this great Apostle and High-priest of my profession, this great ALL and IN ALL. Let my heart seek him early, earnestly, and above all things else. Let me love him, who first loved me, with my whole heart, soul, mind, and strength. Let me rejoice and delight in him as my exceeding joy.

1 The discipline, 4 and doctrine of wisdom. 13 The custom, 16 and error of folly.

WISDOM hath builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars;<sup>1</sup>

2 She hath killed her beasts;<sup>2</sup> she hath mingled her wine; she hath also furnished her table;

3 She hath sent forth her maidens: she crieth upon the highest places of the city,

6 Forsake the foolish, and live; and go in the way of understanding.

7 He that reproveth a scorner getteth to himself shame; and he that rebuketh a wicked man getteth himself a blot.

8 Reprove not a scorner, lest he hate thee: rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee.

9 Give instruction to a wise man, and he will be yet wiser: teach a just man, and he will increase in learning.

10 The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom; and the knowledge of the Holy is understanding:

CHAPTER X.

From this chapter to the five-and-twentieth are sundry observations of moral virtues and their contrary vices.

THE Proverbs of Solomon. A wise son maketh a glad father: but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother.

2 Treasures of wickedness profit nothing: but righteousness delivereth from death.

3 The LORD will not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish: but he casteth away the substance of the wicked.<sup>3</sup>

4 He becometh poor that dealeth with a slack hand: but the hand of the diligent maketh rich.<sup>3</sup>

5 He that gathereth in summer is a wise for the nourishment and satisfaction of sinful men; and in the gospel, by his faithful prophets, apostles, and ministers, earnestly invites and beseeches even the most weak, wicked, and besotted sinners of mankind to come by faith, and freely partake of his nourishing, strengthening, delightful, and satisfactory fullness and blessings? 6-12. Earnestly he admonishes you to avoid all unnecessary intimacy with wicked persons, as you regard your temporal or eternal happiness; as by it you cannot, even in attempting their reformation, justly expect to profit them, but may be sure of procuring hatred and infamy to yourselves;—and to cultivate familiarity with wise and serious persons, whom you may both profit and be profited by;—and to study true and experimental godliness, as the proper mean to render you truly happy in this world and in that which is to come; and solemnly warns you that you yourselves must reap the inexpressibly important fruits of your attention to or scornful rejection of his instructions.—13-18. And remember, as before God, that nothing more effectually renders men despisers of Christ and his blessings, than fellowship with light and lewd women, or false teachers; who, ignorant of everything spiritually good, and extremely talkative, artfully and impudently seduce simple persons, who intend no such thing, to imagine that forbidden pleasures are peculiarly delightful. And, alas! few of those tempted by them seriously consider, that by such pleasures multitudes have already lost their lives, and are entered into the everlasting torments of hell.

Ver. 7. Blot. The shame of disappointed hopes, the blot of willing is he that we should perish! Gloriously formed, and well supported and established, are his promise and church. Rich are his gospel provisions—his own flesh and blood, nay, all the fullness of God. And free and unencumbered with legal qualifications are his gospel calls. How absurd, insolent, and foolish are the scornful refusers thereof! For certain and just is their aggravated and everlasting ruin. And it is impossible to have fellowship with Christ, in grace or glory, and yet live in intimacy with wicked men. There is need of the utmost care, both in giving and taking reproofs. Fidelity in reproofs is the surest evidence of genuine friendship. None are too wise to learn, nor too good to amend. And they who rage at rebuke prove the weakness of their own understanding, as well as the want of grace. But, alas! what manifold temptations, suited to the taste of our corrupt hearts, are presented to us by Satan and his emissaries, to keep or draw us from Jesus Christ! And too many, through ignorance or inattention to the danger, comply therewith. But however sweet the pleasures of sin be in the mouth, they are bitter in the belly; they issue in endless torment and anguish.

CHAPTER X. Ver. 1. It is a great comfort to parents to see their children profiting by their instructions and examples, and growing up in wisdom, piety, and virtue. But it is a grief and burden to them when they are foolish, stubborn, and profligate. 2. Ill-gotten riches afford no solid comfort in life, but draw on a wasting or poisoning curse: but Jesus' glorious spiritual or temporal things, particularly in the time of youth, is a mark of true wisdom: but he that slothfully neglects them, brings misery and shame upon himself and his parents. 6. The justified in Christ are, to their everlasting honour and safety, blessed in him with all the blessings of time and eternity; and outward blessings often attend the just and merciful on earth. But their own iniquity shall violently overwhelm and confound those who wickedly defraud and oppress their neighbours. 7. The pious and virtuous shall, at least after death, be remembered with honour and praise, men blessing God for their good example and useful conversation; but wicked livers shall either be forgotten or remembered with abhorrence. 8. They who are truly wise will thankfully receive and practise laws from God or good advices from men: but self-conceited persons, who will not learn of others, but love to hear themselves talk, shall bring themselves into contempt, sin, and misery: nay, into hell. 9. He who in dealing with God and men walks in candour, simplicity, and godly sincerity, is safe under the divine protection in his way to eternal life, and avoids manifold miseries and snares in this world; but he who indulges himself in hypocrisy towards God, and in inconstancy and deceit towards men, shall be detected and made a public reproach. 10. He who under pretence of kindness betrays his neighbour, and by signs mocks him or tempts others to injure him, is a common grievance, and shall at last become miserable; but a noisy and perpetual talker ruins himself by his words, and de-

of it. 31. The godly, out of the good treasure of their heart, bring forth good discourse, which tends to make the hearers wise unto salvation: but he that uses his tongue to abuse, cozen, or raise dissension, or to blaspheme God and spread error, shall, in the end, have it silenced in hell. 32. The righteous know, and accustom themselves to speak things truly useful and edifying; but the wicked abandon their lips to falsehood, flattery, fraud, and calumny, or such like subtle but detestable arts of doing mischief.

Ver. 1. This is the commencement of the second great division of the book. It is different in structure from the first division. The latter is made up of parables and proverbs of considerable length; while the former consists wholly of brief, pointed sentences, each of which consists generally of two antithetical members, embodying one idea. Most of them are figurative, being based on some comparison, both in language and in idea. It is probable that, though all these proverbial sayings were at one time or another uttered by Solomon, yet most of them were of much older date. His diligent study had made him familiar with the wisdom of the ancients, and his powerful memory retained it. In the end he either wrote the proverbs out himself under divine guidance, or he employed others to do so. Most of these proverbs are examples of antithetic parallelism, the second clause containing the contrast to the first. Each verse is, as a rule, complete in itself, and embodies a perfectly intelligible sentiment. There is in each a truth clearly and sharply enunciated, and a lesson which is almost forced upon the hearer. P.

Ver. 6. For the original meaning of blessing, see note on Ge. i. 22, 28. And such blessings, spiritual, 'the just,' the justified

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 1. All manner of injustice and fraud is extremely hateful and detestable to God, the governor of the world: but strict equity in the whole of our commerce one with another is highly pleasing to him. 2. Haughty conceit of ourselves, and insulting of others, draws along with it the utmost contempt and disgrace; both God and men take pleasure to mortify and expose the proud; but such as, having learned of Christ, live under a deep sense of their own weakness and unworthiness, find favour with men and acceptance with God. 3. When men sincerely practise what God has revealed to them, they may expect his Spirit to direct them in their duty and to their eternal felicity: but the obstinate adherence of sinners to their own lusts and imaginations, and their opposition to Christ and his laws, shall hurry them into certain and everlasting destruction. 4. Riches, heaped up by extortion or covetousness, are of no avail to deliver us from the wrath of God, or even the rage of men, when the time of punishment is come: but righteousness hath a promise of life annexed to it; it prevents those sins which would expose us to God's judgments or man's punishments; it secures against the sting of temporal, and prevents eternal death. 5, 6. Being made righteous in Christ, and sanctified by his grace, and studying a sincere and impartial observance of God's laws, are effectual means to secure direction in duty and deliverance from evil; but the wicked shall perish by those very impious and evil courses by which they hoped to secure or exalt themselves. 7. In death wicked men find all their projects and hopes utterly destroyed. Whatever they thought to accomplish by their riches, their power, or their friends, perishes together with them, while they themselves launch forth to eternal misery. 8. The righteous are frequently wrath of God upon them, are cut off. 11. By God's blessing upon the upright, and by their prayers, advices, and kindness, all around them are profited: but the wicked, by their blasphemies, errors, evil counsels, and maxims, corrupt men's manners, and ruin their welfare. 12. It is common for self-conceited fools to despise their neighbours, to reproach them as weak, or to render them ridiculous; but a prudent man, whatever he thinks, avoids speaking to the reproach of others; as, beside the wickedness of contemning others, none is so mean as to be insensible of it, or incapable of finding means of resentment. 13. They who make a trade of carrying tales from one to another, never stick at treacherously discovering the secrets which have been intrusted to them; but a faithful friend conceals, not only what has been intrusted to him, but everything else that could tend to his neighbour's prejudice. 14. Where prudent counsel is wanting, nations and private affairs go to wreck: but where many wise counsellors unite in their deliberations, every precaution will be taken, every danger prevented, and the most proper methods used to insure success. 15. He who stands bound for the debts of another man, especially one whose ability and honesty are unknown to him, is in great danger to be ruined in his estate: and the way to be secure in that point is to avoid and hate all such engagements. 16. Remarkable and increasing grace and virtue in a woman will engage affection and respect when all other accomplishments fade and decline; and strong men hold fast the wealth which they have acquired. 17. He who is kind and bountiful to others, secures to himself a gracious reward from God: but he who is covetous, hard-hearted, and cruel, brings trouble on himself and his relations. 18. Whatever wicked men do to render themselves rich, easy, or honoured, will disappoint their expectation; but they who exercise themselves in true piety and virtue, shall infallibly obtain the blessed reward of their works in time and eternity. 19. As holiness and virtue promote true happiness here and hereafter, so the more eagerly a man pursues an evil course, the more is he bent upon his own destruction. 20. Hypocrites, who live in enmity and opposition to God and his law, while they pretend much piety, kindness, equity, and candour, are of all men the most odious to him: but they who, being renewed by his filthy lusts and whorish pleasures. 23. The righteous habitually desire, and shall obtain, solid and substantial blessings to themselves and others; but wicked men wish for mischief on others, and hope to execute their wrath and malice upon them; which in the end will only bring more fearful and lasting ruin upon themselves. 24, 25. They who, from a right principle, are remarkably liberal to the poor and to pious institutions, shall find their stock proportionably increased for their real advantage; and while they refresh and support others with their bounty, God shall reward them with prosperity of soul, in grace or comfort, or even with the enjoyments of this present world: but the pinching hand of avarice prevents enjoyment, or brings down the curse of God upon our substance. 26. He who, in a time of scarcity, hoards up corn to raise the price, shall be hated and cursed by mankind: but good wishes and commendations from men, and blessings from God, shall attend him who then opens his granaries and sells it at a moderate price. 27. He who earnestly sets himself to contrive and do good to others, shall obtain favour with God and men: but he who makes mischief his business shall draw upon himself the evil which he designs against his neighbour. 28. He that anxiously grasps for, and trusts in, riches as his surest support and defence, shall find them a broken reed to pierce him through with many sorrows, and shall fall to decay as a withered leaf: but the righteous, who are united to Christ by faith, and walk in all holy and just conversation, shall receive, out of his fulness, abundant supplies of quickening and fructifying grace, and shall thrive and prosper in their concerns. 29. He who by his passion, prodigality, covetousness, and ambition troubles his family, may for a time make a great bustle and stir, but it will issue in disappointment, disgrace, and poverty; and the fool, who knows not how to manage, and who lives without thought, shall be reduced to want, and forced to serve, if not sell himself to, a wiser neighbour. 30. A good man's graces, prayers, instructions, and examples are a mean of quickening, comfort, and prosperity to others around: and he that by instruction, prayer, or the like, draws men from Satan to the knowledge, faith, and obedience of Christ, shows forth true and heavenly wisdom. 31. If God will not pass his own favourites without proper correction for

These are noble sentiments; and they prove that those grand virtues which are usually supposed to be the results of the milder and more perfect religion of Jesus, were thoroughly understood and inculcated by the sages of the Old Testament. We often hear of Christian charity, and Christian benevolence, and Christian love, as if these had never been known previous to the advent of our Lord. They are as old as creation. They lie at the foundation of Bible truth. There is no difference between the moral code of the Old Testament and that developed in the New.—F.

CHAPTER XII.

WHOSO loveth<sup>a</sup> instruction loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reproof is brutish.<sup>1</sup>

2 A<sup>b</sup> good man obtaineth favour of the LORD: but a man of wicked devices will he condemn.

3 A<sup>c</sup> man shall not be established by wicked-opinions there was safety—whereas counsellors, in the scriptural sense, are those who, being filled with the Spirit of God, which is a Spirit of counsel, Is. 11. 2, are ‘wise to win souls,’ and to lead men to Christ, the only refuge of sinners. C.

Ver. 21. This verse is generally interpreted of the confederacies of wicked men, ratified by hand joining in hand, as a manner of swearing. The interpretation of the judicious Brown Paterson, ‘from hand to hand,’ from one generation to another, seems greatly preferable, as in strict conformity with the following clause. C.

Ver. 22. Personal beauty is one of the gifts of God, and, like all his other gifts, may be employed for his glory and the good of the creature upon whom it is bestowed. But to this end it must be guided by discretion—a judgment formed in the light of divine truth on the origin and fading nature of the gift, and the accountability of the possessor for its use or abuse. Without this discretion, it is but like a costly ornament bestowed upon the swine, which degrades it by its unclean propensities—and ‘returns, even from being washed, to its wallowing in the mire.’ C.

Ver. 29. He that troubleth his own house, &c. This proverb is mainly directed to those who can govern their tongue and temper in public, but who lay aside this restraint, and forget ‘the law of kindness’ in their own houses. They shall inherit the wind—calms uncertain, and the storms destructive. C.

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1. He who loves reproofs, advices, and instructions, will become wise and intelligent; but he who declines, hates, and is enraged at rebukes for his faults, is under the power of his brutish passions; and there is little hope that he will ever know or act like a man. 2. The man who, being united to Christ, is clothed with his righteousness, and sanctified by his grace, and deals kindly and bountifully with others, shall be more and more favoured and blessed of God; but he whose thoughts are bent on wickedness shall be condemned to suffer the just punishment of his iniquity. 3. No man, however subtle or powerful, shall be able to establish his own or his family’s greatness by wicked methods: but the righteous, being rooted and grounded in the rock Christ, though shaken by manifold storms of trouble, shall remain unmovable in a flourishing state. 4. A pious, prudent, active, chaste, and affectionate wife is a singular ornament and honour to her husband: but one that is graceless, lazy, foolish, prodigal, peevish, boisterous, and wanton, shames him when abroad, and torments him at home; and, like an incurable disease, vexes his heart, hastens the persons, properties, and families of the just. 8. Not earthly science, honour, or riches, but spiritual wisdom, and a prudent management of his affairs, by far and honest means, will render a man highly and lastingly honoured, and commended of God and of all good men. But he who indulges his obstinate corruptions, hates and opposes his duty, and labours by wicked means to accomplish his ends, shall bring himself into present and everlasting contempt. 9. Far happier is he who, making no pompous show in the world, lives within the bounds of his income, though it should hardly afford him a single servant, than he who shows away with a great deal of elegance, equipage, and attendants, when he can hardly get necessary subsistence, without running into debt, or some other shameful and miserable shift. 10. Good men have implanted in their hearts a tender concern for the welfare and life of the brute animals, much more for that of their servants and neighbours: but the nature of the wicked is so cruel, that the very kindnesses which they affect to show are maliciously designed and ruinous. 11. Diligent industry in lawful callings shall, through the blessing of God, afford men a competent portion of temporal things; but idleness and bad company mark a man foolish, and lead him into desperate, impoverishing, and ruinous courses. 12. Wicked men desire, approve, and practise deceitful arts for ruining others, and wish to be secure in so doing; but the piety and justice from which righteous men’s actions proceed, bring forth glory to God, maintenance and blessings to themselves, and much benefit and advantage to others around. 13. Wicked men are often brought into trouble by their own rash speeches, treasons, perjuries, lies, and calumnies: but the righteous, by the providence of God, and even by their prudent discourse, avoid and escape from many difficulties, in which otherwise they had been entangled. 14. A man shall receive abundant blessings from God, as the reward of that good which he has done by his pious and profitable discourses or works. 15. Fools are so self-conceited, that they consult nobody, but hold right whatever they think or do by false accusations, calumnies, and bitter reproaches, wound the reputations, spirits, or estates of their neighbours, and make discords and divisions among them: but good men, by their prudent speeches, will labour to heal men’s reputations, compose their disputes, and comfort and edify their souls. 19. Constant adherence to strict truth in his speeches establishes a man’s credit, and what he says can never be disproved; but a liar, though he may be at first believed, is soon after found out and confuted; and he is moreover apt to contradict himself, and blast his reputation for ever. 20. They who plot mischief shall, to their great vexation, be disappointed in their expectations, and even fall into that evil which they intended for others; but they who by their counsels labour to promote the piety, peace, and happiness of others, shall have lasting joy and comfort for their reward. 21. Let the wicked plot as they will, nothing shall befall the righteous, but what tends to their spiritual and eternal advantage; but the wicked shall be quite overwhelmed with inward plagues and outward calamities. 22. Lies and liars are remarkably hated and abhorred of God; but they who, in their speeches and whole conduct, act in truth, fidelity, and candour, are beloved, and shall be blessed by him. 23. A prudent man conceals the knowledge he has, except when called by Providence to use it for the benefit of others, and even then makes no boasting ostentation of it; but a fool, through thoughtlessness, rashness, or ambition to be esteemed wise, proclaims his own weakness and ignorance. 24. Diligent and prudent activity in honest callings is the way to obtain riches, honour, and authority; but laziness and villany render men poor and enslaved. 25. Anxious cares about the things of this world, griefs for disappointments and troubles, convictions of sin, and fears of hell, depress the most magnanimous spirit, and make it to pore disconsolate over its wretchedness: but good instruction and advice from friends, and especially the promises of God powerfully applied, revive and make it glad. 26. In his state of union with Christ, justification and adoption, in his inward graces, and his exercise of them, ness: but the root of the righteous shall not be moved.<sup>2</sup>

4 A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband: but she that maketh ashamed is as rottenness in his bones.

5 The thoughts of the righteous are right: but the counsels of the wicked are deceit.

6 The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood: but the mouth of the upright shall deliver them.

7 The wicked are overthrown, and are not: but the house of the righteous shall stand.

8 A man shall be commended according to his wisdom: but he that is of a perverse heart shall be despised.

9 He that is despised, and hath a servant, is better than he that honoureth himself, and lacketh bread.<sup>4</sup>

10 A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast: but the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.

11 He that tilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread: but he that followeth vain persons is void of understanding.

12 The wicked desireth the net of evil men: but the root of the righteous yieldeth fruit.

13 The wicked is snared by the transgression of his lips: but the just shall come out of trouble.

14 A man shall be satisfied with good by the fruit of his mouth; and the recompense of a man's hands shall be rendered unto him.

15 The way of a fool is right in his own eyes: but he that hearkeneth unto counsel is wise.

16 A fool's wrath is presently known: but a prudent man covereth shame.

18 There is that speaketh like the piercings of a sword: but the tongue of the wise is health.

19 The lip of truth shall be established for ever: but a lying tongue is but for a moment.

20 Deceit is in the heart of them that imagine evil: but to the counsellors of peace is joy.

21 There shall no evil happen to the just: but the wicked shall be filled with mischief.

22 Lying lips are abomination to the Lord: but they that deal truly are his delight.

23 A prudent man concealeth knowledge: but the heart of fools proclaimeth foolishness.

24 The hand of the diligent shall bear rule: but the slothful shall be under tribute.

25 Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop: but a good word maketh it glad.

26 The righteous is more excellent than his neighbour: but the way of the wicked seduceth them.

27 The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting: but the substance of a diligent man is precious.

28 In the way of righteousness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death.

CHAPTER XIII.

A WISE son heareth his father's instruction: but a scorner heareth not rebuke.

2 A man shall eat good by the fruit of his mouth: but the soul of the transgressors shall eat violence.<sup>1</sup>

3 He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life: but he that openeth wide his lips shall have destruction.

4 The soul of the sluggard desireth, and prospect of life eternal; nor is there a single act of piety or virtue that tends to make a man miserable.

Ver. 14. The fruit of his mouth. A word of instruction, reproof, comfort, or kindness is sure to be, sooner or later, in some form repaid—and though never acknowledged by the world, will not be forgotten of God. In another sense also the proverb is fulfilled: the man who establishes a character for truth and intelligence, is sure to find his remuneration in character and employment, ver. 17. 19. C.

Ver. 21. No evil. No real, permanent evil. Troubles, pains, and even distresses, he may feel, but there is nothing really evil that is not superseded by the enjoyment of eternal blessedness. C.

Ver. 26. More excellent. 'More successful' (A. Williams). But as there is none righteous but Jesus, Ro. 3. 10, 22, the words either describe him who is 'fairer than the sons of men,' or the man who is made righteous by faith in Jesus, and whose excellency lies in the imputation of righteousness, and the renewal of his nature by the power of his Spirit. C.

CHAPTER XIII. Ver. 1. Wise children will reverently receive, obey, and submit to their parents' instructions, advices, and corrections; but there is no hope of him who laughs and scoffs when he is admonished.

who, in a dependence upon God, industriously use proper means, shall have sufficiency of outward things, and abundant comforts in Christ, both here and hereafter. 5. A righteous man not only carefully avoids, but hates, all manner of falsehood in heart, word, and deed; but a wicked man continues to impose upon others, till his detected falsehoods and villanies render him evidently odious to God and detested by men, as a stinking carcass; and so contemptible that he dare not show his face for shame. 6. They who have Jesus' sacrificial life in them, and his grace accepted by them, and who study uprightness and equity in their whole conduct, shall be preserved sound in the faith, steadfast in the obedience of the gospel, unmoved by Satan's temptations or the world's frowns or smiles; but the wicked man, and all his wicked contrivances, shall be overthrown by their own iniquity. 7. Some, in their pride and vanity, make a great show of wealth, wisdom, or grace, when they are worth nothing: while others, by their garb or their speeches willed, opposition: but they who piously consult their God and their Bible, and prudently advise with their discreet neighbours, transact things in quietness and peace. 11. Wealth gotten by fraud, gaming, theft, oppression, or the like, having the curse of God upon it, shall quickly be wasted: but that which is gotten by honest industry and diligence shall continue and increase. 12. The delay of that which a man eagerly expects renders his mind very uneasy; but when he enjoys what he long desired and looked for, it is sweet, satisfactory, and reviving. 13. He who despises God's word, or the advices of his faithful friends, shall quickly be ruined: but he who reverently submits himself to and obeys God's commandments shall be rewarded. 14. The instructions of a good man, and much more the doctrines of God's Word, refresh, comfort, and enliven the soul, and preserve from those pernicious principles and destructive practices by which many are insnared. 15. A prudent, pious, and regular behaviour is most profitable.

hath nothing: but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat.

5 A<sup>1</sup> righteous man hateth lying: but a wicked man is loathsome, and cometh to shame.

6 Righteousness<sup>1</sup> keepeth him that is upright in the way: but wickedness overthroweth the sinner.<sup>2</sup>

7 There<sup>1</sup> is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing:<sup>3</sup> there<sup>1</sup> is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches.

8 The<sup>1</sup> ransom of a man's life are his riches: but the poor heareth not rebuke.

9 The<sup>1</sup> light of the righteous rejoiceth: but the lamp<sup>5</sup> of the wicked shall be put out.

10 Only<sup>1</sup> by pride cometh contention: but with the well-advised is wisdom.

11 Wealth<sup>1</sup> gotten by vanity shall be diminished: but he that gathereth by labour<sup>6</sup> shall increase.

12 Hope<sup>1</sup> deferred maketh the heart sick: but when the desire cometh, it is a tree of life.<sup>7</sup>

13 Whoso<sup>1</sup> despiseth the word shall be destroyed: but he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded.<sup>8</sup>

14 The<sup>1</sup> law of the wise is a fountain of life, to depart from the snares of death.

15 Good<sup>1</sup> understanding giveth favour: but the way of transgressors is hard.

hate to forsake their lusts and sinful practices, even as means of receiving the choicest benefits. 22. By gaining his estate in a just and upright manner, and by doing good with it while he lives, and by earnest instruction of and fervent prayers for his family, a good man takes the surest course to fix his estate upon them for many generations: but the sinner leaves a curse entailed upon his wealth: and, by the righteous providence of God, it is quickly transferred from his family to one that is truly pious and virtuous. 23. Poor men, by their diligent labour and industry, many times abundantly provide for themselves and family, and even grow rich; while others, who are rich, are reduced to poverty, through their ignorance, rashness, injustice, oppression, deceit, &c. 24. That fond affection which restrains parents from duly correcting their children when they do amiss, is a real and ruinous hatred, a sinful withholding from them a mean, appointed by God, for their amendment and happiness: but parents who truly love their children will study, by early and Christian corrections, to prevent their fixing in evil habits or customs. 25. A righteous man never wants satisfaction, because his desires are moderate, and he lives in a temperate use of God's blessings; God gives him a competency, a heart to use it, and contentment in it: but wicked men, insatiable in their desires, and extravagant in the abuse of their plenty, shall be indigent in the midst of abundance, or reduced to the distresses of poverty.

Ver. 24. Let parents beware of misunderstanding this precept. 'The rod' does not signify merely the 'rod' of punishment, but also the 'rod' of a dignified authority; of a habitual, temperate, and chastened restraint. C.

CHAPTER XIV. Ver. 1. A virtuous wife, by her piety, prudence, good economy, and the like, supports and advances her family in honour, happiness, and wealth: but a wicked imprudent wife, by her pride, prodigality, idleness, carelessness, or otherwise, will quickly reduce a happy family to poverty, disgrace, and ruin. 2. By a universal regard to piety and virtue, men manifest the fear and holy reverence of God implanted in their heart: but by an obstinate rebellion against his laws, and eager study to gratify their sinful lusts and passions, they discover their profane contempt of his Majesty. 3. The insolent, calumniating, and contemptuous speeches of proud men are very injurious and wounding to others, and often at last prove a scourge to themselves.

8. Prudent men chiefly study to know how to act in their own calling and religious course; but wicked men employ their knowledge and wit to deceive others. 9. Insensible of the evil, malignity, and danger of sin, wicked men harden themselves in it, please themselves with their own and other men's sins, sport themselves in the commission or recollection thereof, and so provoke God to wrath against them; but they who are afraid of, hate, and avoid sin, truly love and regard their neighbours, and obtain favour with God and man. 10. No one can know what another inwardly suffers in worldly griefs and vexations, or in troubles of conscience; neither can they share with him in his inward joys, particularly those of a spiritual nature. 11. The stately houses, wealthy and honoured families of the wicked, shall in wrath be reduced to ruin and misery, and their hopes of eternal happiness issue in everlasting despair; whereas the poor and unsettled family of the truly pious shall flourish and become illustrious. 12. There is need strictly and impartially to try courses and customs: for prejudice, self-flattery, affected ignorance, and the like, make many things seem lawful and good which are really sinful and ruinous. 13. Immoderate joys and pleasures are ordinarily mingled with and issue in inward vexation and anguish: and the diverting of inward convictions and important duties by carnal mirth will quickly issue in the weepings and wailings of eternal despair. 14. He who even in heart revolts from God and his ways, shall be fearfully overwhelmed with the punishment of his sin; but a good man, who steadfastly cleaves to the Lord, shall be his wrath, and deliberately contrives how to take a cruel revenge, deserves to be hated and abhorred. 18. Inconsiderate sinners hold fast their wickedness, and delight in it, as their portion and inheritance, till they feel the woful effects of it: but the prudent, to their remarkable honour and influence, increase in spiritual understanding. 19. Even in this world the wicked are often obliged to stoop and submit to the righteous, and implore their favour and relief: and at the last day, the debasement of the wicked, and exaltation of the righteous, shall be complete. 20. If a man fall into poverty, his neighbours, who once professed great friendship, will forsake and disregard him: but if a man grow rich, many, who before took no notice of him, will pretend great affection to him, and even the greatest will offer him their favour. 21. He who overlooks and contemns his poor neighbour provokes God to punish and render him miserable: but he who compassionately relieves the poor shall be blessed by God on that account. 22. They who contrive mischief against their innocent neighbours miss their end, and the innocent. 26. They that fear God may be confident of his protection to themselves and their posterity in times of danger. 27. A holy regard to God, and obedience to his law, will issue in men's solid and eternal comfort, and preserve them from those sinful courses in which many are ensnared to their own destruction. 28. Kings ought to cherish their subjects; for on their number, wealth, and power, their own honour depends; and if they be wasted by unnecessary wars, or forced by oppression into other countries, it will prove the ruin of the kingdom. 29. He who under great provocations can maintain a calmness of temper, discovers much wisdom and grace: but he who is hastily inflamed by reproaches and ill-usage, exposes his corruption and folly, and makes it apparent to every one. 30. Nothing more conduces to health and happiness than a mind renewed by God's Spirit, freed from the dominion of sinful lusts, quiet, gentle, and contented: but envy, and such like fretful passions, torment men's spirits, waste their bodies, and hasten them towards hell. 31. He who oppresses the poor, reproacheth his Maker, and he that honoureth him, hath mercy on the poor. 32. The wicked is driven away in his wickedness: but the righteous hath hope in his death. 33. Wisdom resteth in the heart of him that knowledge of Christ, without making unseasonable or ostentatious demonstrations of it: but foolish men expose themselves by their eager desire to vent their minds in every company. 34. Religion and virtue, equity and kindness, through the blessing of God, increase the glory, power, and wealth of a nation: but rebellion against God, or injuring of mankind, disgraces and ruins societies. 35. A prudent, active, and faithful minister of state cannot but be dear to a wise king: and one who by his ill management disgraces his government, and brings all things into confusion, cannot but be the object of his wrath.

<sup>o</sup> This is very common in the world. Open sins—shameful sins are often made topics of merriment and joking. Nothing could be more unseemly, and nothing could be more injurious in its influence. Sin as a violation of God's law, as an offence against the majesty of Heaven, as a blot upon the immortal soul of man, which was made in the divine image, ought ever to be regarded with feelings of holy horror and profound regret. But besides, joking and merriment make us familiar with that which forms their subject; the moral sense is thus dulled and weakened, and the way opened up to personal indulgence.—P.

Ver. 1. The wise woman, by her prudence and management, godly example, and instruction, raises her family either in riches or character, or both; while the foolish, by her vanity, extravagance, and neglect, brings ruin upon herself, her husband, and her children. This truth applies to churches as well as to families. C.

Ver. 6. Those that would not strive, Lu. 13. 24, 25, and the 'foolish virgins' who neglected, Mat. 25. 8-11, all sought to enter and were refused. The first, because they did not strive; and when forced to come near, they still stood without, and hath understanding: but that which is in the midst of fools is made known.

34 Righteousness<sup>a</sup> exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people.<sup>1</sup>

35 The<sup>b</sup> king's favour is toward a wise servant: but his wrath is against him that causeth shame.

inally weaken or contradict the general rule. It is now verified in every righteous judgment by an upright judge upon earth: it will finally be completed by the Judge of the quick and the dead. C.

Ver. 30. A sound heart. A sound heart is a heart restored to spiritual health by Jesus, the only physician of the soul, Mat. 9. 12; and its principal symptoms are faith, hope, and love—a conscience void of offence, because sprinkled from dead works, which contributes as much to relieve bodily suffering, and promote bodily health, as to remove spiritual trouble and promote peace and enjoyment. C.

Ver. 33. Wisdom will neither cast its pearls before swine, nor give that which is holy to the dogs,—and must therefore often rest and wait for opportunities. But the vanity that is in the heart of fools is always seeking occasions for display, and cares nothing about others if it only can glorify itself. C.

CHAPTER XV. Ver. 1. Mild, submissive, and yielding answers pacify anger and wrath: but sharp, contemptuous, and impertinent language increases passion, or kindles it up where it was not before. 2. A wise man gives profitable instructions, and understands how to speak in a seasonable and prudent manner: whereas fools, by the worthless stuff they utter, and by their indiscreet and confused manner of expressing their thoughts, only manifest their own folly. 3. The infinite knowledge and observance of God extends everywhere, and to every person or action, thought, or disposition, whether good or bad. 4. Wholesome and profitable discourses instruct the ignorant, comfort the grieved, heal breaches, cure contentions among neighbours, and soften the exasperated; but corrupt, proud, passionate, and erroneous discourse disturbs the peace, and corrupts the temper and manners, of both speakers and hearers. 5. Inattention to the instructions, advices, and reproofs of superiors, manifests and issues in the greatest folly; but he who willingly receives rebukes, and carefully observes them, shows himself wise, and prudently consults his own welfare and happiness. 6. A truly pious, just, and merciful man is really very rich; as, however little of this world's wealth he may united to Christ, which are performed in faith and dependence on him, and sincerely aiming at his glory, are exceedingly acceptable to him, and issue in much comfort to themselves. 9. The whole designs, contrivances, thoughts, words, and actions of wicked men are abominable to the LORD; and this renders their religious services corrupt and hated: but he loves such as, having Jesus' sacrificial life in their souls, do, in their thoughts, affections, and endeavours, earnestly study to perfect holiness in his fear. 10. Such as dislike faithful reproof, for their apostasy from the ways of the LORD, shall be severely punished; and at last, if they continue haters of admonition and advice, shall certainly be lost. 11. The state of the dead and lost, and every other thing unknown to us, are perfectly known to God. How exact then must be his knowledge and observance of the dispositions, purposes, and thoughts of men! 12. Mockers of God and religion shun the admonitions of their conscience, and hate such as reprove them; and even avoid the company of wise, religious, or virtuous persons, lest they should meet with their reproofs or advices. 13. When the conscience is graciously purged and quieted, and the mind comforted, it issues in outward health and cheerfulness: but grief and sorrow, seizing on the heart, disturb, weaken, and dispirit it, and make a man a burden to himself and to all around. 14. Such as are truly wise, and inwardly instructed by the Spirit of God, earnestly study to obtain more solid knowledge: but persons void of true understanding gape after, and relish nothing but frivolous, vain, and unprofitable things. 15. All the days of persons discontented under their afflictions are grievous and miserable: but they who have their conscience graciously quieted, their heart joyful in God, and content with their lot, have more true and perpetual comfort and satisfaction than can be enjoyed in the most delicious banquet on earth. 16. A very small share of plain, notwithstanding a few trifling hindrances. 20. Nothing so much rejoices the hearts of pious parents as to see their children grow up in the nurture and admonition of the LORD: but foolish children requite their mothers' fond indulgence by irreverent carriage towards them; and by despising their commands, instructions, advices, or reproofs, and so making them contemptible. 21. They who are void of grace, sense, and consideration, take pleasure in doing the most empty, absurd, and wicked things: but such as are truly knowing and wise study for their own pleasure and comfort, as well as for the honour of God, to conduct their thoughts, words, and actions in a regular, sincere, and holy manner. 22. Without prudent counsellors, and for want of due deliberation, the most important designs and projects often miscarry: but where, by prudent consultation, difficulties are foreseen and provided against, men's purposes succeed to their wish. 23. Ready, pertinent, and seasonable advice is an honour and comfort to him who gives it, especially when the good success of it is found, and it is very profitable to him who receives it. 24. Holy and gracious persons, in the pursuit of everlasting life, set their affections and hopes on things above, have their conversation in heaven, and eye the glory of God in everything they do, that they may escape sinful pollutions, horrid dangers, and everlasting destruction. 25. God takes pleasure to debase the proud, demolishing their stately houses, overturning their families, and ruining their honours and wealth: but he will preserve poor widows who have no helper in their rights, against every insolent or covetous invader. 26. The LORD abhors the thoughts, inclinations, purposes, and contrivances of wicked men: but the hearts of the godly being purged by his blood and Spirit, their prayers, and edifying instructions, advices, and reproofs are pleasant to him and his people. 27. They who hasten to be rich, and warfare. 30. It is a remarkable pleasure to behold the manifold works of God: and the good report of a given and offered Saviour, and of reconciliation to God and eternal salvation, or even a good report of ourselves or neighbours, affords inward satisfaction and comfort. 31. They who with pleasure listen to and improve wholesome instructions, tending to promote their spiritual or eternal life, increase in wisdom, and shall be qualified to give good instruction to others. 32. Such as refuse or condemn proper instructions or reproofs undervalue their own soul, neglect the means of its safety, and, for the sake of some outward and perishing thing, wilfully ruin it: but he who delights to be taught and admonished, increases in solid, soul-comforting, and saving knowledge, wisdom, and prudence. 33. A holy awe of God, and real regard to his way, disposes us to the study of true wisdom and knowledge, and is a certain mark of it; and humility and patient submission in a low condition is the best preparation for honour and preferment.

Ver. 6. In the house of the righteous is much treasure. That is, (1) Christ the righteous, who has hid in him 'all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge;' (2) the righteous, through faith in Christ, having all the treasures of divine wisdom, faith, hope, charity, communicated by his Word and Spirit; (3) of temporal treasures, the righteous always possesses contentment, which is inseparable from godliness, and is 'great gain,' while he possesses that industry of hand which arises from freedom of spirit, and is the fruitful parent of all earthly prosperity. C.

Ver. 8. The prayer of the upright is his delight. 'The upright' are those who are not ashamed to look up with 'boldness to the throne of grace for grace to help them,' and their prayer a 'delight to the Lord,' because it renounces all the righteousness of the creature, and altogether relies upon the 'righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ.' C.

Ver. 27. He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house. By needless and distracting cares and toils, by transfusing the spirit of covetousness into his children, and by all the retributive consequences of that chicanery and oppression which covetoustion of his glorious perfections; yea, even the wicked to be instruments of his righteous will, and at last the objects of it, by continuing in their impieties. 5. When men are inwardly proud on account of their gifts, honours, or wealth, God sees them, and will certainly punish them in their pride. 6. By God's exercise of his mercy and faithfulness in giving his Son, and fulfilling his promises, men's iniquity is expiated, pardoned, and subdued; and even by their exercise of mercy, equity, and fidelity, the punishment of sin in outward calamities is often prevented. And by the fear of God implanted in the heart, and a continued holy regard to his law, men hate, watch against, and avoid sin; and so escape the fearful consequences of it. 7. When a man makes it his habitual and earnest endeavour to receive Christ, and walk in him soberly, righteously, and godly, the Lord, or his God reconciled in Christ, inclines even those who were his foes to become his friends. 8. A small estate honestly gotten and cheerfully enjoyed, is preferable to vast incomes heaped up by oppression and kept without hospitality. 9. A man's mind fixes its end, contrives the means, and perhaps reckons upon the success: but the Lord determines the event, and orders every motion and step taken towards it. 10. The edicts, commands, and decisions of kings ought always to be directed by the unerring law of God; and their decisions ought to be so just and exact, that no man may be wronged thereby. 11. The Lord requires that, even in our private dealings, everything, even the smallest, should be managed with the most scrupulous integrity and equity. 12. Kings, being in the most exalted station, ought to be distinguished patterns of piety and virtue, and to countenance it in others, as the only security of their everything that is evil, and to follow that which is good: and by heedful care of their thoughts, words, and actions, their souls and bodies are, through the grace and providence of God, preserved from destruction. 18. Pride and haughtiness are the ordinary forerunners of debasement and misery, and the means of bringing it on men. 19. It is better, in imitation of Christ and his dear saints, to submit to the meanest condition, and patiently to bear injuries, than to partake of victories, spoil, and wealth along with the proud. 20. They who understand business thoroughly, and manage it prudently and discreetly, bid fair to have good success; but it is only by trusting in God that true and everlasting happiness can be obtained. 21. They whose heart is well furnished with experimental knowledge of God's Word, take the proper method to obtain a high reputation for wisdom and prudence; and if they can with eloquence and clearness communicate their instructions, it will greatly tend to the edification of others. 22. Spiritual knowledge and grace are the beginning and earnest of eternal life, are comfortable to him who enjoys them, and useful to others: but the learning of fools is frivolous and vain; and even their instructions do but render men foolish. 23, 24. The enlightened mind of a wise man instructs him to speak judiciously and pertinently, gives weight of evidence to what he says, and renders it pleasant to the hearer, as a honeycomb is to the mouth, and nourishing and strengthening as marrow is to the bones. 25. Many are highly pleased with their own ways, even when they are such as tend to their ruin, spiritual, temporal, and eternal. 26. He that, prompted by his wants, labours in worldly employments, procures his own preservation in life: whereas he who labours in plaining

6 By<sup>1</sup> mercy and truth iniquity is purged,<sup>5</sup> and by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil.

7 When<sup>1</sup> a man's ways please the LORD, he maketh even his enemies to beat peace with him.

8 Better<sup>1</sup> is a little with righteousness, than great revenues without right.

9 A<sup>1</sup> man's heart deviseth his way: but the LORD directeth his steps.

12 It<sup>1</sup> is an abomination to kings to commit wickedness: for the throne is established by righteousness.

13 Righteous<sup>1</sup> lips are the delight of kings;<sup>8</sup> and they love him that speaketh right.

14 The<sup>1</sup> wrath of a king is as messengers of death: but a wise man will pacify it.

15 In<sup>1</sup> the light of the king's countenance is life; and his favour is as a cloud of the latter rain.

16 How<sup>1</sup> much better is it to get wisdom than gold? and to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver?

17 The<sup>1</sup> highway of the upright is to depart from evil: he that keepeth his way preserveth his soul.

18 Pride<sup>1</sup> goeth before destruction; and an haughty spirit before a fall.

19 Better<sup>1</sup> it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud.

20 He that handleth a matter<sup>1</sup> wisely shall find good; and whoso trusteth in the LORD, happy is he.

3 The<sup>e</sup> fining-pot is for silver, and the furnace for gold: but the LORD trieth the hearts.

4 A<sup>e</sup> wicked doer giveth heed to false lips; and a liar giveth ear to a naughty tongue.<sup>4</sup>

5 Whoso<sup>e</sup> mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker;<sup>5</sup> and he that is glad at calamities shall not be unpunished.<sup>6</sup>

6 Children's<sup>e</sup> children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children are their fathers.<sup>7</sup>

7 Excellent<sup>e</sup> speech<sup>8</sup> becometh not a fool; much less do lying lips<sup>9</sup> a prince.

8 A<sup>e</sup> gift is as a precious stone<sup>1</sup> in the eyes of him that hath it; whithersoever it turneth, it prospereth.<sup>2</sup>

9 He<sup>e</sup> that covereth a transgression seeketh<sup>3</sup> love: but he that repeateth a matter separateth very friends.

10 A<sup>e</sup> reproof entereth more into a wise man than an hundred stripes into a fool.<sup>4</sup>

11 An<sup>e</sup> evil man seeketh only rebellion; therefore a cruel messenger shall be sent against him.

12 Let<sup>e</sup> a bear robbed of her whelps meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly.

13 Whoso<sup>e</sup> rewardeth evil for good, evil shall not depart from his house.

14 The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water; therefore leave off contention, before it be meddled with.

15 He<sup>e</sup> that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the just, even they both are abominable to the LORD.

16 Wherefore<sup>e</sup> is there a price in the hand of a fool to get wisdom, seeing he hath no heart to it?

17 A<sup>e</sup> friend loveth at all times; and a brother is born for adversity.

18 A<sup>e</sup> man void of understanding<sup>5</sup> striketh hands, and becometh surety in the presence of his friend.<sup>6</sup>

19 He<sup>e</sup> loveth transgression that loveth strife; and he that exalteth his gate<sup>7</sup> seeketh destruction.

20 He<sup>e</sup> that hath a froward heart<sup>8</sup> findeth no good; and he that hath a perverse tongue fall-eth into mischief.

21 He<sup>e</sup> that begetteth a fool doeth it to his sorrow; and the father of a fool hath no joy.

22 A<sup>e</sup> merry heart doeth good like a medicine:<sup>9</sup> but a broken spirit drieth the bones.

23 A<sup>e</sup> wicked man taketh a gift out of the bosom to pervert the ways of judgment.<sup>1</sup>

24 Wisdom<sup>e</sup> is before him that hath understanding: but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth.

25 A<sup>e</sup> foolish son is a grief to his father, and bitterness to her that bare him.

26 Also<sup>e</sup> to punish the just is not good, nor to strike princes for equity.

27 He<sup>e</sup> that hath knowledge spareth his words; and a man of understanding is of an excellent spirit.<sup>2</sup>

28 Even<sup>e</sup> a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise; and he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THROUGH desire<sup>e</sup> a man having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom.<sup>1</sup>

2 A<sup>e</sup> fool hath no delight in understanding, but that his heart may discover itself.<sup>2</sup>

3 When<sup>e</sup> the wicked cometh, then cometh also contempt, and with ignominy reproach.

4 The<sup>e</sup> words of a man's mouth are as deep any fixed or serious temper.—27. The more wise and knowing a man is, he is the less apt to be talkative, speaking only what is fit and necessary; and his wisdom renders his mind and temper humble, calm, temperate, and dispassionate. 28. So great a virtue it is to be duly silent, that if even a foolish person restrain his lips from rash and impertinent talk, he is for the time reckoned a wise and intelligent person.

Ver. 5. It is the poor man who is referred to in both clauses of this verse; consequently the second clause might be translated as follows:—'He that rejoiceth at his adversity (the adversity of the poor man) shall not be held innocent.' How often does one hear the remark made in regard to those who have fallen from affluence to poverty, 'He deserves it.' 'It is a righteous judgment upon his pride, or his folly,' &c. It is such observations, and the spirit which prompts them, that are here condemned. P.

Ver. 7. Excellent speech becometh not a fool. Bandits often talk highly of generosity—the desert-robber defies hospitality—gamesters speak of debts of honour—the murderous Pharisees talked scrupulously of the Sabbath—the monks of the dark ages, while they absorbed half the riches of Europe, extolled the virtue of poverty—and popes, while domineering alike over the vassal and his lord, called themselves, in high-sounding and affected humility, in which the parents have no share; but as warnings against the neglect of a wise and godly education, and against the infusion of vanity, self-conceit, and pride into the hearts of children, whereby so many parents literally convert them into fools. C.

Ver. 27. A man of understanding is of an excellent spirit. And being of an 'excellent spirit,' he is counted to listen to what he hears; to feed upon his own thoughts, and not to intrude his opinions until love and duty absolutely require him to speak. C.

CHAPTER XVIII. Ver. 1. While self-conceited persons seek to distinguish themselves by their high pretences to wisdom, and inconstant ones seek but never find satisfaction, they who have a true desire of knowledge disengage themselves from all avocations, in order to study true wisdom. 2. A vain man studies knowledge or even religion, for no other end but to make a show with it. 3. Wherever wicked men come, they bring their contempt of God and reproaching of religion along with them, which will at last issue in contempt and misery to themselves. 4. A wise man's words, as deep waters, flow calmly, and contain the deep mysteries of God, and his allied, and both issue in the ruin of the persons guilty of them. Negligence about our soul is as fatal as open and avowed ungodliness. 10. Jesus Christ, and all the perfections, promises, and providences of God in him, are an impregnable defence and satisfaction to all such as by faith flee to him: no enemy then can ever hurt them. 11. It is only in his own conceit that the rich man's wealth appears a mean of remarkable safety either here or hereafter. 12. Pride in prosperity, forgetfulness of God, and despising of others, are certain means and forerunners of destruction: and humility, meekness, and patience, in a low condition, are the best preparation for honour and preferment. 13. He who, to show his quick parts, or through a forwardness of temper, answers to a matter before he hears it fully and understands it, shames himself, and manifests his folly. 14. A manly spirit, especially if encouraged and supported by the influences of the Holy Ghost, will bear up under manifold and

HANGMAN'S TREE, DAMASCUS. [Proverbs, xviii.]—David conquered and garrisoned the city of Damascus during his reign, and during a part of the reign of Solomon Damascus was under the dominion of Israel. The Proverbs of Solomon were written about one thousand years before Christ. We place this picture to illustrate the eighteenth chapter of Proverbs, because in some degree Damascus is connected with the beginning of the reign of Solomon in Israel. Damascus occupies the most beautiful site in Western Asia. It lies at the eastern pass of Anti-Libanus in a vast plain of great fertility, watered by the Abana and Pharpar rivers. In the center of this plain, which without the rivers would be an arid desert, in the midst of dense masses of foliage, there glisten the minarets from the mosques of Damascus. Seen at a distance it looks like a dream, a vision starting up from the desert.

15 Slothfulness* casteth into a deep sleep; and an idle soul shall suffer hunger.

16 He* that keepeth the commandment keepeth his own soul: but he that despiseth his ways shall die.

17 He* that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the LORD; and that which he hath given* will he pay him again.

18 Chasten* thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare for his crying.*

19 A* man of great wrath shall suffer punishment; for if thou deliver him, yet thou must do* it again.

20 Hear* counsel, and receive instruction, that thou mayest be wise in thy latter end.

21 There* are many devices in a man's heart; nevertheless the counsel of the LORD, that shall stand.

22 The* desire of a man is his kindness; and a poor man is better than a liar.*

23 The* fear of the LORD tendeth to life: and he that hath it shall abide satisfied; he shall not be visited with evil.*

24 A* slothful man hideth his hand in his bosom, and will not so much as bring it to his mouth again.

25 Smite* a scorner, and the simple will beware;* and reprove one that hath understanding and he will understand knowledge.

26 He* that wasteth his father, and chaseth away his mother, is a son that causeth shame, and bringeth reproach.

27 Cease,* my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge.

28 An ungodly witness* scorneth* judgment; and the mouth of the wicked devoureth iniquity.*

his relief (the assist-

CHAPTER XX.

WINE is* a mocker, strong drink is<sup>1</sup> raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.

2 The<sup>b</sup> fear of a king is as the roaring of a lion; whoso provoketh him to anger sinneth against his own soul.*

3 It<sup>c</sup> is an honour for a man to cease from strife: but <sup>d</sup>every fool will be meddling.

4 The<sup>e</sup> sluggard will not plough by reason of the cold;<sup>3</sup> therefore<sup>d</sup> shall he beg in harvest, and have nothing.

5 Counsel<sup>h</sup> in the heart of man is like deep water: but a man of understanding will draw it out.

6 Most<sup>i</sup> men will proclaim every one his own goodness:<sup>4</sup> but<sup>i</sup> a faithful man who can find?

7 The<sup>k</sup> just man walketh in his <sup>5</sup>integrity; his children are blessed after him.

8 A<sup>n</sup> king that sitteth in the throne of judgment scattereth away all evil with his eyes.

9 Who<sup>o</sup> can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin?<sup>6</sup>

10 Divers weights,<sup>7</sup> and divers <sup>8</sup>measures, both of them are alike abomination to the LORD.

11 Even<sup>a</sup> a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right.

12 The<sup>r</sup> hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the LORD hath made even both of them.

13 Love<sup>s</sup> not sleep, lest thou come to poverty; open thine eyes, and thou shalt be satisfied with bread.

14 It<sup>t</sup> is naught, it is naught, saith the of ruin; but the tokens of his favour greatly refresh and invigorate their spirits. 13. An ignorant, headstrong, and impious son is a plague and grief to his parents; and a contentious wife is a gradual ruin to her family, so perpetually vexing her husband that he can scarcely live with her. 14. Persons may have houses and riches left them by parents; but a prudent wife is not obtained, even by diligent care, without the peculiar direction and blessing of the Lord. 15. Sloth and idleness sink the mind into a dull stupidity and unconcern, and thereby reduce men to extreme beggary and want. 16. He who carefully keeps the commandments of God as the rule of his life, secures the welfare of his own soul: but he that lives at random, led only by his own brutish inclinations, shall be miserable in time and in eternity. 17. He who compassionately relieves the necessities of the poor really enriches himself; as what he gives is but lent to the Lord, and shall be repaid, with large interest and increase of blessings, upon him and his posterity. 18. Children ought to be faithfully corrected before they are fixed in evil habits and customs; nor ought their cryings or entreaties make fail do us good, is better than one who promises much and does little. 23. True godliness, and a religious care to please the Lord in all things, increase a spiritual life, and issue in life eternal. They afford the most satisfying comfort in God's favour, produce the most agreeable contentment with our lot, and are an excellent preservative both from sin and from suffering. 24. Sluggards are so much given to laziness and idle sauntering, that they can hardly be persuaded to take their meat or do the most necessary and easy things. 25. Incurable sinners, and particularly scoffers at religion and despisers of reproof, ought to be severely punished, as a warning to such as are inconsiderate; but such as are wise and prudent will need no more but a gentle reproof to make them learn their duty and practise accordingly. 26. Children, who by their debaucheries waste their father's substance and deal unkindly with their mother, disgrace their parents, and at last render themselves infamous and miserable. 27. Great care ought to be taken to avoid listening to false doctrine, sinful advice, or even idle and frothy language, as it

Ver. 3. Fretteth against the Lord. The elephant, the rhinoceros, the lion, and the tiger are often inclosed within cages. When wild they fret and strive, but soon learn that resistance is vain and submission good; but unrenewed man, less wise than the beasts that perish, fretteth against the Lord, and striveth to the end against his Maker. Grace alone can teach him to say, 'Let the Lord do what seemeth him good:' 'Thy will be done on earth as in heaven.'—C.

Ver. 7. The word 'hate' must evidently be understood in the comparative sense of Lu. 14. 26. And where poverty arises from idleness, indiscretion, or wastefulness, the coldness of brethren and friends, so far from being criminal, may be a righteous judgment and retribution. In other cases, however, it may indicate a criminal want of sympathy; and in the case of Christ Jesus our Lord, was exhibited in the highest form of guiltiness. Had our Lord come in riches, splendour, and earthly pride, the Pharisees would have worshipped him whom they bought and crucified. C.

Ver. 13. Dropting. The dropping of water through the flat roofs of eastern houses must have been a common occurrence. It would bring (1) a disagreeable noise; (2) defilement of furniture and dress; (3) in the end rottenness; (4) disease. C.

Ver. 19. An ill-tempered man will, in the end, come to punishment; for though his friend deliver him again and again, he will at last offend beyond all power of apology or intercession. C.

Ver. 22. Kindness. The most amiable quality is kindness. With it a man of inferior mental attainments is esteemed; without it the highest accomplishments can never secure esteem.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE king's<sup>a</sup> heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water:<sup>1</sup> he turneth it whithersoever he will.

2 Every<sup>b</sup> way of a man is right in his own eyes: <sup>c</sup>but the LORD pondereth the hearts.

3 To<sup>d</sup> do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice.<sup>2</sup>

4 An<sup>e</sup> high look,<sup>3</sup> and a proud heart, and the ploughing<sup>4</sup> of the wicked<sup>5</sup> is sin.

5 The<sup>6</sup> thoughts of the diligent tend only to plenteousness; but of every one that is hasty, only to want.

6 The<sup>7</sup> getting of treasures by a lying tongue is a vanity tossed to and fro of them that seek death.<sup>6</sup>

7 The<sup>8</sup> robbery of the wicked shall destroy them;<sup>7</sup> because they refuse to do judgment.

8 The<sup>9</sup> way of man is froward and strange: <sup>a</sup>but as for the pure, his work is right.

9 It<sup>10</sup> is better to dwell in a corner of the house-top,<sup>8</sup> than with a brawling woman<sup>9</sup> in a wide house.<sup>1</sup>

10 The<sup>11</sup> soul of the wicked desireth evil: his neighbour findeth no favour<sup>2</sup> in his eyes.

11 When<sup>12</sup> the scorner is punished, the simple is made wise; and when the wise is instructed, he receiveth knowledge.

12 The<sup>13</sup> righteous man wisely considereth the house of the wicked: <sup>a</sup>but God overthroweth the wicked for their wickedness.

13 Whoso<sup>14</sup> stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, but shall not be heard.

14 A<sup>15</sup> gift in secret pacifieth anger; and a reward in the bosom strong wrath.

15 It<sup>16</sup> is joy to the just to do judgment: <sup>a</sup>but destruction shall be to the workers of iniquity.

16 The<sup>17</sup> man that wandereth out of the way buyer; but when he is gone his way, then he boasteth.

15 There<sup>a</sup> is gold, and a multitude of rubies: but the lips of knowledge are a precious jewel.

16 Take<sup>b</sup> his garment that is surety for a stranger;<sup>c</sup> and take a pledge of him for a strange woman.

17 Bread<sup>d</sup> of deceit<sup>e</sup> is sweet to a man; but afterwards his mouth shall be filled with gravel.

18 Every<sup>f</sup> purpose is established by counsel; and with good advice make war.

19 He<sup>g</sup> that goeth about as a tale-bearer revealeth secrets; therefore meddle not with him that flattereth<sup>1</sup> with his lips.<sup>2</sup>

20 Whoso<sup>3</sup> curseth his father or his mother, his lamp<sup>4</sup> shall be put out in obscure darkness.

21 An<sup>5</sup> inheritance may be gotten hastily<sup>6</sup> at the beginning; but the end thereof shall not be blessed.

22 Say<sup>7</sup> not thou, I will recompense evil; but wait on the LORD, and he shall save thee.

23 Divers<sup>8</sup> weights are an abomination unto the LORD; and a false balance<sup>9</sup> is not good.

24 Man's<sup>10</sup> goings are of the LORD; how can a man then understand his own way?

25 It<sup>11</sup> is a snare to the man who devoureth that which is holy, and after vows to make inquiry.

26 A<sup>12</sup> wise king scattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel<sup>13</sup> over them.

27 The<sup>14</sup> spirit of man is the candle<sup>15</sup> of the LORD, searching all the inward parts of the belly.

28 Mercy<sup>16</sup> and truth preserve the king; and his throne is upholden by mercy.

29 The<sup>17</sup> glory of young men is their strength; and <sup>a</sup>the beauty of old men is the gray head.<sup>8</sup> body. 2. The just wrath of a king is terrible: and they that offend him, by exasperating language or behaviour, expose themselves to temporal and lasting ruin. 3. It is honourable to avoid contention to the utmost, and to get out of it as quickly as possible, by confessing our own faults, and forgiving those of our neighbours: but foolish and wicked persons are always ready to begin or maintain quarrels. 4. Such as, through indolence and self-indulgence, neglect their business in its proper season, may expect beggary and misery; while they who are diligent enjoy abundant felicity. 5. Some men, through their reservedness of temper, and others through deep design, conceal their intentions: but persons of great sagacity will discover them, or even by their artful insinuations make themselves to declare them. 6. Most men will boast how friendly humane continued practice is the surest mark of their disposition, and by that the future conversation of young persons may be guessed at; and yet they, even children, often strangely conceal their vices. 12. All our natural faculties and senses, and the right use of them, are from God, and therefore ought to be employed for his glory. 13. Immoderate sleep, or other slothfulness, wastes our time and draws on poverty and want: but watchful care and diligent labours are the means of obtaining everything necessary. 14. Some, while they buy goods, will dishonestly and falsely cry them down, and yet afterwards boast of their good bargain and cheating the seller. 15. Wise and gracious speeches, proceeding from a wise and understanding heart, are more valuable than all the gold, pearls, or precious things on earth. 16. Never trust him that is rich with his Slighters, revilers, abusers, and wishers of mischief to parents, bring fearful and lasting ruin on themselves and posterity, however they may prosper for a time. 21. Many, by unrighteous courses, quickly become rich: but the foundation being laid in rapine, extortion, or fraud, it shall quickly waste away, or prove a curse to such as enjoy it. 22. Never revenge injuries received; but commit thy cause to God who judges righteously; wait patiently in the use of lawful means for the fulfilment of his promises, and he will vindicate and deliver thee in his own time. 23. Injustice, even in the smallest things, is so extremely abominable to God, that it cannot be too much hated or avoided. 24. Men's thoughts, words, and actions are all directed by God to his own of understanding shall remain in the congregation of the dead.

19 It<sup>a</sup> is better to dwell in the wilderness,<sup>6</sup> than with a contentious and an angry woman.

CHAPTER XXII.

A GOOD<sup>a</sup> name is rather to be chosen<sup>1</sup> than great riches, and loving favour rather <sup>2</sup>than silver and gold.

2 The<sup>a</sup> rich and poor meet together;<sup>3</sup> the LORD is the maker of them all.

3 A<sup>a</sup> prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself: <sup>a</sup>but the simple pass on, and are punished.

word, are principal means of securing the government of princes, and entailing their kingdom on their posterity. 29. Strength, vigour, and courage render young men respected, but gravity, wisdom, and experience are the peculiar ornaments of the aged. 30. Severe corrections are necessary to restrain or reclaim some stubborn and obstinate tempers, and to purge out those corrupt affections which are lodged in the heart.

Ver. 6. Generosity is much more common than fidelity; ostentation of generosity more common still. Fidelity to man is not uncommon in the sense of honesty; but in the sense of love, admonition, rebuke, and prayer, how seldom is it to be found! Above all, while men glory in their generosity with the gifts of God, who is faithful in service to the Giver? C.

Ver. 10. This is not confined to mere commercial integrity, but embraces all relative duties, whether between ourselves and our neighbours, or ourselves and God. Take one of the latter, as one of the most neglected, because spiritual and invisible. We expect gratitude of men for all our kindness: do we similarly weigh and measure our gratitude to God? We ask forgiveness of him daily for all our trespasses: do we employ the same weight and measure towards them that trespass against us? C.

Ver. 16. Never place confidence in a thoughtless fool who pledges his word, character, or credit to a stranger who has inveigled him. Above all, never trust an abandoned libertine, who, being 'joined to an harlot,' is dis severed from Christ, 1. Co. 6. 15; 16; and who, careless about his own soul, will never be faithful to your interest farther than he is bound by ties of law, and constrained by his compulsions. C.

Ver. 27. The thoughts of the natural man are chiefly directed to 'what he shall eat and what he shall drink,' Lu. 12. 22, 30; nay, his 'god is his belly,' Phi. 3. 19. But the spirit of the renewed man is the candle of the Lord, searching out and mortifying all the deeds of the body that the soul may live. C.

Ver. 30. The blueness of a wound, &c. Some wounds do occasionally assume a bluish tinge; but it is always an unhealthy symptom, and unfavourable to healing. The word 'blueness' should rather be rendered suppuration, which brings the description into accordance with the ordinary process of healing. C.

CHAPTER XXI. Ver. 1. The wills, inclinations, and purposes of kings and others, are entirely under the eye and observation of God: and he would turn them into right paths as surely as the gardener or husbandman manages his canals of water. 2. Men, through their self-love, often fancy their own purposes and works to be extremely right; while the Lord, who perfectly knows their hearts, observes them to be very defective or sinful. 3. Uprightness of heart, and holiness and virtue of life are more than by such as walk in ways leading to destruction; and the wealth thus obtained is as unsubstantial and transient as heaps of chaff or clouds of smoke before the wind. 7. The injuries which wicked men do to others, in rendering their families poor or desolate, shall, in most ruinous punishments, be returned upon their own heads, because they are wilfully bent upon their unjust dealings. 8. The whole temper and course of a wicked man are contrary to the law and nature of God, and odious to him: but they whose consciences are washed in Jesus' blood, and their hearts renewed by his grace, walk in good works, acceptable to God and profitable to men. 9. Better is it to live poorly and solitary in the open air, exposed to all the injuries of the weather, or to be thrust into some little corner, than have a spacious house and numerous family governed by a contentious wife, whose perpetual scolding and brawling, on the smallest occasion, is more intolerable than thunder, lightning, or blustering winds. 10. A wicked man's heart desires to be ever doing mischief, and to have others falling into it: nor will he spare good or bad, friend or foe, if, by reproof or otherwise, they stand in the way of his covetousness, ambition, or other lusts. 11. When obstinate scoffers at the laws of God and men are punished in providence or by the magistrates; others, particularly such as they have seduced, will bethink themselves what they are doing: and wise men will improve instructions and admonitions, to render themselves wiser and better. 12. While righteous magistrates search the houses of the wicked for ill-gotten goods, and in order that they may be duly punished and deprived of power to do further mischief, godly men, in order to deter them from like courses, consider the judgment and ruin which God brings on the wicked for their sins. 13. They who refuse to help the poor in distress shall be reduced to misery themselves, and have none to pity or help them. 14. Presents, especially if secretly and prudently given, have a powerful influence to appease angry and wrathful men. 15. The execution of justice, and the practice of holiness and virtue, are a pleasure to the righteous; but are a terror and burden to the wicked, whom foolish persons lavishly waste what they neither know how to get or how to live without. 21. They who make it their business to receive and improve Jesus Christ and his righteousness and grace, in a life of holiness and virtue, shall find every new-covenant blessing in time and eternity. 22. Wise men, by their prudence, kindness, and perseverance, can effect the most difficult enterprises, and do more than others who have much more strength. 23. Restraint of the tongue from impure, false, profane, rash, injurious language, greatly preserves men from troubles, embarrassments, and miseries. 24. Pride, insolence, and outrageous words only render men infamous and contemptible. 25, 26. The slothful man is killed by an insatiable desire after that which he has not and will not labour for; but pious and diligent persons have enough for themselves, and also wherewith to relieve others. 27. All the appearances of devotion and piety about unrenowned persons being hypocritical, proceeding from a wicked principle, done in a wicked manner, and to a wicked end, are abominable to God. 28. The testimony, character, and soul of a false witness shall quickly be ruined: but he that speaks nothing but what he knows to be true, is fixed and invariable in his attestations. 29. Impenitent sinners refuse to blush at their abominations, and obstinately resolve to go on in them; but sincere saints carefully conduct their thoughts, words, and actions by the rule of God's Word. 30. No projects, however wisely laid or prudently conducted, can defeat or alter the purposes or counteract the providence of God. 31. Neither horses, chariots, nor powerful armies can obtain victories, or even protect their owners: but all safety and salvation are of and through faith in Christ himself.

Ver. 7. The robbery of the wicked shall destroy them. There are two views of the subject. (1) Several nations live by robbery, and reckon it an honourable employment. Yet, in the end, all such communities, like the piratical Algerines and murderous Thugs, are brought to destruction. (2) There is a robbery of God when he is defrauded of that worship, honour, and glory that are due to his name, which must finally terminate in the destruction of the guilty, Mal. 3. 9. C.

Ver. 13. Not 'he that stoppeth his ear at the importunity of the poor.'

4 By<sup>a</sup> humility,<sup>4</sup> and the fear of the LORD,<sup>5</sup> are riches, and honour, and life.

5 Thorns<sup>6</sup> and snares are in the way of the froward: he that doth keep his soul shall be far from them.

6 Train<sup>h</sup> up<sup>5</sup> a child in the way<sup>6</sup> he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it.

7 The<sup>i</sup> rich ruleth over the poor; and the borrower is servant to the lender.<sup>7</sup>

8 He<sup>i</sup> that soweth iniquity shall reap vanity; and the rod of his anger shall fail.<sup>8</sup>

9 He<sup>k</sup> that hath a bountiful eye<sup>9</sup> shall be blessed; for he giveth of his bread to the poor.

10 Cast<sup>t</sup> out the scorner, and contention shall go out; yea, strife and reproach shall cease.

11 He<sup>n</sup> that loveth pureness of heart, for the grace of his lips<sup>1</sup> the king shall be his friend.<sup>2</sup>

12 The<sup>e</sup> eyes of the LORD preserve knowledge; and he overthroweth the words<sup>3</sup> of the transgressor.

13 The<sup>p</sup> slothful man saith, There is a lion without, I shall be slain in the streets.<sup>4</sup>

14 The<sup>a</sup> mouth of strange women is a deep pit: he that is abhorred of the LORD shall fall therein.

15 Foolishness<sup>r</sup> is bound in the heart of a child; but the<sup>s</sup> rod of correction shall drive it far from him.

16 He<sup>t</sup> that oppresses the poor to increase his riches, and he that giveth to the rich, shall surely come to want.

17 Bow<sup>w</sup> down thine ear, and hear the words of the wise, and apply thine heart unto my knowledge:

18 For<sup>u</sup> it is a pleasant thing if thou keep them within thee;<sup>5</sup> they shall withal be fitted in thy lips.<sup>6</sup> qualifying men to be useful for God in their generation, and the noted respect and friendship of those among whom we live, are more honourable and comfortable than all the riches of the world. 2. The rich by their wealth and the poor by their labour are mutual supports of each other, and ought to live together in harmony and kindness, as the same Lord made them both, and appointed them their respective conditions. 3. Prudent men foresee calamities or temptations when approaching, and use proper means for securing themselves; but foolish and inconsiderate persons go on securely in their sins and are ruined. 4. True humility and real godliness are the certain way to honour and happiness in this world and in that which is to come. 5. Wicked men meet with much trouble and danger in their sinful ways: but he that takes proper care of his soul shall be preserved therefrom, and enjoy manifold blessings. 6. Let children be carefully instructed in the truths and accustomed to the ways of God as early and earnestly as possible, and they will retain the im-mutual reproaches for the future. 11. He that loves and practises sincerity and plain-heartedness, will recommend himself even to princes, by the piety, pleasantness, and candour of his discourse. 12. God, in his providence, carefully preserves his own oracles and ordinances among men, and provides for, preserves, and honours all who through faith are made wise unto salvation: but he overrules the counsels and designs of the wicked and perfidious. 13. Slothful persons imagine mighty hinderances in the way of their duty, where there are none, or at least very few. 14. Nothing is so dangerous, so eternally dangerous, as the ensnaring flatteries of whorish women, and the enslaving influence of fleshly lust. If a man be ensnared by them, nothing but infinite mercy and power can prevent his utter and everlasting destruction. And seldom are any, who have not provoked the Lord by former wickedness, permitted to fall into these snares. 15. False opinions and bad inclinations adhere so closely to the minds of children, that not only instructions and

Men who are quick and dexterous, but prudent, in despatching whatever business is committed to them, are in a fair way to be preferred to some honourable employment in the service of their prince.

Ver. 7. The rich ruleth over the poor. This should not generate either tyranny in the one, or envy in the other. It is an arrangement of Providence for mutual good—the child that obeys is as much blessed as the parent that rules. And so, where rich and poor alike fear God, the poor is as happy as the rich. C.

Ver. 15. The rod of correction. Be it never forgotten by parents, that 'the rod' signifies not exclusively an instrument of punishment, but authority and power; and that 'correction' consequently is not confined to corporal punishment, but extended to every means by which the mind may be corrected by wise precept, godly example, or rational restraint. C.

Ver. 16. Giveth to the rich. Giveth bribes to the rich, as is common in eastern despotisms, to induce them to overlook and countenance his oppressions. The whole history of the pashalics of Western Asia is a striking commentary upon this important doctrine of sacred political economy. C.

Ver. 17. From ver. 17–21 there is either a preface to a new division of the book of Proverbs, or a conclusion from the foregoing instructions. The latter view seems most congenial to

5. The man who is niggardly, grudges every morsel of food consumed at his table, and who yet invites others to eat and drink with him, must have some ulterior object in view. He must aim at something which he could not otherwise obtain. Consequently both he and his guests ought to be avoided. By eating at his table you place yourself to some extent in his power. It is hard to refuse the request of a host.—P

5 A<sup>a</sup> wise man is<sup>a</sup> strong; yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength.<sup>4</sup>

6 For<sup>a</sup> by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war: and in multitude of counsellors there is safety.<sup>5</sup>

7 Wisdom<sup>a</sup> is too high for a fool; he openeth not his mouth in the gate.

8 He<sup>a</sup> that deviseth to do evil<sup>a</sup> shall be called a mischievous person.

9 The<sup>a</sup> thought of foolishness is sin; and the scorner is an abomination to men.

10 If<sup>a</sup> thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small.<sup>7</sup>

11 If<sup>a</sup> thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and those that are ready to be slain;

12 If thou sayest, Behold, we knew it not; doth not he that "pondereth the heart consider it?" and he that keepeth thy soul, doth not he know it? and shall not he render to every man according to his works?

13 My son, eat thou honey, because it is good; and the honey-comb, which is sweet to thy taste.<sup>8</sup>

14 So<sup>a</sup> shall the knowledge of wisdom be unto thy soul: when thou hast found it, then there shall be a reward, and thy expectation shall not be cut off.

15 Lay<sup>a</sup> not wait, O wicked man, against the dwelling of the righteous; spoil not his resting-place:

16 For<sup>a</sup> a just man falleth seven times, and riseth up again: but the wicked shall fall into mischief.

17 Rejoice<sup>a</sup> not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he stumbleth;

18 Lest the LORD see it, and it displease him,<sup>9</sup> and he turn away his wrath from him.<sup>1</sup>

19 "Fret<sup>a</sup> not thyself because of evil men, neither be thou envious at the wicked:

20 For<sup>a</sup> there shall be no reward to the evil man; the candle<sup>a</sup> of the wicked shall be put out.

21 My son, fear thou the LORD and the king; and meddle not with them<sup>a</sup> that are given to change:<sup>5</sup>

32. 2. Ki. xviii. —xx. 2.

Ch. 1. This is the commencement of the third division of the book. The proverbs in this division resemble to some extent those in the second; but there are noticeable differences. The verses in the second division consist generally of two antithetical members; in this division the two members are parabolic rather than antithetical. We notice a parallelism similar to that which characterizes Hebrew poetry. The proverbs, too, as a rule, are longer; sometimes they extend to two, three, and even more verses. There is also a topical connection in some of them, which is not observed in the proverbs of the second division. Another characteristic is that they are directed to the whole body of the people, whereas the former were chiefly designed for the young.—P.

22 For<sup>a</sup> their calamity shall rise suddenly; and who knoweth the ruin of them both?

23 These<sup>a</sup> things also belong to the wise. It is not good to have respect of persons in judgment.

24 He<sup>a</sup> that saith unto the wicked, Thou art righteous; him shall the people curse, nations shall abhor him:

25 But<sup>a</sup> to them that rebuke him shall be delight, and a good blessing<sup>a</sup> shall come upon them.

26 Every<sup>a</sup> man shall kiss his lips that giveth a right answer.<sup>7</sup>

27 Prepare<sup>a</sup> thy work without, and make it fit for thyself in the field; and afterwards build thine house.<sup>8</sup>

28 Be<sup>a</sup> not a witness against thy neighbour without cause; and deceive not with thy lips.

29 Say<sup>a</sup> not, I will do so to him as he hath done to me; I will render to the man according to his work.

30 I went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding;

31 And, lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone-wall thereof was broken down.

32 Then I saw, and considered<sup>a</sup> it well; I looked upon it, and received instruction.

33 Yet<sup>a</sup> a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep:

34 So<sup>a</sup> shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth; and thy want as an armed man.<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Observations about kings, 8 and about avoiding causes of quarrels and sundry causes thereof.

THESE are also "proverbs of Solomon, which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied out."<sup>1</sup>

2 It is the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honour of kings is to search out a matter.

3 The<sup>a</sup> heaven for height, and the earth for depth, and the heart of kings is unsearchable.

is there in it: and the doer ought to be held as ignominious and detestable. 9. The inclination to and contrivance of evil is sin; but he that makes a sport of sin, and contemns reproofs for it, ought to be abhorred by every person. 10. To give up all for lost, and be discouraged from duty, in the time of distress, is a great evidence of weakness in knowledge, wisdom, courage, happiness, answerable to and even far exceeding thy most enlarged expectations. 15, 16. To attempt by craft or violence to ruin the righteous, even under their affliction, is as vain as it is malicious: for though they may frequently fall into sin, when they repent the Lord again raises them up: but wicked men, refusing

6 Put<sup>1</sup> not forth thyself in the presence of the king, and stand not in the place of great men:

7 For<sup>1</sup> better it is that it be said unto thee, Come up hither, than that thou shouldest be put lower in the presence of the prince whom thine eyes have seen.

8 Go<sup>1</sup> not forth hastily to strive, lest thou know not what to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to shame.

9 Debate<sup>1</sup> thy cause with thy neighbour himself; and discover not a secret to another.<sup>5</sup>

13 As<sup>1</sup> the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is a faithful messenger to them that send him; for he refresheth the soul of his masters.<sup>7</sup>

14 Whoso<sup>1</sup> boasteth himself <sup>8</sup>of a false gift,<sup>9</sup> is like clouds and wind without rain.

1 During the harvest, that is, from April to July, snow is altogether unknown in Palestine; and with the exception of an occasional slight shower in April, rain never falls. All the operations of harvest, including threshing and winnowing, are performed in the open air; during the whole harvest period also, three-fourths of the people live and sleep in the open air; consequently rain or snow would be most inopportune and destructive.—P.

18 A<sup>1</sup> man that beareth false witness against his neighbour is a maul, and a sword, and a sharp arrow.<sup>3</sup>

19 Confidence<sup>1</sup> in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint.

20 As he that taketh away a garment in cold weather, and as vinegar upon nitre; so is he that singeth songs to an heavy heart.

21 If<sup>1</sup> thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink:

22 For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the Lord shall reward thee.

23 The<sup>1</sup> north wind driveth away rain;<sup>4</sup> so doth an angry countenance <sup>5</sup>a backbiting tongue.

24 It<sup>1</sup> is better to dwell in a corner of the house-top, than with a brawling woman, and in a wide house.

25 As<sup>1</sup> cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country.

26 A<sup>1</sup> righteous man falling down before the wicked is as a troubled fountain, and a corrupt spring.

27 It<sup>1</sup> is not good to eat much honey; so for men to search their own glory is not glory.

deliberate thought and sufficient preparation. 28. Never rashly or groundlessly affirm or insinuate anything to the hurt of thy neighbour's character: and never entice any one to believe or say ill of him. 29. Nevef, either in heart, word, or deed, revenge the injuries done to thee. 30-34. And from the misery and want which others have brought upon themselves, by their negligence, sloth, or mispending of time, learn earnestly to avoid these things, as ruinous to thy outward estate, as well as to the spiritual and eternal happiness of thy soul.

Ver. 14. The knowledge of wisdom—the knowledge of Christ, the power of God, and the wisdom of God, revealed to Old Testament saints in prophecies and types, not so clearly to the Jewish, but yet as certainly, as to the Christian church. C.

Ver. 16. A just man falleth seven times, &c. He falleth six times into trouble, sorrow, disappointments, and various calamities in worldly labours and affairs, arising sometimes from his own mistake or oversights, sometimes from others; a seventh time into religious afflictions (for such is the ordinary import of the seventh, as derived from the Sabbath), and these fallings may include mental anguish for himself, his friends, yea, his enemies, or the church—or they may include persecutions for the sake of truth and righteousness. Still he shall rise again, being helped of God, who will graciously perfect strength in his creature's weakness. C.

Ver. 26. Either he that giveth a right answer to a judge, whereby truth and justice are settled; or a right answer to an the wisest on earth cannot comprehend their nature, reason, or ends: but it is the honour of kings diligently to search the Scriptures, thoroughly to examine intricate causes, and dive into plots and conspiracies, or fully to display the reasons of their actions. 3. But vulgar minds can no more judge of the secret reasons of statesmen, than they can perfectly search and measure the heavens and the earth. 4. 5. As silver, when purified from its dross, may be framed into whatever vessels the founder pleases; so kingdoms may be established in the most virtuous and happy forms, when wicked persons are removed from the counsels and company of kings. 6. 7. Never ambitiously affect or thrust thyself into courts, or any places or stations that belong not to thee; for it will be more honourable and satisfying to be invited to them, than to be disgracefully thrust from the honours which thou hast arrogated to thyself, and that in the presence of the prince unto whom thou hast approached too near. 8-10. Never enter into any contention till thou hast well considered the goodness and weight of thy cause, and how to manage it, lest in the issue thou be plunged into perplexity and covered with shame. And, if it be possible, make up matters privately, even where thy cause is good. And never let anger or hatred prevail.

report of their success. 14. It is extremely empty and deceiving to boast of graces, virtues, or abilities which we have not, or to promise what we cannot or care not to perform. 15. By patient submission and expectation princes are most readily pacified and persuaded: and humble, soft, and affectionate language bows the most stiff and hardened tempers, and overcomes even stubborn resolutions to the contrary. 16. Created comforts and pleasures are very agreeable if used in due moderation; but otherwise they lose their relish and plunge us into guilt and trouble. 17. To maintain a friendly intercourse with our neighbours is dutiful and pleasant; but too many, too long, or unseasonable visits render us disagreeable and disliked. 18. Slander and a bearing false witness are most dangerous and murderous means of destroying our neighbour. 19. Confidence in an unfaithful person in the time of trouble will, to our great anguish and grief, entirely disappoint us of help or relief. 20. As taking away clothes in winter increases our sense of cold, and vinegar irritates nitre, so unseasonable mirth renders a sad heart still more sorrowful. 21, 22. In time of need always render good for evil; and kindly bestow necessary supplies on such as have injured thee: thus shalt thou soften the hearts

7 The legs of the lame are not <sup>7</sup>equal; <sup>8</sup>so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

8 As he that bindeth a stone in a <sup>8</sup>sling, <sup>9</sup>so is he that giveth honour to a fool.<sup>9</sup>

9 As<sup>t</sup> a thorn goeth up into the hand of a drunkard, so <sup>is</sup> a parable in the mouth of fools.<sup>1</sup>

10 The great God, that formed all <sup>things</sup>, both<sup>1</sup> rewardeth the fool, and rewardeth transgressors.<sup>2</sup>

11 As<sup>a</sup> a dog returneth to his vomit; so a fool returneth to his folly.<sup>3</sup>

12 Seest<sup>t</sup> thou a man wise in his own conceit? <sup>there is</sup> more hope of a fool than of him.

13 The<sup>e</sup> slothful man saith, <sup>There is</sup> a lion in the way, a lion <sup>is</sup> in the streets.

16 The<sup>a</sup> sluggard is wiser in his own conceit than seven men that can render a reason.

17 He<sup>t</sup> that passeth by, and meddleth with strife <sup>belonging</sup> not to him, <sup>is like</sup> one that taketh a dog by the ears.<sup>6</sup>

18 As a mad man who casteth <sup>7</sup>firebrands, arrows, and death,

19 So<sup>u</sup> is the man <sup>that</sup> deceiveth his neighbour, and saith, Am not I in sport?

20 Where<sup>s</sup> no wood is, <sup>there</sup> the fire goeth out; so <sup>where</sup> <sup>there is</sup> no tale-bearer,<sup>9</sup> the strife ceaseth.<sup>1</sup>

21 As<sup>e</sup> coals <sup>are</sup> to burning coals, and wood to fire; so <sup>is</sup> a contentious man to kindle strife.

22 The<sup>y</sup> words of a tale-bearer <sup>are</sup> as wounds, and they go down into the innermost parts<sup>2</sup> of the belly.

23 Burning<sup>a</sup> lips,<sup>3</sup> and a wicked heart, <sup>are like</sup> a potsherd covered with silver dross.

24 He that hateth dissembleth<sup>4</sup> with his lips, and layeth up deceit within him:

25 When<sup>a</sup> he speaketh fair,<sup>5</sup> believe him not; for <sup>there are</sup> seven abominations<sup>6</sup> in his heart.

26 Whose<sup>7</sup> hatred<sup>b</sup> is covered by deceit, his wickedness shall be showed before the <sup>whole</sup> congregation.<sup>8</sup> salvation. 26. When righteous men are decoyed into scandalous sins, or are degraded from their influence and authority, and oppressed and persecuted, it is as hurtful to a church or nation as if the public fountains were corrupted and poisoned. 27. To hunt after worldly applause and honours, however sweet they be to corrupt nature, is extremely disgraceful and dangerous. 28. And to be furious and passionate renders us useless and miserable.

Ver. 1. Men of Hezekiah. Who the 'men of Hezekiah' were is unknown; and in such cases conjecture is useless. Nor would the knowledge be of any value, for the object of the record is not to give authority to these proverbs, but to remind the wise men of one generation to preserve and copy out for circulation the wisdom of a foregoing generation.—Note. It is thus God has given grace to the Protestant churches to multiply and circulate so many millions of copies of the Holy Scriptures in almost all languages of the earth. C.

Ver. 9. In perfect accordance with that precept of our Saviour, 'If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone,' Mat. 18.15.—Every confidential secret implies a trust; and he that reveals it, even to his most intimate friend, thereby teaches that friend to divulge it to another, and is thus most likely to be brought to shame as an idle babler or unfaithful steward. C.

Ver. 11. Holden and others interpret the passage of oranges, citrons, and such golden or precious fruit, produced at feasts in baskets of silver network. But as it contains no mention of taste, the reference seems rather to be to figures of fruit of gold, interspersed amongst branches and leaves of silver, according to the gorgeous style of eastern palaces. C.

Ver. 26. A righteous man, tempted by fear or hope, to flatter and become subservient to the wicked, is sure to trouble his own peace of mind, if not finally to corrupt his principles. Peter trembling before a servant maid, and accommodating his speech to a rude and blasphemous soldiery, is a striking exemplification of this proverb. C.

CHAPTER XXVI. Ver. 1. Dignity and authority are very ill placed in the hands of foolish and wicked men, who know not how to use them, but will do mischief to themselves and others by them. 2. Causeless curses and imprecations can hurt the innocent no more than the birds that fly over their heads. 3. Obstinate, stupid, and refractory sinners, like beasts, must, by sharp punishments, be restrained from evil, and excited to good. 4. Answer not an ignorant and impertinent fool in his own brawling and reproachful manner, so as to imitate his impertinence. 5. Answer a proud conceited fool with such strength and evidence of reason as may render him sensible of his folly, and check his pride. 6. He who employs fools or rakes in any important business, deprives himself of the advantage he might have expected, and brings much inconvenience and mischief upon himself. 7. As dancing or walking by a lame man would but manifest his lameness, so the pretences of fools to wisdom do but render them the more ridiculous. 8. Honour bestowed upon fools is very unstable and useless, if not mischievous.

improbable and insuperable difficulties. 14. It is almost a toil for such to turn themselves on their bed; and though they seem busy, they do nothing to the purpose. Though they move in the formal round of external duties, they are never a whit nearer to heaven. 15. Pretending cold, or inability, they can scarcely apply to any work; and it is almost a burden for them to take their meat. 16. But though they take no pains to acquire knowledge, they look upon themselves as perfect miracles in wisdom, and treat with absolute contempt every argument that can be used to convince them of their mistakes and danger. 17. It is extremely dangerous to engage in other men's quarrels and disputes, which do not belong to us. 18, 19. To wrong our neighbours, by either word or deed, and then pretend that it was in jest, discovers us to be stupidly insolent and diabolically mad. 20. A proper discouragement of tale-bearers, whisperers, and slanderers, is an effectual mean to prevent contentions, or even to extinguish such as are begun. 21. It is also necessary to avoid contentious persons, who, by their provoking language, kindle up or inflame quarrels, even as one inflamed coal or piece of wood kindles another. 22. The wounds given to men's characters, business, and spirits, by calumnies slyly and secretly spread, are extremely painful and hurtful, and sometimes will scarcely admit of a cure. 23. Malicious and angry language corresponds 20 Hell and destruction are never full; so the eyes of man are never satisfied.

21 As the fining-pot for silver, and the furnace for gold, so is a man to his praise.<sup>8</sup>

22 Though thou shouldest bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.

23 Be thou diligent to know the state of thy flocks, and look well to thy herds:

24 For riches are not for ever; and doth the crown endure to every generation?<sup>2</sup>

25 The hay appeareth, and the tender grass showeth itself, and herbs of the mountains are gathered.<sup>3</sup>

26 The lambs are for thy clothing, and the goats are the price of the field:

27 And thou shalt have goats' milk enough crers ruin men by drawing them into proud, rash, and pernicious courses.

Ver. 2. As wandering will never bring the bird home, and as a wing will never bring the swallow to rest, so the curse without a cause will never light upon the head of the innocent object of the curser's enmity. C.

Ver. 19. If there be one practical advice more important than another, it is this: 'Never speak a word but in truth—be always in earnest.' A loose jest may 'set the table in a roar'; no harm may be meant; but no good is intended: it is therefore sin. And as a firebrand, thrown at random, may destroy a splendid palace, so may a thoughtless 'jest' ruin a fair reputation.—Note. Children, look to a God of truth—speak words of truth—never jest at the expense of truth—be always in earnest. C.

Ver. 23. Silver dross is ordinarily lead, with which the cheapest kinds of earthenware are covered by the potter while immersed in a burning furnace. 'Burning lips' are not 'lips breathing warmth of affection,' but 'words that burn' up reputations (see ver. 24), and which are often covered over, and even ornamented as with 'silver dross.' Yet as a 'potsherd' shall they be dashed to pieces, when men 'by their words shall be justified, and by their words shall be condemned.' C.

CHAPTER XXVII. Ver. 1. Never boast what thou wilt be, or do, in any future period; for thou knowest not what changes Providence may make in a very short time. 2. Never commend thy own excellencies or works; but leave that to others who cannot be susto be unsatisfied with, or even to nauseate, the most delicious enjoyments: but poverty disposes men to a ready and thankful reception of the smallest blessings, though mixed with care and labour. 8. When men, by levity or discontent, change their country, trade, or office in which Providence had placed them, they ordinarily expose themselves to manifold dangers and inconveniences, but rarely mend their condition. 9. The kind conversation and prudent counsels of affectionate friends are extremely refreshing and comfortable. 10. Nay, such friends are more to be depended on in a time of distress than our nearest relations. 11. My son, improve these instructions to make thee truly wise and good; which will at once comfort my heart, and enable me to refute such as charge me with want of due care about my children. 12. Prudent men foresee the approach of calamities, and take proper methods to avoid them; but inconsiderate persons, deceived by others, securely rush forward till they are ruined. 13. Never trust, without a sufficient pledge, a man that is so foolish and rash as to be surety for persons whom he knows not, and even for harlots. 14. Extravagant and flattering commendations of a friend or benefactor are rather a disparagement than an honour, as it is a charge carry themselves towards others as they do towards them. And they who are remarkably sagacious can penetrate far into the inclinations and designs of others. 20. It is impossible to satisfy the corrupt desires of men: the more they are indulged the more they crave; and nothing but the fulness of God can satisfy the desires of an immortal soul. 21. Nothing more effectually tries a man than high commendations. If he be light, vain, frothy, and easily puffed up by them, it discovers his emptiness: but if under them he be humble, modest, and sensible of his own defects, it manifests him truly valuable. 22. Some are so hardened and stupified in their sinful courses, that no reproofs or corrections can make them a whit better. 23-27. Masters should look after the management of their worldly affairs themselves, and not leave all to servants; for without due care and diligence, the richest estates will soon come to nought: whereas by a proper care of the hay, grass, herbs, and flocks which Providence bestows, they may enjoy a most comfortable livelihood for themselves and families.

Ver. 16. Eastern women may be literally called hidden, whether in the tent in the desert, or the harem in the city. But the unsanctified contentious woman, who has not received for thy food, for the food of thy household, and for the maintenance<sup>4</sup> for thy maidens.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

General observations of impiety and religious integrity.

THE wicked<sup>a</sup> flee when no man pursueth: but <sup>b</sup>the righteous are bold as a lion.

2 For<sup>c</sup> the transgression of a land many are the princes thereof: <sup>d</sup>but by<sup>1</sup> a man of understanding and knowledge the state thereof shall be prolonged.<sup>2</sup>

3 A<sup>e</sup> poor man that oppresseth the poor<sup>3</sup> is like a sweeping rain, which leaveth<sup>4</sup> no food.<sup>5</sup>

4 They<sup>7</sup> that forsake the law praise the wicked: but such as keep the law contend with them.

5 Evil<sup>h</sup> men understand not judgment: but they that seek the LORD understand all things.

6 Better<sup>i</sup> is the poor that walketh in his uprightness, than he that is perverse in his ways, though he be rich.

7 Whoso<sup>j</sup> keepeth the law is a wise son: <sup>k</sup>but he that is a companion of riotous men<sup>6</sup> shameth his father.

8 He<sup>l</sup> that by usury and unjust gain<sup>7</sup> increaseth his substance, he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor.

9 He<sup>m</sup> that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, <sup>n</sup>even his prayer shall be abomination.

10 Whoso<sup>p</sup> causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way, he shall fall himself into his own pit: but <sup>q</sup>the upright shall have good things in possession.

11 The<sup>r</sup> rich man is wise in his own conceit:<sup>8</sup> but <sup>s</sup>the poor that hath understanding searcheth him out.

16 The<sup>y</sup> prince that wanteth understanding is also a great oppressor: <sup>z</sup>but he that hateth covetousness shall prolong his days.

17 A<sup>b</sup> man that doeth violence to the blood of any person shall flee to the pit; let no man stay him.

18 Whoso<sup>c</sup> walketh uprightly<sup>2</sup> shall be saved: but he that is perverse in his ways shall fall at once.

20 A<sup>e</sup> faithful man shall abound with blessings: <sup>f</sup>but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be <sup>g</sup>innocent.<sup>4</sup>

21 To<sup>h</sup> have respect of persons is not <sup>i</sup>good: for, for a piece of bread that man will transgress.

22 He that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye,<sup>6</sup> and <sup>j</sup>considereth not that poverty shall come upon him.

23 He<sup>k</sup> that rebuketh a man, afterwards shall find more favour than he that flattereth with the tongue.

24 Whoso<sup>l</sup> robbeth his father or his mother, and saith, It is no transgression; the same is the companion of a destroyer.<sup>7</sup>

25 He<sup>m</sup> that is of a proud heart stirreth up strife: <sup>n</sup>but he that putteth his trust in the LORD shall be made fat.

26 He<sup>o</sup> that trusteth in his own heart is a fool: <sup>p</sup>but whoso walketh wisely, he shall be<sup>8</sup> delivered.

and prudence is extremely useful for settling or preserving a state. 3. A needy man placed in power, and squeezing from the poor that little which they have, is a most ruinous scourge to a nation. 4. Apostates from the ways of God are the most forward in encouraging men in wickedness, and commending them for it: but they who resolutely observe God's law, do what they can to reform or punish them. 5. Unregenerate men have no solid or experimental knowledge of what is right or wrong: but they who study God's Word, and depend on his instructions, understand whatever is necessary to salvation. 6. A poor man, who acts honestly and uprightly in all he does, is far happier, and more useful and commendable, than a rich pretender to virtue, who obstinately and craftily practises vice. 7. He is an honour to his parents, as well as to himself, who studies the law of God, and observes the rules of piety and sobriety there prescribed: but he that assointended for others: but they who live in simplicity and godly sincerity shall enjoy the blessings of grace here and of glory hereafter. 11. Rich men, being courted and complimented by every one, are apt to imagine themselves extremely wise: but sensible and religious persons, however poor, quickly discern their emptiness and ignorance. 12. It is an honour and happiness for a nation when pious and prudent men are advanced to places of power and trust: but when the wicked are exalted, the persons, lives, and estates, especially of good men, are in danger, and they are obliged to conceal them. 13. He that conceals, extenuates, or defends his sins, exposes himself to severe punishments: but he who through faith in Christ confesses and forsakes them, shall be graciously blessed by God and honoured by men. 14. Happy is he who lives under the constant awe of God's perfections, and under a jealousy of his own evil heart and a fear of its candour in their dealings, shall have abundant blessings from God and honours from men: but they who hasten to be rich, render themselves execrable by their base and fraudulent methods. 21. When judges have accustomed themselves to respect persons in judgment, the most insignificant bribe will make them disregard both law and equity, and favour an unrighteous cause. 22. He that hastens to be rich envies everybody who has more than himself, covets whatever he sees, and grudges to part with the most necessary expense or alms; and never seriously thinks how quickly God may take him from his wealth, or it become a curse to him, so that through his money he corrupts himself. 23. They who in an honest and friendly manner reprove a man for his faults, will afterwards have much more of his favour and regard than they who flatter him in his sins. 24. They who snatch all the 27 He<sup>a</sup> that giveth unto the poor shall not lack: but he that hideth his eyes shall have many a curse.

28 When<sup>r</sup> the wicked rise, men hide themselves: but when they perish, the righteous increase.

HE<sup>a</sup> that, being often reproved,<sup>1</sup> hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

2 When<sup>b</sup> the righteous are in authority,<sup>2</sup> the people rejoice: but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn.

3 Whoso<sup>c</sup> loveth wisdom rejoiceth his father: but<sup>d</sup> he that keepeth company with harlots spendeth his substance.

When wicked men are increased in number, and advanced in authority, good men are obliged to hide themselves from their tyranny and persecution: but when God casts down the wicked, the righteous take courage, and openly show themselves; and their numbers are increased under pious and prudent governors.

Ver. 5. They that seek the Lord understand all things. They know more about all things, than worldly men know about any one thing: for they know that all things work together for good to them that love God: C.

Ver. 7. Shamesh his father. Shamesh him for neglecting his education—for not restraining him in time—or, notwithstanding all his care, breaks his heart by his incorrigible follies. C.

Ver. 11. It is the special duty of the rich to give their children a good education, both in secular and religious knowledge: for if the well-educated poor once discover any inferiority in the rich, contempt for their ignorance, and the disorganization of society, is sure to follow.—Note. A true religious education can alone teach the rich kindness and the poor gratitude. C.

Ver. 17. The murderer shall flee in terror of conscience till the grave receives him: let no man stay him in this flight by hiding him from deserved justice. Ge. 9. 6. C.

Ver. 22. An evil eye never means, as the ignorant and superstitious imagine, an eye that can inflict evil according to the malignity of its owner; but an eye that cannot see aright, because of some obstruction in its organization. In this verse, temporal riches form the obstruction that will not permit the hastener to see things that are 'not seen and eternal,' 2 Co. 4. 18. C.

CHAPTER XXIX. Ver. 2. 4. Where justice is impartially executed, and liberty and property secured, the nation grows great and happy; but bribery and oppressive taxes ruin a state. 5. Flatterers artfully draw men into wickedness and ruin. 6. In the wicked course of sinners, one sin draws on another.

but such as are truly virtuous labour to defend and promote the welfare of such. 11. Fools inconsiderately speak out whatever comes into their head; but wise men think well before they speak, and only utter what they know and as the opportunity requires. 12. If a ruler hearken to lies, flatтерies, or false accusations, his whole court will quickly become so wicked, that it will be hard to find an honest man in office. 13. Poor men who want estates, and rich men who get or increase their estates by fraud, are connected together in this world, and the Lord, without distinction, allows to both his light of nature, or revelation, and blessings of providence, as is good in his sight. 14. Kings who faithfully administer justice to their subjects, and set themselves to protect and help the poor, take the most proper course to gain their subjects' affection, and to continue their kingdom to many generations. 15. Careful instructions and reproofs, and prudent corrections, are of great use to render children wise, prudent, and pious: but children left to follow their own inclinations prove a disgrace and plague to parents, particularly to their indulgent mothers. 16. When wicked men are increased in number and advanced in dignity, presumptuous wickedness abounds more and more: but the righteous ought not to be discouraged, as they shall quickly see their downfall. 17. Children carefully brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, bid fair to be a help and comfort to their parents. 18. Where men want the oracles of God and ordinances of the gospel, they cannot but live wickedly on earth and be miserable in eternity: but great is the present and future benefit word or deed, both against God and men. 23. Proud, saucy, and ambitious behaviour renders men contemned, hated, and miserable; but meekness and humility procure useful and lasting honours. 24. Partnership with thieves or fraudulent persons, endangers both soul and body, and is apt to involve men in perjury. 25. An immoderate fear of men ensnares us into much guilt and mischief: but he that puts his whole confidence in God shall be preserved from them. 26. Multitudes court the favour of princes and other great men: but it is God alone who determines the lots of men here and hereafter. 27. There is a stated antipathy between the righteous and wicked; their natures, tempers, counsels, and ends being the very reverse of each other.

Ver. 1. Hardeneth himself by seeking excuses or palliations for his sin; or even false interpretations and doctrines to defend his evil courses. He shall fall without remedy, as the carcasses of the unbelievers fell in the wilderness, to whom God swore in his wrath, they should not enter into his rest. He. 3. 11. C.

Ver. 4. He that receiveth gifts. According to the margin, 'a man of obligations.' The true meaning seems to be: a king who supports justice and equity in the fear of God, establishes his kingdom; but he who substitutes for these 'weightier matters of the law,' mere 'legal obligations,' ceremonial observances, overthrows it. This was literally exemplified and fulfilled by the rulers of the Jews in the days of our Lord. See Mat. 23. 23, 38. C.

Ver. 12. The ruler that 'hearkens to lies,' is either he that will bear nothing but flattery, or he that will credulously receive false accusations, and will indolently neglect to judge for himself. All his servants will soon be wicked: for godly men will fly from him; and wicked men will gather around him, as vultures to the carcass of the dead. C.

Ver. 13. The deceitful man, who overreached him, oppressed him, and made him poor.—The Lord lighteneth both their eyes. The enriched to see, if he would, better riches than he has gained; the poor, to seek better than he has lost. C.

22 An<sup>a</sup> angry man stirreth up strife, and a furious man aboundeth in transgression.

23 A<sup>a</sup> man's pride shall bring him low: but honour shall uphold the humble in spirit.

24 Whoso<sup>a</sup> is partner with a thief hateth his own soul: he heareth cursing, and bewrayeth it not.

25 The<sup>a</sup> fear of man bringeth a <sup>a</sup>snare: but whoso putteth his trust in the LORD shall be safe.<sup>7</sup>

26 Many<sup>a</sup> seek the ruler's favour:<sup>8</sup> but every man's judgment cometh<sup>9</sup> from the LORD.

27 An<sup>a</sup> unjust man is an abomination to the just; and he that is upright in the way is abomination to the wicked.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 Agur's confession of his faith. 7 The two points of his prayer. 10 The meanest are not to be wronged. 11 Four wicked generations. 15 Four things insatiable. 17 Parents are not to be despised. 18 Four things hard to be known. 21 Four things intolerable. 24 Four things exceeding wise. 29 Four things stately. 32 Silence in case of error the way to prevent wrath.

THE words of Agur the son of Jakeh, even the<sup>a</sup> prophecy: the man spake unto Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal,<sup>1</sup>

2 Surely<sup>a</sup> I am more brutish than any man, and have not the understanding of a man.

3 I<sup>a</sup> neither learned wisdom, nor have the knowledge<sup>2</sup> of the holy.

4 Who<sup>a</sup> hath ascended up into heaven, or descended? <sup>a</sup>who hath gathered the wind in his fists? who hath bound the waters in a garment? who hath established all the ends of the earth? what<sup>3</sup> is his name, and what is his son's name, if thou canst tell?<sup>3</sup>

5 ¶ Every<sup>a</sup> word of God is <sup>a</sup>pure: <sup>a</sup>he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him.

6 Add<sup>a</sup> thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.

7 ¶ Two things have I required of thee;<sup>5</sup> deny me them not<sup>6</sup> before I die:

8 Remove<sup>a</sup> far from me vanity and lies; give me neither poverty nor riches; <sup>a</sup>feed me with food <sup>a</sup>convenient for me:<sup>8</sup>

9 Lest<sup>a</sup> I be full, and deny thee,<sup>9</sup> and say, Who is the LORD? <sup>a</sup>or lest I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain.

10 Accuse<sup>a</sup> not<sup>1</sup> a servant unto his master, lest he curse thee, and thou be found guilty.<sup>2</sup>

11 ¶ There is a generation that <sup>a</sup>curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother.

12 There is a generation that are <sup>a</sup>pure in their own eyes, and not is not washed from their

6 The fear of man often leads to folly and falsehood, by which it is hoped difficulties and dangers may be avoided; it leads to a forsaking of the true faith in times of persecution, and thus entails death. There is no more powerful incentive to sin than slavish cowardly fear.

* Of Agur, Jakeh, Ithiel, and Ucal, nothing is historically known, and conjecture is useless. Nor is it generally so important to know who a man was, as to know his sentiments—his principles of action. Agur signifies stranger or gathered; Jakeh, ready obedience; Ithiel, God with me; Ucal, power.—C.
The fourth great division of the book begins with this chapter. It is different from all the others. Its author is different, and its style and subject are different. In the words of Agur we have, as Ewald says, a succession of beautiful little pictures illustrating great moral truths. The style is not so dignified, nor 13 There is a generation, O how <sup>a</sup>lofty are their eyes! and their eyelids are lifted up.

14 There is a generation whose teeth are as <sup>a</sup>swords, and their jaw-teeth as knives, to <sup>a</sup>devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men.<sup>3</sup>

15 ¶ The horse-leech hath two <sup>a</sup>daughters, crying, Give, give. There are three things that are never satisfied, yea, four things say not, It is enough.<sup>5</sup>

16 The<sup>a</sup> grave; and the barren womb; the earth that is not filled with water; and the fire that saith not, It is enough.

17 ¶ The<sup>a</sup> eye that mocketh at his father, and despiseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley<sup>6</sup> shall pick it out, and the young eagles shall eat it.

18 ¶ There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not:

19 The<sup>a</sup> way of an eagle in the air; <sup>a</sup>the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst<sup>7</sup> of the sea; and <sup>a</sup>the way of a man with a maid.

20 Such<sup>a</sup> is the way of an adulterous woman; she eateth, and wipeth her mouth, and saith, I have done no wickedness.

21 For three things the earth is disquieted, and for four which it cannot bear:

22 For<sup>a</sup> a servant when he reigneth; and a fool when he is filled with meat;

23 For<sup>a</sup> an odious woman when she is married; and an handmaid <sup>a</sup>that is heir to her mistress.

24 ¶ There be four things which are <sup>a</sup>little upon the earth, but they are exceeding wise.<sup>8</sup>

25 The<sup>a</sup> ants are a people not strong, yet they prepare their meat in the summer;

26 The<sup>a</sup> conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houses in the rocks;

27 The<sup>a</sup> locusts have no king, yet go they forth all of them by bands.<sup>9</sup>

28 The<sup>a</sup> spider taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings' palaces.

29 ¶ There be three things which go well, yea, four are comely in going:

30 A lion,<sup>1</sup> which is strongest among beasts, and turneth not away for any;

31 A greyhound;<sup>2</sup> and an he-goat also; and a king, <sup>a</sup>against whom there is no rising up.

32 If<sup>a</sup> thou hast done foolishly in lifting up thyself, or if thou hast thought evil, <sup>a</sup>lay thine butter, and the wringing of the nose bringeth forth blood; *so the forcing of wrath bringeth forth strife.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE words of king Lemuel, the prophecy<sup>1</sup> that his 'mother taught him.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> What, my son? and what, the son of my womb? and what, the son of my vows?

<sup>8</sup> Open<sup>h</sup> thy mouth for the dumb in the cause of all such as are appointed to destruction.<sup>8</sup>

18 The words of Lemuel's betray different authorship from 'the words of Agur.' There is greater simplicity in construction, and greater regularity in arrangement. It reminds us of some of the alphabetical psalms. It is indeed an alphabetical poem, each verse commencing in succession with a letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The poem proper begins at the tenth verse. Doderlein has well termed it 'a golden A B C for women.'—P.

19 As we approach the equator, the days and nights become nearer equality of length; so that 'rising' while it is yet night' becomes common domestic occurrence. Besides, in warm climates little work is done, or can be done, in the heat of the day; and it is therefore necessary to rise early—rest during the heat, and resume work in the evening.—A. N. C.

20 The whole passage is either an emblem of the church, or a warning to the church (who is 'the bride, the Lamb's wife'), telling her to 'be instant in season, and out of season,' and even while the world is in darkness to prepare for the rising of 'the Sun of righteousness.'—C.

ruinous when wealth, beauty, or parentage are preferred to real virtue and religion, in the choice of wives or husbands. What a scandal to human nature is it when wives become the plague, the reproach of families! or when such as are virtuous and prudent are abused by husbands, unfaithful, drunken, imperious, cruel, outrageous, or churlish!—But infinite is the mercy that God, by his grace, has formed all who accept Christ into a living church, which, as the spouse of his Son, are made to answer this amiable and glorious description.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF PROVERBS.

Solomon, we are told (1 Ki. 4. 32), composed no less than three thousand proverbs. As we count them, in modern verses, this collection does not contain so many. The conclusion therefore is, that many have been allowed to pass into oblivion, and that many more have been added.

THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTES.

To warn others, Solomon here (1) Represents the vanity and vexation which adhere to all created enjoyments; particularly to those in which men ordinarily look for happiness; as human learning and policy, sensual delights, honour, power, and riches, or an empty profession of religion, ch. i.—vi. (2) Prescribes remedies against that vanity and vexation which attend those things; viz. sitting loose to them; enjoying them moderately, but never expecting much from them; acquiescing in the will of God concerning us in every event; remembering God in the days of our youth; and continuing all our life in his fear and service, with an eye to the future judgment, ch. vii.—xii. But in both parts the demonstrations of the vanity of things, and the prescriptions of remedies, are somewhat mixed.

[This book has been frequently represented as 'Solomon's penitential discourse, composed a little before his death; in which he recants and laments' his follies and departures from God. From whom, or at what time, this opinion originated in the Christian church, we are unable to say: nor is it of any importance to ascertain its origin. To say the least of it, it is altogether unsupported by any scriptural authority! It is also unsupported by any traditional Jewish authority. For the Talmudical writers ascribe the book, not to Solomon, but to Hezekiah; Kimchi, to the prophet Isaiah; while Grotius considers it to have been composed by order of Zerubbabel. Jahn refers it to a period posterior to the Babylonish captivity, and Zirkel to the times of Antiochus Epiphanes; and Jerome informs us, that, on account of some imaginary contradictions, the Jews, after the captivity, were averse to receiving it into the canon of Scripture, till more mature consideration convinced them of their error. That Solomon was the author, is apparent from internal evidence; especially from ch. 1. 12, 16; 2. 4, 6; 12. 9, 10. Of the Christian reader we ask specially that, when entering upon the study of it, he would lay aside all preconceived and unauthorized opinions about the date and object of the book, and come to examine it in a prayerful and teachable spirit. And this matter is more peculiarly necessary than may at first sight appear: for as he that views a landscape through a coloured glass, sees every object tinged with some colour that belongs not to the object, but to the glass; so he that commences the study of this book, under the impression that it is a record of Solomon's personal experience, retraction, and penitence—nay more, a kind of death-bed renunciation of the follies by which his wisdom had been stained—comes with a principle of interpretation that he brings to no other book; that is, an unauthorized determination about what the writer must intend, and not a simple inquiry into the meaning of what he actually says.

In humbly entering upon the interpretation of this book, we therefore cast away every opinion, however current and however supported, about the date and object of this book; and, by the grace of God, seek to ascertain the mind of the Spirit as revealed in its contents. C.]

CHAPTER I.

1 The Preacher sheweth that all human courses are vain: 4 because the creatures are restless in their courses, 9 they bring forth nothing new, and all old things are forgotten, 12 and because he hath found it to be so in the studies of wisdom.

THE words of "the Preacher,"<sup>1</sup> the son of David, king of Jerusalem.

2 Vanity<sup>2</sup> of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity.<sup>2</sup>

3 What<sup>3</sup> profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

4 ¶ One<sup>4</sup> generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: 'but the earth abideth for ever.

5 The<sup>5</sup> sun also ariseth, and the sun goeth down, and hasteth<sup>3</sup> to his place where he arose.

6 The<sup>6</sup> wind goeth toward the south, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits.

7 All<sup>7</sup> the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again.<sup>4</sup>

8 All<sup>8</sup> things are full of labour; man cannot utter it: 'the eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>4</sup> The first two chapters of this book bear the aspect of a personal confession, the record of the writer's experience. The great burden of it is vanity—the vanity of everything earthly. He searches after happiness, but his search is vain. He searches after wisdom, but he only finds sorrow: for the utmost limit of human wisdom is the grave. The conclusion he arrives at is, that man ought to be contented, so far as this life is concerned, with the calm, prudent, and rational enjoyment of such things as are placed within his reach.—P.

17 And<sup>a</sup> I gave my heart to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly: I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit.

18 For<sup>a</sup> in much wisdom is much grief; and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow.

CHAPTER II.

<sup>1</sup> The vanity of human courses in the pursuits of pleasure. 12 Though the wise be better than the fool, yet both have one event. 18 The vanity of human labour, in leaving it they know not to whom. 24 Nothing better than joy in our labour; but that is God's gift to the good only.

I SAID<sup>a</sup> in mine heart, Go to now, <sup>b</sup>I will prove thee with mirth; therefore enjoy pleasure: and, behold, this also is vanity.

2 I<sup>c</sup> said of laughter, It is mad; and of mirth, What doeth it?

3 I<sup>d</sup> sought in mine heart <sup>e</sup>to give myself unto wine,<sup>2</sup> (yet <sup>f</sup>acquainting mine heart with wisdom,) and to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was that good for the sons of men, which they should do under the heaven all the days of their <sup>3</sup>life.<sup>4</sup>

4 I<sup>g</sup> made me great works; I <sup>h</sup>builded me houses; <sup>i</sup>I planted me vineyards:

5 I<sup>j</sup> made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits:

6 I<sup>k</sup> made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees:

7 I<sup>l</sup> got me servants and maidens, and had servants<sup>5</sup> born in my house; <sup>m</sup>also I had great possessions of great and small cattle above all that were in Jerusalem before me:

8 I<sup>n</sup> gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings and of the provinces: <sup>o</sup>I gat me men-singers and women-singers, and the delights of the sons of men, as musical instruments,<sup>6</sup> and that of all sorts.

9 So<sup>p</sup> I was great, and increased more than all that were before me in Jerusalem: also my wisdom remained with me.

10 And<sup>q</sup> whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them; I withheld not my heart from any joy: for my heart rejoiced in all my labour; and this was my portion of all my labour.

11 Then<sup>r</sup> I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do; and, behold, 'all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and 'there was no profit

12 ¶ And <sup>a</sup>I turned myself to behold wisdom, and madness, and <sup>b</sup>folly:<sup>8</sup> for what can the man do that cometh after the king? even that which hath been already done.<sup>9</sup>

13 Then I saw <sup>c</sup>that wisdom<sup>1</sup> excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness.

14 The<sup>d</sup> wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness: and I myself perceived also <sup>e</sup>that one event<sup>2</sup> happeneth to them all.

15 Then said I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it happeneth even to me;<sup>3</sup> and <sup>f</sup>why was I then more wise? Then I said in my heart, that this also is vanity.<sup>4</sup>

16 For<sup>5</sup> there is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever; seeing that which now is, in the days to come shall all be forgotten: and <sup>g</sup>how dieth the wise man? as the fool.

17 Therefore<sup>6</sup> I hated life; because the work that is wrought under the sun is grievous unto me: <sup>h</sup>for all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

18 ¶ Yea, I hated <sup>i</sup>all my labour which I had taken<sup>5</sup> under the sun; because <sup>j</sup>I should leave it unto the man that shall be after me:

19 And who knoweth <sup>k</sup>whether he shall be a wise man or a fool? yet shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have showed myself wise under the sun. This is also <sup>l</sup>vanity.

20 Therefore I went about <sup>m</sup>to cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I took under the sun.<sup>6</sup>

21 For<sup>7</sup> there is a man whose labour is in wisdom, and in knowledge, and in equity; yet to a man that hath not laboured therein shall he leave<sup>7</sup> it for his portion. This also is vanity, and a great evil.

22 For<sup>a</sup> what hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured under the sun?

23 For<sup>b</sup> all his days are sorrows, and his travail grief; yea, his heart taketh not rest in the night. This is also vanity.

24 ¶ There<sup>c</sup> is nothing better for a man, than that he should eat and drink, and that he should make his soul<sup>8</sup> enjoy good in his <sup>d</sup>labour. This also I saw, that <sup>e</sup>it was from the hand of God.

25 For<sup>f</sup> who can eat, or who else can hasten hereunto, more than I?

A GLIMPSE OF SOLOMON'S POOLS. [ECCLESIASTES, II:6].—"I made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees." There are three of these pools, and above them is a large building which we see in the picture, a sort of half castle and half tavern, which is said to be of Saracenic origin. To the west of this there is a spring, which, in connection with three others, supplies the pools with water.

These pools are partly excavated in the rocky bed of the valley, and partly built of large stones. They are so arranged that the bottom of each pool is higher than the top of the one next below it. In this way it is possible to fill every pool with water. According to Josephus, there was a city near Bethlehem which had gardens and rivulets of water, to which Solomon was in the habit of taking a morning drive. These pools are about three miles southwest of Bethlehem.

but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather, and to heap up, that he may give to him that is good before God. This also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

CHAPTER III.

1 By the necessary change of times, vanity is added to human travail. 11 There is an excellency in God's works. 16 But as for man, God shall judge his works there, and here he shall be like a beast.

TO every<sup>a</sup> thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:<sup>1</sup>

2 A<sup>b</sup> time to be born,<sup>2</sup> and a time to die: a<sup>c</sup> time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted:

3 A<sup>d</sup> time to kill, and a time to heal: a time to break down, and a time to build up:

4 A<sup>e</sup> time to weep, and a time to laugh: a time to mourn, and a time to dance:

5 A<sup>f</sup> time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together:<sup>3</sup> a time to embrace, and a time to refrain<sup>4</sup> from embracing:

6 A time to get,<sup>5</sup> and a time to lose: a time to keep, and a time to cast away:

7 A<sup>h</sup> time to rend,<sup>6</sup> and a time to sew: a time to keep silence, and a time to speak:

8 A<sup>i</sup> time to love, and a time to hate: a time of war, and a time of peace.

9 What<sup>o</sup> profit hath he that worketh in that wherein he laboureth?

10 I<sup>p</sup> have seen the travail, which God hath given to the sons of men to be exercised in it.<sup>7</sup>

11 ¶ He<sup>q</sup> hath made every thing beautiful in his time: also he hath set the world<sup>8</sup> in their heart, so that no man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end.

12 ¶ I<sup>r</sup> know that there is no good in them, but for a man to rejoice, and to do good in his life.

13 And<sup>s</sup> also that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God.<sup>9</sup>

Peace in this world is to be secured not from extravagant pursuit of any one object, not from undue indulgence in any one pleasure, but in a calm, judicious, and regular use of those things which nature and taste present to us.—

14 I know that whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever: nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: and God doeth it, that men should fear before him.

15 That<sup>a</sup> which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past.<sup>1</sup>

16 ¶ And, moreover, I saw under the sun the place of judgment, that wickedness was there; and the place of righteousness, that iniquity was there.

17 I said in mine heart, 'God shall judge the righteous and the wicked: for there is a time there for every purpose, and for every work.'

18 ¶ I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that<sup>2</sup> God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are 'beasts.'

19 For<sup>3</sup> that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence<sup>4</sup> above a beast: for all is vanity.

20 All<sup>h</sup> go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again.

21 ¶ Who knoweth the spirit of man<sup>5</sup> that goeth upward,<sup>7</sup> and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?

22 ¶ Wherefore I perceive that there is nothing better, than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for that is his portion: for who shall bring him to see what shall be after him?

CHAPTER IV.

1 Vanity is increased unto men by oppression, 4 by envy, 5 by idleness, 7 by covetousness, 9 by solitariness, 13 by wilfulness.

SO I<sup>a</sup> returned, and considered all the oppressions that are done under the sun: and behold the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter; and on the side<sup>1</sup> of REFLECTIONS.—Numerous are the contrivances of men to find that in creatures which they should seek, and can only find, in God himself. But how vain and vexing are their diversified, their unnumbered, their utmost attempts! Till our souls return to God in Christ, as our ALL and IN ALL, they will be always like birds wandering from their nests. Thrice happy are they to whom God gives grace to take all things from him; to enjoy him in all things, and all things in him; and to use all things for his glory, and as means of attaching their heart to him and his ways.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1-11. However disjointed, useless, and afflictive the events of Providence may appear to us, God has connected them together in the most amazing beauty and harmony, and orders the season of each as tends most to advance his glory and the good of the people. And whatever worldly wisdom men may have, they will never be capable of comprehending the astonishing extent of the mysteries which God exhibits to their view in his works of creation and providence. 12, 13. It is therefore best in itself, and a benefit from God, to use worldly enjoyments moderately, and to improve them for the advantage of others. 14. God, in his wisdom and providence, seeks to train and discipline men in righteousness, and therefore we ought not to quarrel with but kindly submit to his pleasure. 15. In every age God, by new returns of things, governs the world with great uniformity of appearances. 16, 17. The very power which he has bestowed upon men as a remedy for grievances, is often used to oppress and injure the innocent; and therefore there must be a future general judgment by God himself, in which all things shall be rectified, by clearing the innocent, rewarding the righteous, and condemning the wicked. 18-21. Affected with these views, I wished that God would make men, particularly those who haughtily oppress others, to consider how mean and brutish they are, and to ponder the nature of that immortal soul which chiefly distinguishes them from beasts, whose life entirely vanishes in death.

Ver. 1. 'A time for every purpose,' unfavourable as well as favourable to the man that thinks to get profit of his labour; that is, solid, abiding satisfaction, which he can call, and keep as his own: the one stands at all times over against the other, Ec. 7. 14. C.

Ver. 2. A time to plant, &c. Among the horrors of war is the destruction of woods. A great man who had been at such pains to ornament a wild mountain district with buildings and trees, exclaimed when all had been destroyed, 'I care nothing for the house—I can soon raise a new one; but the trees! the trees! when will they be grown again!'—Note, How grateful should a people be when a land continues to enjoy peace and advance in improvement! This also is of God. C.

Ver. 8. A time to hate. Not a time permitted to hate, but which the carnal mind so perverts, Tit. 3. 3. C.

Ver. 11. More correctly, 'He hath also set eternity in their heart, so that no man can find out the work that God doeth from the beginning to the end.' Luther remarks on this passage: 'Man cannot hit upon the work which God does: that is, no man can know beforehand the hour which is ordained above; and however much he may plague himself, he can never know when it will begin or come to an end. It behoves us therefore to say, O Lord, to thee belongs the supreme direction, in thy hand it rests entirely to order and settle everything in the future; under thy control is my life and my death: so long as I need my life, so long thou givest it. And inasmuch as in respect of them no care or thought is of any use, I will act then in regard to other gifts, using them as they come; care and anxiety I will cast to the winds, and commit all to thee.' P.—Everything beautiful. Among the innumerable evidences of the being and goodness of God, is the beauty which he has so widely diffused. The heavens, the earth, the plants; the birds, the beasts, the insects, the fishes; the eye of affection, and the smile of friendship—all are beautiful—so suited not merely for being, but for well-being, that it is impossible for any but the fool, Ps. 14. 1, to observe them, and remain insensible to the perfections of the Maker of all. C.

Ver. 19. God shall judge the righteous and the wicked. From the present unequal distribution of good and evil, some philosophers have attempted to deduce the doctrine of a future judgment; while others have replied, that if the distribution have continued unequal through so many thousand years, there is therefore the more reason to conclude it will so continue for ever. In the face of this incapacity on the one hand, and sophistry on the other, revelation shows it to be not a questionable inequality of good and evil, but the long-suffering of God with sinners; and establishes the doctrine of future judgment upon his word of truth, and attributes of wisdom and justice. C.

Ver. 22. Rejoice in his own works. True joy in a man's own works lies (1) In the humble acknowledgment that he is 'an unprofitable servant,' Lu. 17. 10, for joy ariseth not from a proud assertion of merit. (2) In discovering that while his own works produce no righteousness, a believer is 'justified without the deeds of the law,' Ro. 3. 28. (3) In finding that, in all he has wrought, not he but grace has been the real worker, 1 Co. 15. 10. C.

REFLECTIONS.—We live in a world of changes; but all things outside man's will are governed by God's will. It is absurd then to choose it for our portion, or to take up our rest in it. Readily should we believe, that whatever God has given us is best for us, accommodate ourselves to it, and wait with patience for the full unravelling of what seems intricate and perplexed. Yea, to be entirely satisfied with God's providential disposals is highly necessary, as they neither can nor their oppressors there was power, but they had no comforter.

2 Wherefore<sup>b</sup> I praised the dead which are already dead more than the living which are yet alive.

3 Yea,<sup>c</sup> better is he than both they which hath not yet been, who hath not seen the evil work that is done under the sun.<sup>2</sup>

4 ¶ Again,<sup>d</sup> I considered all travail, and every right<sup>e</sup> work, that for this a man is envied of his neighbour. This is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

5 ¶ The<sup>f</sup> fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh.

6 ¶ Better<sup>g</sup> is an handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit.

7 ¶ Then I returned, and I saw vanity under the sun.

8 There is one alone, and there is not a second; yea, he hath neither child nor brother: yet<sup>h</sup> is there no end of all his labour; neither is his eye satisfied with riches; neither sait he, For<sup>i</sup> whom do I labour, and bereave my soul of good?<sup>5</sup> This is also vanity, yea, it is a sore travail.

9 ¶ Two<sup>j</sup> are better than one; because they have a good reward for their labour.

10 For<sup>k</sup> if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up.

11 Again, <sup>l</sup>if two lie together, then they have heat: but how can one be warm alone?

12 And if one prevail against him, two shall withstand him; and <sup>m</sup>a threefold cord is not quickly broken.

13 ¶ Better<sup>n</sup> is a poor and a wise child than an old and foolish king, who<sup>o</sup> will no more be admonished.<sup>7</sup>

14 For<sup>p</sup> out of prison he cometh to reign; whereas also he that is born in his kingdom becometh poor.

CHAPTER V.

1 Cautions against abuse in divine service, 8 against murmuring at oppression. 9 The vanity of riches. 18 Joy in riches is the gift of God.

KEEP thy<sup>a</sup> foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more ready to hear<sup>b</sup> than to give the sacrifice of fools: for they consider not that they do evil.

2 Be<sup>c</sup> not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing<sup>1</sup> before God: for God is in heaven,<sup>2</sup> and thou upon earth; therefore let thy words<sup>d</sup> be few.

3 For a dream cometh through the multitude of business; and 'a fool's voice is known by multitude of words.<sup>3</sup>

4 When<sup>e</sup> thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; 'for he hath no pleasure in fools: pay that which thou hast vowed.<sup>4</sup>

5 Better<sup>f</sup> is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay.

6 Suffer<sup>g</sup> not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin; neither say thou before 'the angel,<sup>5</sup> that it was an error: wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and 'destroy the work of thine hands?<sup>6</sup>

7 For<sup>h</sup> in the multitude of dreams and many words there are also divers vanities:<sup>6</sup> but<sup>o</sup> fear thou God.

8 ¶ If<sup>i</sup> thou seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not at the 'matter: 'for he that is higher than the highest regardeth; and 'there be higher than they.

be altered. And let us study to answer his end in his providences, which is to make us truly religious. Amidst all the changes which we either feel or fear, let us believe and acknowledge the inviolable steadiness of his government. Let us constantly live in the faith of his future judgment of the world, that no oppression may sink our spirits, and no power nor honour render us proud, mischievous, or impious. Let us always maintain a deep sense of our own meanness, stupidity, and unruliness before God; and study to use whatever God gives us for our own comfort, and for the real benefit of others.

Ver. 16. 'There is no end to all the people, to all by whom he is made a leader: but they that come after shall not rejoice in him.' That is, the popularity even of the son, not of an old and foolish, but of a young and wise king, may soon pass away: such is the instability of human opinion, and the vanity of human praise. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Into what a hell hath sin turned our earth! Men are often proud of transforming themselves into devils for tormenting their brethren. Often, through want of help and comfort, a man's life is made worse than death or non-existence. And desperately wicked are men when even right and useful works do but rouse their envy. But great is the mercy that God, with whom every right work is accepted, will bestow

The emblem of putting off earthly thoughts and defilements, as it is written, 'Having these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all pollution of the flesh and of the spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.' C.

Ver. 6. Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin. Let no rash vow of your lips become the occasion of tempting you to any of the works of the flesh, such as covetous regrets after what you have vowed, or proud rivalry in religious offerings with your richer neighbours. See 1 Jn. 2. 16; Ga. 5. 19. C.

ied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase. This is also vanity.

11 When<sup>a</sup> goods increase, they are increased that eat them: <sup>a</sup>and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?

12 The<sup>a</sup> sleep of a labouring man is sweet, whether he eat little or much: but the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

13 There<sup>a</sup> is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, <sup>a</sup>riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt.

14 But<sup>a</sup> those riches perish by evil travail:<sup>a</sup> and he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand.

15 As<sup>b</sup> he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came, and shall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand.

16 And this also is a sore evil, that in all points as he came, so shall he go: and <sup>a</sup>what profit hath he that hath laboured for the wind?<sup>a</sup>

17 All<sup>a</sup> his days also he eateth in darkness, and <sup>a</sup>he hath much sorrow and wrath with his sickness.<sup>1</sup>

18 ¶ Behold that which I have seen: <sup>a</sup>it is good and comely<sup>2</sup> for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the sun all the days<sup>3</sup> of his life, which God giveth him; for it is <sup>a</sup>his portion.

19 Every<sup>a</sup> man also to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to take his portion, and to rejoice<sup>4</sup> in his labour; <sup>a</sup>this is the gift of God.

20 For<sup>a</sup> he shall not much remember the days of his life;<sup>5</sup> because <sup>a</sup>God answereth him in the joy of his heart.<sup>7</sup> wealth, and honour, so that he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth, yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it. <sup>a</sup>This is vanity, and it is an evil disease.

3 ¶ If<sup>a</sup> a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, so that <sup>a</sup>the days of his years be many, and his soul be not filled with good, and <sup>a</sup>also that he have no burial;<sup>1</sup> I say that <sup>a</sup>an untimely birth is better than he:

4 For<sup>a</sup> he<sup>2</sup> cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkness, and his name shall be covered with darkness.

5 Moreover, <sup>a</sup>he hath not seen the sun, nor known any thing: this hath more rest than the other.

6 Yea, <sup>a</sup>though he live a thousand <sup>a</sup>years twice told, yet <sup>a</sup>hath he seen no good: <sup>a</sup>do not all go to one place?

7 ¶ All<sup>a</sup> the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the appetite<sup>4</sup> is not filled.

8 For<sup>a</sup> what hath the wise more than the fool?<sup>5</sup> what hath the poor, that <sup>a</sup>knoweth to walk before the living?

9 Better<sup>a</sup> is the sight of the eyes than the wandering of the desire.<sup>6</sup> This<sup>a</sup> is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

10 ¶ That<sup>a</sup> which hath been is named already, and it is known <sup>a</sup>that it is <sup>a</sup>man; <sup>a</sup>neither may he contend with him that is mightier than he.<sup>8</sup>

11 Seeing there be <sup>a</sup>many things that increase vanity, what is man the better?

12 For <sup>a</sup>who knoweth what is good for man in this life, all the days of his vain life<sup>9</sup> which he spendeth as <sup>a</sup>a shadow? <sup>a</sup>for who can tell a man what shall be after him under the sun?

CHAPTER VII.

1 Remedies against vanity are, a good name, 2 mortification, 7 patience, 11 wisdom. 23 The difficulty of getting wisdom.

A GOOD<sup>a</sup> name is better than precious ointment; and <sup>a</sup>the day of death than the day of one's birth.

cumspect in our worship, and for enabling us to behold, or bear up under, oppression and persecution. God makes the highest to live on the same simple things as the poorest. There is very little to profit or please, and much more to hurt and vex in riches, than we commonly think. The rich man's servant often enjoys more benefit by his wealth than the rich man himself, while he suffers none of the vexation! Nay, the covetous miser gets no comfort in his wealth, and it is swept away, so that his children never come to the possession of it. Much happier is he who receives whatever he has as God's free gift, and uses it to his glory. Little let our condition be what it may on earth, we shall still remain poor frail creatures, subject to manifold miseries: and it will be the utmost wickedness and madness to complain of our lot, or strive with God to get it rectified.

Ver. 2. If 'God giveth him not power to eat,' why doth he, by his Word and Spirit, 'yet find fault?' Because this denial of power to enjoy is not an evil disposition refused, but a judicial sentence passed upon his covetousness—the warning, if he repent not, of another sentence when he will lift up his eyes being in torments. C.

Ver. 6. Do not all go to one place? Not all spirits, of whom here there is no mention; but all bodies that must return to one from a sinful attachment to earthly things, or to persuade them to use them aright; and especially to bring them to receive the almighty Saviour, and his unsearchable riches, for their everlasting treasure and portion.

CHAPTER VII. Ver. 1. A good reputation is of more advantage for rendering us useful and happy than all the riches, pleasures, and honours of this world: and the day of death, which frees men from the miseries of this world, is preferable to the day of birth, which introduces into a life in which the enjoyments

2 ¶ It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting: for that is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to his heart.

3 Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.

4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning; but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.

5 It is better to hear the rebuke of the wise, than for a man to hear the song of fools:

6 For as the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool.<sup>2</sup> This also is vanity.

7 ¶ Surely oppression maketh a wise man mad; and a gift destroyeth the heart.<sup>3</sup>

8 Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof; and the patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.

9 Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of fools.

10 Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this.<sup>6</sup>

11 ¶ Wisdom is good with an inheritance;<sup>7</sup> and by it there is profit to them that see the sun.

12 For wisdom is a defence,<sup>8</sup> and money is a defence; but the excellency of knowledge is, that wisdom giveth life to them that have it.

13 Consider the work of God: for who can make that straight which he hath made crooked?

14 In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him.<sup>3</sup>

15 All things have I seen in the days of my vanity: there is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness, and there is a wicked man that prolongeth his life in his wickedness.

16 Be not righteous over-much; neither make thyself over-wise:<sup>4</sup> why shouldst thou destroy<sup>5</sup> thyself?

24 That which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out?

25 ¶ I applied mine heart<sup>2</sup> to know, and to search, and to seek out wisdom, and the reason of things, and to know the wickedness of folly, even of foolishness and madness:

26 And I find more bitter than death the woman<sup>3</sup> whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands as bands: whose pleaseth God<sup>4</sup> shall escape from her; but the sinner shall be taken by her.

27 Behold, this have I found, (saith 'the Preacher,) counting one by one, to find out the account;<sup>5</sup>

29 Lo, this only have I found, that God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions.

men are truly wise, they may do much good to others with their wealth in this world; 12. For both wisdom and wealth may be laid out for our protection and safety; but it is true piety and prudence that promote spiritual comfort and eternal happiness. 13, 14. To prevent murmuring, we ought carefully to observe how wise, just, and powerful God's operations are, and consider ourselves incapable of changing, even the most afflictive events of Providence, to our liking. In the time of prosperity we should therefore acknowledge God's goodness, and enjoy the benefit of it; and in the day of adversity we ought to consider the nature, author, and end of our afflictions, so as to make a good practise carefully this advice: for it is the true fearer of God who, by a circumspect regard to his law, shall escape both the extremes and their evil consequences. 19, 20. True piety and prudence tend more to direct, help, and protect men, than all human helps; even though the best are liable to manifold failings.—24. Human wisdom may judge of things present and obvious, but not of things future and mysterious. 25. I attempted a most careful and comprehensive search into God's providences, and men's counsels, conduct, and sinfulness; 26. And with grief and shame, I find that nothing more effectually entices and fixes men in guilt and ruin than a whorish woman. It is only by

Ver. 15. Solomon prophetically foresees, and in this verse describes, Christ the only Son of man that ever had righteousness, ver. 20; Ro. 3. 10; and, by necessary consequence, the only one that could perish in 'his righteousness.' ## CHAPTER VIII.

2 Kings are greatly to be respected. 6 The divine providence is to be observed. 12 It is better with the godly in adversity, than with the wicked in prosperity. 16 The work of God is unsearchable.

WHO is<sup>a</sup> as the wise man? and who knoweth the interpretation of a thing? <sup>b</sup>A man's wisdom maketh his face to shine,<sup>1</sup> and the <sup>2</sup>boldness<sup>3</sup> of his face shall be changed.

2 ¶ I<sup>c</sup> counsel thee to keep the king's commandment, and that<sup>d</sup> in regard of the oath of God.

3 Be<sup>e</sup> not hasty to go out of his sight: stand not in an evil thing; <sup>f</sup>for he doeth whatsoever pleaseth him.

4 Where<sup>h</sup> the word of a king is, there is power; and who may say unto him, What doest thou?

5 Whoso<sup>i</sup> keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing; <sup>j</sup>and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment.<sup>4</sup>

6 ¶ Because<sup>k</sup> to every purpose there is time and judgment, therefore the misery of man is great upon <sup>l</sup>him.<sup>6</sup>

7 For<sup>m</sup> he knoweth not that which shall be: for who can tell him when it shall be?<sup>7</sup>

8 ¶ There is no man that hath power <sup>n</sup>over the spirit to retain the spirit; neither hath he power in the day of death: and there is no discharge<sup>o</sup> in that war;<sup>9</sup> neither<sup>p</sup> shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it.

9 All<sup>q</sup> this have I seen, and applied my heart unto every work that is done under the sun: there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another <sup>r</sup>to his own hurt.

10 And<sup>s</sup> so I saw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from <sup>t</sup>the place of the holy,<sup>1</sup> and <sup>u</sup>they were forgotten in the city where they had so done. This is also vanity.

amidst so much folly and so many flashes of vain mirth as take place in the world. The very worst of things effectually work for the good of the saints. And a humble and patient resignation to the will of God makes us easy under the most grievous adversity and oppression. Christian wisdom and prudence tend greatly to our direction, safety, happiness, and strength. —They teach us to view God's hand in all that befalls us; to accommodate ourselves to every providence as it comes; and neither to be offended with the prosperity of the wicked nor the adversity of the godly in this life; to guard against all extremes: and, under a deep sense of our own faults, to carry ourselves mildly toward others who are overtaken in a fault. How short-sighted are the wisest of mortals with respect to the most important objects! But great is the mercy if they are brought to see their own leading follies and crimes, and, by the sight thereof, are led to repentance, to a deep sense of the riches of God's grace, and to search out the sinfulness of their heart and nature, till they apprehend themselves utterly vile before God.

him. 4. A king has power to enforce his commands; and none can oppose him without apparent danger. 5. He who prudently complies with the king's pleasure in lawful things, shall avoid the trouble and danger which he would otherwise incur. And it will require wisdom to direct in what time and manner we may deal with him to the best advantage. 6. For through inattention to the proper time and to proper direction in managing matters, men bring much trouble upon themselves: 7. For they are generally ignorant what things are to happen, and of the time in which what they expect will come to pass. 8. None, neither by force nor entreaty, nor by wickedness, are capable of preventing the removal of their soul from this world in one way or another, so it becomes all to be ready. 9. I have observed that rulers by their management often bring guilt and ruin upon themselves. 10. I have observed wicked rulers, notwithstanding the greatest funeral pomp, quickly forgotten in the very city in which they had often, in God's name, administered judgment. So vain and position 11 ¶ Because<sup>a</sup> sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily; therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil.

12 ¶ Though a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that <sup>b</sup>it shall be well with them that fear God, which fear before him:

13 But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days, which<sup>c</sup> are as a shadow; because he feareth not before God.

14 There is a vanity which is done upon the earth; <sup>d</sup>that there be just men, unto whom it happeneth according to the <sup>e</sup>work of the <sup>f</sup>wicked: again, there be wicked men, to whom it happeneth according to the <sup>g</sup>work of the <sup>h</sup>righteous. I said, that this also is vanity.

15 ¶ Then<sup>i</sup> I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than <sup>j</sup>to eat, and to drink, and to be merry; for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.

16 ¶ When<sup>k</sup> I applied mine heart to know wisdom, and to see the business that is done upon the earth; (for <sup>l</sup>also there is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes;)<sup>4</sup>

17 Then I beheld all the work of God, <sup>m</sup>that a man cannot find out the work that is done under the sun; because though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it: yea farther, though a wise man think to know it, yet shall he not be able to find it.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Like things happen to good and bad. 4 There is a necessity of death unto men. 7 Comfort is all their portion in this life. 11 God's providence ruleth over all. 13 Wisdom is better than strength.

FOR all<sup>a</sup> this I considered in my heart,<sup>1</sup> even to declare all this, <sup>b</sup>that the righteous, and the wise, and their works, are in the hand of meet with kind usage and remarkable prosperity. 15. This makes it evident, that nothing is more proper than soberly and thankfully to enjoy what God in his providence bestows upon us in this world, as all the reward that we can gain by our labour. 16, 17. It is best to refrain from curious inquiries into the reasons, ends, and meaning of God's dispensations; for after the most diligent, curious, and persevering search, I find they will still remain unsearchable to men.

Ver. 2-5. That 'the king' was a title of Messiah familiar in the days of Solomon, is obvious from Ps. 2. 6; 21. 1, 4, 6; 45. 1, 6; 98. 6, &c.; and there are such characteristics in this passage as clearly prove that Jesus is 'the King' whom Solomon prophetically honours. Thus in ver. 3. 'He doeth whatsoever pleaseth him.' Now this neither David, nor Solomon, nor Darius, Da. 6. 14, nor indeed the most despotic monarch on earth, ever could effect: then, to Solomon's King none may say, 'What doest thou?' But never was there an earthly king without some one honest enough, or bold enough, or factious enough, to question his acts. Above all, he who keepeth the commandment of Solomon's King 'shall feel no evil,' a lot which no earthly king enjoys himself, nor can bestow upon any of his subjects. But all these things the King in Zion

God: 'no man knoweth either love or hatred by all that is before them.

2 All<sup>a</sup> things come alike to all: there is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the good, and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not: as is the good, so is the sinner; and he that sweareth, as he that feareth an oath.<sup>2</sup>

3 This<sup>a</sup> is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all, yea, also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, and after that they go to the dead.

4 ¶ For<sup>a</sup> to him that is joined to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion.

5 For<sup>a</sup> the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten.

6 Also<sup>a</sup> their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.

7 ¶ Go<sup>a</sup> thy way, eat thy bread with joy,<sup>4</sup> and drink thy wine with a merry heart;<sup>5</sup> for God now accepteth thy works.<sup>6</sup>

8 Let<sup>a</sup> thy garments be always white;<sup>7</sup> and let thy head lack no ointment.

9 Live<sup>a</sup> joyfully<sup>8</sup> with the wife whom thou lovest all the days of the life of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: for that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun.

10 Whatsoever<sup>a</sup> thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.

11 ¶ I<sup>a</sup> returned, and saw under the sun, that d The sense is, When the occurrences of life are regarded in the light of human reason only, from the stand-point of feeble short-sighted man, then the righteous and wicked appear to be dealt with in exactly the same manner. Both suffer, both die. Sceptics conclude from this that the providential dealings of a just God cannot extend to human acts. But the object of the sacred writer here manifestly is to raise man to a higher stand-point. He is to look to another state—an eternal home and reward for the righteous in heaven. The words of this passage bear a close analogy to the words of Paul in 1 Co. 15.19.—P.

'the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all.

12 For<sup>a</sup> man also knoweth not his time: as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them.

13 ¶ This wisdom have I seen also under the sun, and it seemed great unto me:

14 There<sup>a</sup> was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it:

15 Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man.<sup>1</sup>

16 Then<sup>a</sup> said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless the poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard.<sup>2</sup>

17 The<sup>a</sup> words of wise men are heard in quiet more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.

18 Wisdom<sup>a</sup> is better than weapons of war: but one sinner<sup>3</sup> destroyeth much good.

2 A<sup>b</sup> wise man's heart is at his right hand; but a fool's heart at his left.

REFLECTIONS.—What excellency in himself—usefulness among neighbours—honour among friends—and courage among enemies—the true knowledge and fear of God give to a man! But it is foolish and sinful to disregard the laws of our rulers; to be forward in finding fault with their administrations; to persist in faults pointed out to us; or to neglect proper methods of obtaining redress of our grievances. Subjection to magistrates is highly necessary, not only for conscience' sake, but even for avoiding their wrath and securing our own comfort. Certain and irresistible in themselves, though uncertain in their circumstances, are troubles and death to sinful men. But when we see wicked men prosper while the godly are oppressed, there is need of patience and of looking by faith to the lion' was the guardian emblem of the throne of Solomon, 2 Ch. 9. 18, 19, and although 'the like were not made in any kingdom,' yet 'a living dog,' though an unclean and despised animal, would by his mere barking or assault have done more to guard the monarch than the twelve dead lions by which the ascent of Solomon's throne was protected.—C.

Ver. 5. The memory of them [the dead] is forgotten. Is this consistent with fact? Is the memory of a great man ever forgotten? Yes, always. The memory of a good or a bad man's actions may be preserved in history and trumpeted by fame; but the memory of every man—the memory of personal affection—the only real memory of the man—is altogether forgotten—the children cease to weep for him—and his grandchildren perhaps knew him not. C.

Ver. 10. 'What a life I have spent in laboriously doing nothing!' was the melancholy reflection of a learned man on his death-bed. And so must it be with the most diligent, if he do not embrace the four departments to which Solomon directs the intellectual and active energies—work, device, knowledge, wisdom. Time when Providence so little distinguishes the righteous here in their condition either in life or in death. Remarkable are the advantages which men have in this life for bettering their states, tempers, or hopes. But quickly death puts an end to them all! to all opportunities of preparing for eternity; and to all our intimacies, enjoyments, or affections in this world. What need then have we soberly to relish the comforts of this life, relative to our spirits, our food, our raiment, and our relations. Quickly should we work out our salvation with fear and trembling while we have opportunity, as we know not how soon our soul may be required of us. Carefully should we acknowledge God, and depend on him for direction in all our paths, as without his assistance we can obtain nothing good, but and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap.

understanding and inward abilities are always in readiness to direct him in his work: but a fool is unready in all he does, and knows not how to manage his affairs.
3. Nay, even in the most ordinary business his weakness appears, and he plainly discovers his folly to every one. 4. If the magistrate takes offence at thee, never desert thy station or employment, or withdraw thy subjection: but by submissive and patient carriage endeavour to pacify him. 5-7. Very often, to the great hurt of the subjects, magistrates employ, as their deputies and agents, persons of a weak or mercenary spirit, while persons of ability and true dignity are overlooked and contemned. 8. Both prince and people have need to beware of innovations; for he that endeavours to ensnare and ruin another shall thereby perish himself:
and he that passes his due bounds to wrong others, brings unexpected mischief upon himself. 9. He that rashly attempts things too high and hard for him shall be hurt by it; and he that deals with men of stubborn tempers endangers himself. 10. If a man do not use proper means for his work, it will cost him so much more labour and pains. Wisdom is therefore necessary and profitable to direct in the choice and use of means. 11. As unenchanted serpents are disposed to bite, so rash and talkative persons are sure to do mischief with their words unless they have a where the rules are ever so plain. 16. It is a great misery to a nation when their magistrates are ignorant, wilful, and unexperienced, and minding their sensual pleasures when they should be employed about the business of their office. 17. But happy is that nation whose magistrates are of truly excellent dispositions and endowments, and who use the enjoyments of life, not to satisfy inordinate lusts, but to fit them for their business. 18. Through sloth and indolence, estates, families, and nations are gradually reduced to wretchedness and ruin. 19. Even feasting affords but a very slight and transient pleasure; but a plentiful estate procures every outward advantage: we should therefore beware of spending it in luxury. 20. It is neither lawful nor safe to contemn, reproach, or wish evil to magistrates, however secretly, as it may be very quickly and surprisingly discovered to them.

Ver. 1. Folly. Solomon means by folly, (1) Childishness, Pr.
22. 11, that is, waywardness of temper, being easily disturbed; preference of toys to things of real value; and preference of amusement and self-will to learning and due control. (2) Want of prudent forecast, Pr. 13. 14. (3) Deceitfulness, Pr. 14. 3. 4.
A hasty temper, Pr. 14. 29. (5) Pleasure in other men's folly, Pr.
15. 21. (6) Rejecting good advice, Ec. 4. 13. When folly is employed to designate the highest criminality, as De. 22. 21; Jos.
7. 15; Ho. 2. 10, it can easily be reduced to one or more of these heads. C.

covered. And thus he admonishes, not for the sake of a facti-tious loyalty, but because he that frets himself into cursing the king will speedily be in danger of cursing his God. See Is. 8.
21.—Note. The bird is most probably a reference to the use of carrier pigeons for speedy and secret missives. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Men of character have need to be careful, lest they should inadvertently ruin it. Many are extremely ill qualified for the business they take in hand; and imprudently expose their own folly and wickedness. But it is very dangerous when either rulers or subjects leave their proper stations and attempt violent changes of the public settlement. Vain and imprudent talking is often attended with the most hurtful consequences. It is necessary then to have our words always with grace, seasoned with salt. An imprudent management of their business frequently robs men of both the comfort and the benefit thereof. But it is a great mercy for nations when rulers and subjects do all diligently and prudently attend to their proper work, and act according to their station, neither doing nor speaking evil, but provoking one another to love and to good works.

CHAPTER XI. Ver. 1, 2. Cheerfully lay out thyself entirely dependent on thee. C.

7 ¶ Truly<sup>1</sup> the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun:

8 But<sup>a</sup> if a man live many years, and rejoice in them all; <sup>a</sup>yet let him remember the days of darkness, for they shall be many. All that cometh is vanity.

9 ¶ Rejoice,<sup>2</sup> O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: <sup>a</sup>but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment.<sup>4</sup> not how the human soul is created or united to the body, or operates in and on it, nay, nor even how the child is formed in the womb, even so thou knowest not how God may deal with thee, or thy estate: and therefore neglect no opportunity of doing or receiving good; and without any curious prying into futurity, leave it entirely to God to recompense thee. 7, 8. Life and its comforts are desirable: but let men enjoy created comforts as long as they may, the lasting period of troubles, death, and eternity will infallibly succeed, and manifest the emptiness and insufficiency of all outward enjoyments. 9, 10. Whatever temptations young persons may have to indulge their own foolish and wicked inclinations and fancies, let them remember, with the deepest concern, that God will, in his awful judgment, call them to account for every part of their conduct. Let them take care to prevent those perplexities and miseries which sinful indulgence will at last bring upon them; for all the empty and short-lived pleasures of youth can never in the least balance the dangers of inexpressible and everlasting misery.

Ver. 1. Cast thy bread upon the waters. Some interpret thus: 'Cast thy bread-corn (seed) upon the waters,' as rice is said to be sown in Egypt; others, 'Sow thy bread-corn (seed) before the coming of the waters,' that is, before the rainy season. But as the word translated waters signifies multitudes, may not the meaning rather be, 'Cast thy bread (give forth thy spiritual instruction) before the face of the multitudes?' See Mat. 5.1, as contrasted with the portions or more specific instructions preportant duty is that of giving to the poor! Nothing is a more certain mean of making men rich. No objections, drawn from our right to what we have, from the narrowness of our circumstances, from the discouragements which we have already met with in it, or from our not knowing how it can be made up to us, ought to make us neglect so much as one opportunity of charity. But, above all, it is most sinful and foolish for either old or young to indulge their lusts, and live unconcerned about Jesus Christ and his salvation, when heavy troubles, an important death, an awful judgment, and an endless eternity are before them, and they know not how near!

CHAPTER XII. Ver. 1. Now, in youth, seriously think of, believe in, and serve the Divine Persons, who made, preserve, and redeem men, before the disquieting and disqualifying infirmities of old age come upon you: 2. ities and troubles of old age, and the fears and pangs of death, in the full assurance that Jesus loved them, and gave himself for them! But, alas! how difficult is it to persuade us of the emptiness of all created things! This truth needs to be inculcated a thousand times over. Nor will that avail, unless the Holy Ghost inscribe it on our heart. It is necessary then that all preachers should be sent and qualified by Christ and his Spirit; and that, by every possible mean, they should labour to fix the truths of God in the con-sciences, understandings, affections, and memories of their hearers. And let us, in our religious course, attend chiefly to the principal points; and always act under the awe, and in the faith and hope, of the last judgment.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTES.

The most common view of the Book of Ecclesiastes represents it as 'a philosophical inquiry after the summum bonum, or chief good of man; in which Solomon states the various opinions on the subject, the result of his own dear-bought experience in search of the respective enjoyments of human wisdom and human folly.' Without altogether excluding this view, others think Solomon's main design was to 'prove the immortality of the soul, or rather the necessity of another state after this life, by such arguments as may be deduced from reason and experience.'

Now, in all this, it is not a little remarkable—it is not a little lamentable—that it never seems to have occurred to the learned authors of these opinions, that Christ and his church formed any direct object of Solomon's investigation! Yet how strange if the wisest man could have written a book in which the 'Wisdom of God' obtained no place!

'Much of the obscurity, it has been observed, which is generally admitted to exist in the book of Ecclesiastes, arises from not attending to the train of argument proposed by Solomon, which difficulty the ordinary division of chapters and verses is supposed to have contributed to increase' (Horne's Introduction).

Now that, like other portions of Scripture, the book of Ecclesiastes contains some or many things 'hard to be understood,' cannot be denied. But has not its peculiar obscurities arisen from neglecting the beams of 'the Sun of Righteousness' shining so brightly in all its pages, rather than from any inattention to the mere train of a philosophical argument? That Ecclesiastes is a book of argument is admitted; but not in any other sense than that in which the Epistles to the Romans, Galatians, and Hebrews are books of argument. That is, the statements, illustrations, and conclusions are never of man, but from the Spirit of God.

If by 'wisdom' is to be understood anything less than the knowledge that 'God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself,' 2 Co. 5. 19, then, indeed, is the book of Ecclesiastes not only obscure, but often unintelligible. But if the 'wisdom' sought and commended by Solomon be the knowledge of 'Christ, the wisdom of God,' then the obscurity of the book becomes illuminated, and 'he may run that readeth it,' Hab. 2. 2.

Another source of its obscurity may be found in the principle of interpretation ordinarily adopted—a principle neither warranted by anything in the book itself, nor by authority of any other book of Holy Scripture. This principle is the assumption that the book 'was written by Solomon in his old age, after he had repented of his sinful practices; and when, having seen and observed much, as well as having enjoyed everything that he could wish, he was fully convinced of the vanity of everything but piety towards God' (Horne's Introduction). Now, that Solomon wrote the book at an advanced period of his reign, is obvious from ch. 2. 4–11; but though all his recorded labours terminate in 'vexation,' there is not one single reference to any special 'sinfulness' in his pursuits—an omission totally inconsistent with the genius of Scripture, which never fails in the most direct acknowledgment and condemnation of the sins of its chiefest characters. Had the book, therefore, been a confession of sin and retraction of error, these must have furnished its most plain and prominent statements. Sin would have been called sin, and not mere 'vanity and vexation of spirit;' for these words, however strong and expressive, come far short of that self-abasement and abhorrence which the consciousness of sin against God must produce, whenever his Spirit leads the sinner to repentance. The conclusion, therefore, is inevitable—Ecclesiastes is neither an acknowledgment nor retraction of sin in the inspired author, but an illustration of the insufficiency of all 'treasures on earth' for the purpose of inducing men to 'lay up their treasures in heaven,' to 'set their affections on things above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.'

But the chief source of obscurity may be detected in two principles that would reduce light itself into darkness,—the first, taking words in a sense the writer never intended,—the second, interpreting by figures of speech that he never employed. Examples of the first may be found in the meaning attached to 'good' in ch. 2. 24. and 3. 13, &c., where the real good intended is commonly referred to unlimited sensual indulgence; and the second is exemplified ch. 11. 9, where a plain and godly admonition is commonly interpreted as a bitter irony.

In the preceding notes these arbitrary principles of interpretation have been altogether rejected; and, in subordination to the teaching of the Spirit, the book has been treated as its own expositor.—C.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON

Could not be a nuptial hymn composed in honour of any of his wives; for it was not composed till after the tower of Lebanon was built, ch. 7. 4; and so not till about twenty years after his marriage with Pharaoh's daughter. Many of the emblems used in it—as to be made a keeper of the vineyard, to have a head like Carmel, a nose like the tower of Lebanon, eyes like fish-pools, teeth like a flock of sheep, and to be terrible as an army with banners, &c.—if applied to a fine lady, are absurd to the last degree: but if the whole be understood of the union and fellowship between Christ and his people, it will appear most exalted, instructive, and animating. The name of God is not found in it, more than in Esther; nor could the continued allegory of the book well admit of it. But the agreement of its matter and language with other passages of Scripture—as Is. 54. 5; 62. 4, 5; Ho. 2. 19, 20; Mat. 25. 1–10; 9. 15; 3. 9; Ro. 7. 4; 2 Co. 11. 2; Ep. 5. 32; Re. 19. 7; 21. 2, 9; and especially with Ps. xlv.; its majestic style; its efficacy on the consciences of men for promoting their spiritual comfort and holiness; the sincerity of the bride in acknowledging her faults; and in fine, the general reception of it by the Jewish and Christian churches: sufficiently prove it inspired of God. The truth ized, when he exhorted the Jews to 'search the Scriptures;' and by Paul, when he affirmed that 'all Scripture is given by inspiration of God.' With the full conviction of its divine origin, it was newly translated into Greek, in the second century, by three eminent Christian divines; and in the third, it was inserted by Origen in his Hexapla, who also wrote some discourses explanatory of its sacred meaning.

Notwithstanding this concurrence, its divine authority is said to have been questioned in the fifth century by Theodore of Mopsuestia; and occasionally, down to the present day, various objections against its inspiration have been started by Christian divines. Now, without questioning either the objects or the principles of these objectors, it is not a little to be lamented that their learning has been so misapplied. For if the reception of the book by the Jewish church, and its approbation by our Lord and his apostles, be not, to a Christian, sufficient evidence of its divine authority, any higher evidence it must be impossible to obtain; and if this evidence is to be rejected in the case of one book, there is no ground for its sufficiency in the case of any other.

The objections to the divine authority of this book have arisen, as in the case of Ecclesiastes, from assuming an unauthorized principle of interpretation, and pronouncing the book a mere marriage song, and consequently unfitted for religious instruction. But again, whereas in Ecclesiastes, a book confessedly didactic, the ordinary and natural application of words has been rejected—in the Song of Solomon, a book confessedly written in similitudes or parables, the emblematic application of words has been rejected.

The Christian disciple will, however, make light of these cavils, and calmly repose upon the authentication of the book derived from Christ and his apostles. And while so reposing, he will find a treasury filled to overflowing with the unsearchable riches of Christ. He will be led into a banqueting-house of boundless hospitality; he will mingle with a company of purity and love; he will traverse gardens of loveliest flowers and sweetest odours; he will repose beneath trees with coolest shade and ripest fruits; thence will he climb the Lebanon heights of contemplation, and gaze upon the lovely land that lies beneath his feet, the land of his inheritance and his home, where Christ is the King, saints the subjects, and love the law; where the subjects themselves are kings and priests unto God, clad in the robes of the Lamb's immaculate righteousness, and crowned with the diadem of his unfading glory.

Some eminent interpreters have considered this book as a sacred drama extending through seven days, and have divided it into scenes, each of a day's continuance. Others have concluded it to be a succession of idyls, or little poems, with no connection of time, place, or person: but merely possessing some common object as their only principle of union.

In the following notes these principles of interpretation will be diffidently—on account of their authors—but firmly rejected, from their want of any but conjectural authority. The principles of interpretation adopted will be (1) The grammatical, including the singularity, or plurality, or sexes of the speakers. (2) Change of place. (3) Change of time. (4) Change of objects. (5) Change of sentiment or action. (6) The parallel—comparing spiritual with spiritual, explaining what here is unknown by what is elsewhere acknowledged. By following these natural principles, the book will be found a succession of beautiful, impressive, and instructive emblems of natural pictures, representing spiritual originals—an outward form of what is earthly, fabricated for little children, but with an inward spirit of what is only intended for perfect men. CHAPTER I. Ver. 2. Blessed Jesus, upon whom I have been meditating, by thy Word and Spirit give me intimate fellowship with thee in thy ordinances, and full assurances of thy friendship: for the manifestations of thy redeeming love are more pleasant, reviving, and strengthening to my soul than any created enjoyments. 3. Such is the pleasant and powerful influence of thy mediatorial excellencies, offices, relations, and fulness of spirit and grace, that sincere and holy souls cannot but love thee with their whole heart. 4. By thy almighty influence direct and bring me into the nearest enjoyment of thyself, that I, and others excited by me, may pleasantly comply with thy alluring power, and follow hard after thee in the paths of duty.—Jesus, the King of his church, has already brought me into the most ravishing nearness to and spiritual and temptations are befallen me: hypocritical professors, false teachers, and my own inward corruptions, enraged at my connection with Christ, and my cleaving to him, have oppressed me with the basest drudgery, and entangled me in carnal cares and secular affairs, which have hindered me from, or retarded me in, the due improvement of my own office, opportunities, gifts, and graces. 7. But, O all-compassionate Redeemer, whom I love with my whole heart, and above everything else, discover to me, by thy Word and Spirit, which is thy true church, and which are those assemblies wherein thou art remarkably present, and to whom thou affordest spiritual support and consolation amidst all their scorching persecutions and troubles: for why should I, whom thou hast redeemed, and who have sincerely devoted my whole self to thee, be left to and Husband have, and will render you comely and active, and will give you sufficient strength and courage to withstand and conquer your spiritual enemies, if you will only be faithful. 10. Whilst your church state is beautifully adorned by divine oracles, ordinances, gifts, and graces, professors, and ministers, your particular conversation before the world appears beautifully marked with a variety of precious and holy qualities, and your faith, by which you are united to my person as your Head, is precious and glorious in itself, and is productive of every good word and work. 11. And I, my Father, and the blessed Spirit will for ever continue and increase these spiritual ornaments in true believers.

SUPHENIAH ROAD—A SCENE IN THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CITY OF KING SOLOMON'S DOMINIONS. [Song of Solomon, i:1.]—The above is a picture of a road in Supheniah, a suburb of Damascus. This is given here because it illustrates a scene in the dominion of Solomon. Damascus was one of the wealthy and beautiful cities in his kingdom. In passing from Jerusalem to Palmyra, the city Solomon built in the wilderness, Damascus would be on the direct route, and in going to Palmyra to-day tourists usually start from Damascus. In the respect that Damascus and Palmyra occupy oases in the midst of surrounding deserts, they are alike. There would be no Damascus were it not for the Abana river. The stream breaks through a gorge in the Lebanon mountains a few miles above the city, and at once begins a warfare with the desert. For 25 miles the conflict between the river and the burning sands of Syria is expressed in a luxurious and tropical vegetation.

9 My<sup>n</sup> beloved is like a roe, or a young hart: behold, he standeth behind our wall, he looketh forth at the windows, showing<sup>7</sup> himself through the lattice.

CHRIST. 15. How comely and glorious is my church, as endowed with ordinances, and reformed by my Word and Spirit; and how adorned with intelligent, sincere, peaceful, peace-proclaiming, and faithful pastors, who search into gospel truths, and watch over, direct, and go before every individual member of it. And how certainly, and eminently comely, is every believing soul clothed with my righteousness, and endowed with my grace! How quick and discerning their spiritual understanding! How chaste, sincere, and single their affections, without the least glance of spiritual whoredom!

BELIEVERS. 16. But, blessed and divine Husband, what is all my derived comeliness in respect of thine, in thy person, offices, relations, and grace? How delightful are all these to my heart! How pleasantly glorious is thy promise, and the ordinances of thy gospel, for the conversion and consolation of souls, and for rendering them fruitful in good works! 17. And strong, durable, and lasting is thy church, in which I am honoured to dwell, and consists of such parts and members as keep the faith; and permanent are all her oracles, ordinances, and offices.

Ver. 2. The word me shows that the bride 'the Lamb's wife,' Re. 21.9, is the first speaker; thy, addressing her, shows that the virgins, the church in her state of waiting and progress, reply. See Mat. xxv. C.

Ver. 5. I am black as the tents of Kedar—a humble acknowledgment of sin, in which words the bride speaks; but comely as the curtains of Solomon, a recognition of the sin, but an assertion of the beauty of faith and repentance, in which words the virgins speak. C.

Ver. 6. Look not upon me, &c. She speaks as a village maiden, accustomed, as all village maidens are in the East, to work in the vineyards; and so exposed to the burning sun that her skin was dark when compared with the fair daughters of Jerusalem. Though tanned with the sun she was still beautiful. What a noble figure of the church! Bearing the marks of the world's toils and persecutions; yet showing on every feature the lineaments of heaven. P.

Ver. 7. There is here a new picture, changing from a banqueting-house into a chamber. The church is here represented as a words of the text are therefore descriptive of a maiden decked in her ornaments. It is also worthy of note that fully caparisoned horses have their bridles covered with little plates of the precious metals, and have also numbers of chains and amulets strung round their necks. How graphic therefore are the words, 'I have likened thee, O my love, to a company of horses in Pharaoh's chariots!' P.

Ver. 14. Camphire. The camphire is a plant, the Lausonia inermis of botanists. Of the dried leaves an unguent is made, called henna, with which the females of Syria and Egypt dye their nails. Its flowers have a sweet perfume, and eastern maidens often place bunches of them in their bosoms. The plant is still found at En-gedi. P.

REFLECTIONS.—How precious and pleasant Christ is to believing souls! Ardently do they pant after further communications of his grace; sensible that they can do nothing of themselves, but Jesus must do all in them and for them. He takes the sweetest delight in speedily answering their prayers, and satisfying their souls with his loving-kindness; though often, amidst his kind visits, their outward state is such as looks-on are apt to stumble at. With what pain and grief do lively saints lament the want of frequent and intimate fellowship with him and his people in the ordinances! But he is ready to direct and comfort them in this condition. He has done, and will do, for them the most amazing things, in furnishing them with his righteousness, his grace, and his glory. All their life, their strength, their grace, their comfort, their happiness come from him. His heart is full of high esteem and unbounded affection for them. And, through familiar fellowship with him, they receive and enjoy his comforting, sanctifying, and blessed influence.

CHAPTER II. CHRIST. 1. I am indeed glorious in my person as God-man, and in my mediatorial relations, estates, and works; and am infinitely comely, refreshing, and medicinal to every believing soul. 2. And partaking of my comeliness, righteousness, and grace, thou, my church, art incomparably more excel-protected me from enemies; and encouraged and animated me to my spiritual work and warfare. 5. Ye ministers and fellow-professors, often have I needed your sympathy, direction, and comfort, under my sad perplexity and desertion. But, oh! if you could now help me to bear up under these ravishing discoveries and communications of Jesus' love! Oh for further and unspeakably more enlarged enjoyment of him, to strengthen me for supporting under, and improving what I have; 6. But why do I ask your assistance? While I enjoy the true, the delightful, and intimate embraces of an incarnate God, and have the joys of his promise imparted to my soul, his word, power, and grace marvellously uphold, delight, and invigorate my heart. 7. I therefore charge you, my fellow-professors, by everything kind, pleasant, or delightful, that ye disturb not my fellowship with him, nor do, nor cause me to do, anything which may provoke him to withdraw this sensible visit of his love. 8. Lo! though he had withdrawn, yet I now hear his voice, in the ministry of his Word and motions of his Spirit. Behold, he comes removing and triumphing over every hindrance of my fellowship with him! 9. Behold, in the most lively, lovely, and affectionate manner, he comes forward in the influence of his grace, and unto an actual assumption of our nature! Behold he, the substance of all our ceremonies, manifests his glorious and gracious excellencies, through them, and vouchsafes some obscure and transient glimpses of himself in every ordinance! 10. In what a heart-melting manner he said to my soul, Rouse up thyself from thy partial deadness, sloth, and security, and disentangle thyself more fully from the snares of the world and thy own lusts. Exercise thy faith in the most active, bold, and assured degree, in partaking of the most delightful fellowship with me: 11. For all impediments, arising from the wrath of God, the guilt time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land;<sup>9</sup>

13 The<sup>a</sup> fig-tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. <sup>a</sup>Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away.

14 ¶ O<sup>a</sup> my dove, <sup>a</sup>that art in the clefts of the rock, in the secret places of the stairs, <sup>a</sup>let me see thy countenance, let me hear thy voice; for sweet <sup>a</sup>is thy voice, and thy countenance <sup>a</sup>is comely.

15 Take<sup>a</sup> us the foxes, the little foxes,<sup>1</sup> that spoil the vines: for our vines have<sup>a</sup> tender grapes.

16 ¶ My<sup>a</sup> beloved <sup>a</sup>is mine, and I am his: he feedeth among the lilies.

17 Until<sup>a</sup> the day break, and the shadows flee away, turn,<sup>a</sup> my beloved, and be thou like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains <sup>a</sup>of Bethel.<sup>4</sup>

BY night<sup>a</sup> on my bed I sought<sup>a</sup> him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but <sup>a</sup>I found him not.

2 I<sup>a</sup> will rise now, and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth: <sup>a</sup>I sought him, but I found him not.

have but begun to vent their errors and irregularities, as they greatly mar her purity, peace, order, and beauty, and are especially apt to mislead weak believers, let every one be careful to search out, and mortify his own inward lusts, as these, if indulged, break up the work of grace in their hearts.—16. This kind inviter is my glorious Husband and Mediator, given of God to, and accepted by, me; and I am his by the Father's goodness, his own love and conquest, and by my surrender of myself to him. And O the infinite delight he takes in his people, and to converse with them in his ordinances! 17. Till the gospel day, in its pleasant light and powerful influence, break, and the shadows of Jewish ceremonies flee away; nay, till the day of perfect glory dawn, and all the shadows of desertion, temptation, and trouble are fled; do thou, blessed Jesus, often surprise me with the discoveries of thy glory and communications of thy grace, notwithstanding whatever hindrances, guilt, and wickedness are found with me.

Ver. 1. 'I am a wild rose of the fields, a lily of the valleys.'—Such a humiliating description as every self-examining believer will give of himself in comparison with the attainments of others. C.

Ver. 3. Judea is not celebrated for the apple, but its citrons were reckoned superior to those of all other lands; and the citron is therefore most probably the fruit-tree of this emblem. C.

Ver. 7. I charge you. This cannot be any form of adjuration, which would be both superstitious and impious. The reference is to the timidity of the startled gazelle, and the fleetness with which it escapes when disturbed in its slumbers. Spiritually, it inculcates 'praying, waiting, and watching,' for the Lord's coming in providence and grace. C.

Ver. 10-13. From verse 10 to 13 is presented one of the most beautiful emblems of Christ, by his Word and Spirit, inviting the soul of a believer, or the whole church, to arise from sleep. Ro.

the imperfect and mediate enjoyment on earth is sometimes so transporting! Unhappy for ever is that heart which would change one hour's fellowship with Christ for all the pleasures, honours, and riches on earth. Tenderly should it be managed, and carefully improved and maintained. A small thing may interrupt it; and with the greatest reluctance and grief should the believing soul mourn over its want. Strong as death must be the love of our Redeemer, which makes him come to his people over every mountain of distance, darkness, wrath, provocation, and pollution. How earnest and affecting are his invitations to familiar intercourse with himself! And what a change in the world is made by his oracles, ordinances, and influence! But wicked ministers in a church, and carnal lusts in a heart, are our greatest plagues, and should be carefully removed. And the assured faith of our relation to Christ will make us effectually to long and cry for frequent and familiar fellowship with him.

CHAPTER III. Ver. 1. In time of desertion and trouble, and of a secure and slothful frame, in prayer and other private ordinances, I endeavoured to regain the sensible communications of Jesus' love: I persevered therein, but without any discernible success. 2. Stirring up myself therefore to a more active and lively frame of spirit, I attended the public ordinances of his worship, in order to obtain communion with himself. I often repeated my endeavours, but met with nothing but disappointments and discouragements. 3. Faithful ministers, who with care and labour inspect the souls of men, were often directed to speak pointedly professors or saints, to avoid everything which may in the least tend to mar my intercourse with him.

DAUGHTERS OF JERUSALEM. 6. What amazing persons are those who, separated from the world in affection, and delivered from former troubles, mount up heavenward in faith, in love, in spiritual-mindedness, and in holy desires and conversation;—all acceptable to God through Jesus' merits and intercession, and endowed with the manifold and precious graces of his Holy Spirit!

BELIEVERS. 7, 8. Nay, admire not us, nor the glories which we have freely received from Christ; but behold that new covenant of grace, and that familiar fellowship with him, which are the causes of everything amiable in us, and in which we are watched over and protected, amidst all our dangers, by almighty perfections, attendant angels, and vigilant ministers. 9, 10. Behold how, according to his deep compassion and universal love, he has not only assumed our nature in the most precious and useful form, but has formed a new covenant, and a gospel dispensation,—reared on stable, precious, and supporting promises,—founded in the unchangeable and everlasting love and purpose of God, in which men are protected by his righteousness and royal power; and his unbounded love makes everything proper, refreshing, and supporting for the members of his church, in order to transport them, in fellowship with him, through this world into the heavenly state! 11. Go forth then, my fellow-professors, from your unregeneracy, your self-righteousness, your filthy lusts, your carnal cares and sluggish frames; and with earnestness, faith, love, and wonder observe

Ver. 6. The emblem here changes to the arrival of a traveller coming out of the wilderness, not like the wayworn Israelites when they emerged from its solitudes, but as a beautiful and beloved bride borne in splendour, and escorted by the mighty.—Note, The Hebrew shows the traveller is a female. C.

Ver. 9. A chariot. Rather, 'a throne,' as the mention of pillars seems to require, and as the word may be translated, 'King Solomon made himself a throne'—the emblem of the King of Zion enthroned in glory, the reward and production of his humiliation unto death, Phi. 2.5-11. C.

Ver. 10. Its inside strewn over with love-mottos (after the manner of the East) by the daughters of Jerusalem, the emblems of those records whereby believers have witnessed Christ's love to them, and their love to Christ. C.

Ver. 11. In the day of his espousals, &c. The church restored to paradise, and uninterrupted communion with Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. C.

REFLECTIONS.—In this world the clearest days of intimate fellowship with Christ are suddenly turned into nights of desertion, trouble, ignorance, and sloth. But precious and dear is Jesus to lively saints;—nothing can content them without his presence and favour; and they count no labour nor suffering too hard to obtain it. Great is his love to them. He is loath to contend long with his people lest their spirit should fail before him. And an hour, a minute of his presence, richly rewards all their pains and sorrows in seeking for it. Promising is the appearance when the Word preached pointedly touches the heart and conscience of hearers, and leads them to careful inquiries concerning Christ. And remarkable fellowship with him effectually animates to an earnest wrestling in behalf of the church and public interests of religion. What extensive honour believers procure to themselves from all around them by an earnest care to maintain fellowship with him, and to follow him in a gracious, upright, and heavenly conversation! But if distinguished saints be so admirable and lovely, how much more is Christ himself and his covenant! With great care ought we to labour to have the heart and eyes of all around us fixed on him: for great indeed is his love, that he should take pleasure in espousing to himself poor, guilty, polluted, diseased, wretched, and mischievous sinners of mankind.

their hearts!—when their dwelling on redemption through my blood, as their principal theme, renders themselves and their ministrations lively and pleasant; and when, with modesty, singleness, prudence, and order they, and other rulers, govern the flocks committed to their care!—when they, as superior to others in station, and as means of connecting them with Christ, and of conveying their spiritual nourishment, are upright, steady, and strong, and do watch over the church, and actively improve the whole armour of God for her defence and honour!—and when her various oracles, ordinances, and officers are remarkably useful for supplying the souls of men with the nourishing milk of God's Word!—But especially how fair and comely are believers, with respect to their personal capacity, when justified by active faith, and adorned with every spiritual grace!—when their spiritual knowledge, faith, and affection are sincere, single, humble, and seasonably discovered!—when their conversation in thought, word, and deed, notwithstanding many imperfections, is orderly and pure, manifesting a heart nourished in the pastures of the gospel!—when, by repeated acts of faith and meditation, they improve their spiritual provision; and their zeal for God is uniform, pure, and moderate, animating them to a fruitfulness in good works, and in winning others to me!—when their prayers and converse are profitable and pleasant, discovering the soundness of their heart, animated, and furnished by, and accepted through my blood!—when there is much secret and holy blushing on account of remaining defects!—when their faith, which unites them to me, furnishes with and really improves the whole armour of God for their defence from spiritual enemies, as the worthies of God formerly experienced!—when, feeding upon the doctrine of the prophets and apostles, they, to my inexpressible pleasure, abound in faith and love towards me, and in care to instruct and edify others!—How completely perfect are they in their justification, in the extent of their sanctification, and in my purpose and favourable acceptance. 6, 8. Till not only the gospel dispensation, but even and spiritually betrothed to my person, how, even with the weakest acts of thy faith, and the smallest degree of sincere grace and holy obedience, hast thou claimed, attracted, encouraged, and coupled my heart to thee! How incomparably acceptable and delightful is thy love, and that sweet fragrant flowing from thy manifold graces! 11. How delightful thy prayers and praise! Thy instructing, reproving, and comforting discourse marks what sweet and nourishing truths and experiences are lodged in thy heart, and how delightful and attractive is thy holy and benevolent conversation! 12-14. My church is a delightful garden, separated from the world, set apart to the service of God, digged by gospel ministrations and influences, and especially protected by my providence, by the rules of order contained in my Word, and a medicinal spring of gospel truth hid from the view of a carnal world! And when purged of scandalous persons, her converts planted in the new kingdom do flourish more fragrant, delightful, precious, and useful, more numerous and different in circumstances, than all the fruit-bearing trees and spices of an orchard!—Yea, every particular believer is a garden set apart in beautiful order, and with infinite care and labour, to the service of God; and has in him the Holy Ghost and a principle of grace, as a well of water springing up into everlasting life: and in the most pleasant manner are their various gifts and graces exercised to my honour, their own advantage, and the edification of others.

BELIEVERS. 15. Blessed Jesus! great source and bestower of all life here or hereafter, it is to thy influences alone that we owe all our comeliness, fragrant, and fruitfulness! let them run more abundantly into our hearts, that, by the exercise of thy grace, we may be rendered more useful to water and refresh others around! 16. And since we are thine, as well as under our own care, prevent everything tending to mar our fruitfulness; and let the Holy Ghost, in his convincing and sin-mortifying as well as in his comforting influences, stir up and quicken our hearts to a lively exercise of those gifts and graces with which we are en-16 ¶ Awake,<sup>9</sup> O north wind; and come, thou south; blow upon my garden,<sup>8</sup> that the spices thereof may flow out. Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleasant fruits.

CHAPTER V.

1 Christ awaketh the church with his calling. 2 The church having a taste of Christ's love is sick of love. 9 A description of Christ by his graces.

I AM<sup>a</sup> come into my garden, my sister, my spouse: I have gathered my myrrh with my spice; I have eaten my honey-omb with my honey; I have drunk my wine with my milk: eat,<sup>a</sup> O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly,<sup>1</sup> O beloved.

2 ¶ I<sup>9</sup> sleep, but my heart waketh: it is the voice of my beloved that knocketh, saying, Open<sup>a</sup> to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled: for my head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night.

3 I<sup>k</sup> have put off my coat; how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet; how shall I defile them?

4 My<sup>1</sup> beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door,<sup>3</sup> and my bowels were moved for him.<sup>4</sup>

5 I<sup>a</sup> rose up to open to my beloved; and my hands dropped with myrrh, and my fingers with sweet-smelling<sup>5</sup> myrrh, upon the handles of the lock.

6 I<sup>p</sup> opened to my beloved; and but my beloved had withdrawn himself, and was gone; my soul failed when he spake: I sought him, but I could not find him; I called him, but he gave me no answer.

7 The<sup>t</sup> watchmen that went about the city found me, they smote me, they wounded me; the keepers of the walls took away my vail from me.

8 I<sup>a</sup> charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem, if ye find my beloved, that<sup>6</sup> ye tell him, that I am sick of love.

9 ¶ What<sup>a</sup> is thy beloved more than another beloved, O thou fairest among women? what is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou dost so charge us?

10 My<sup>v</sup> beloved is white and ruddy,<sup>7</sup> the chiefest<sup>8</sup> among ten thousand.

11 His<sup>2</sup> head is as the most fine gold; his locks are bushy,<sup>9</sup> and black as a raven;

12 His<sup>b</sup> eyes are as the eyes of doves by the rivers of waters, washed with milk, and fitly set.<sup>1</sup>

13 His<sup>c</sup> cheeks are as a bed of spices, as sweet flowers; his lips like lilies, dropping sweet-smelling myrrh:

symmetry and stateliness of the neck; but to the costly chains and ornaments of gold which it was customary to wear in great profusion round the neck. David's armoury tower was graceful in the style of its architecture; and it was hung round with golden shields and polished armour. P.

Ver. 6. The emblem here changes, and the speaker retires to Lebanon, the mountain from which he speaks in ver. 8. The emblem represents Christ inviting the believer (the church) to lofty ascents of contemplation and extended views of providence and redemption. C.

Ver. 9. One of thine eyes. 'One glance of thine eyes,' that language of humility, purity, devotedness—which nothing but the eye can speak. C.

Ver. 11. Lebanon. Whiteness and incense—the one meaning from its snowy top; the other from the fragrant plants that adorned its sides. C.

Ver. 12. 'A garden is inclosed, my sister espoused: a spring is shut up.' This garden, &c., not being the emblem of the bride herself, but of the protected beauties and comforts of her residence. C.—Fountains shut up and sealed, that is, so covered and inclosed as to be secure against all inspection, are not uncommon in Palestine. There is one at Solomon's Pools. It is in an artificial subterranean chamber, the entrance to which is closed, and a subterranean channel conducts its waters into one of the great pools. P.

Ver. 15. A well of living waters. The emblem of the Word of Christ springing up continually in streams of life from the believer's heart and gospel ordinances, Jn. 4. 14.—Streams from Lebanon. The emblem of the 'good and perfect gifts that come down from the Father of lights,' Ja. 1. 17. C.—Perennial streams are very rare in Palestine, but they abound in Lebanon. Their waters are limpid, sparkling, and of icy coldness. The streams and fountains of Lebanon are proverbial throughout Syria as emblems of luxury and pleasure. P.

REFLECTIONS.—What infinite love Jesus bears to all people! He puts upon them his own comeliness, when they exercise a living faith in him. Earnest is thy lively preaching, and cordial application of my precious and soul-nourishing truths. I have particularly observed and accepted the graces and services of believers. Let them also feast abundantly on my gospel provision, and take the comfort of their graces and works, as evidences of their faith and great salvation.

BELIEVERS. 2. Alas! the dull and lukewarm frame in which Jesus often finds his churches when he comes to bless them! And how slothful and secure my animal nature had made me, even while my spiritual endeavoured to hear and entertain him! Amidst much deadness and unconcern, I felt some impressions made upon my heart by his Word, Spirit, and rod; while he, in the kindest manner, besought me to exercise my faith and love, and to remove whatever hindered his most intimate approaches, as he was closely related to me, had suffered much for me and from me, had waited long for my opening to him, and was much grieved with my neglect of him! 3. In the most pitiful manner I evaded compliance with his kind invitations, as a thing I was not at present fitted for, and which I could not do without crossing my corrupt inclinations and troubling my flesh. 4. By the immediate power of his Spirit, Jesus touched my heart through his Word, and kindly stirred up my affections to a concern for my former slighting of him, and to an earnest desire after his presence. 5. Repenting of my former stupidity and indifference, and actuated by his influence, I prepared myself to entertain his visit; my everything tending to disturb the peace and edification of the church questioned the truth of my profession, and charged me with the vilest hypocrisy. 8. O! my fellow-professors, I beg and charge you, that if this my Lord Jesus allow you any sensible intimacy with himself, you will represent to him the distressed case of my soul, and entreat him speedily to visit me, who earnestly desires him, and am at the point of death for want of his sensible presence.

DAUGHTERS. 9. Distressed, but precious and lovely saint, what means this so solemn charge? What singular and transcendent excellency is in this Jesus, the beloved of thy heart?

BELIEVERS. 10. Boundless and incomparable is his excellency! A glorious Godhead and a suffering manhood, a holiness of heart and life, and a bloody suffering, a glorious exaltation, and a humble debasement, mercy towards his people, and judgment against unbelievers, concur to render him in every respect a miracle of beauty! He is infinitely more dignified, kind, rich, and glorious, than all the ten thousands of created beings in heaven and in earth; and, as the great standard-bearer, he goes forth, attended by angels and saints, conquering and to conquer. 11. In his divine nature, and as he is the Head of government and influence to all people, he is pure, precious, substantial, glorious, useful, enriching, and unchangeable! Lasting and immutable is his comeliness! Beautiful, mysterious, and majestic are his well-connected purposes and providences! And ever fresh and comely those skillfully contrived, and firmly fixed on the precious and durable foundations of his grace, are the dispensations of his providence! Elevated, stately and pleasant, always verdant and refreshing, is the full manifestation of him in all his excellencies! 16. Pleasant is his Word and the sensible communications of his love! Nay, all that is in his person, offices, relations, names, blessings, and ordinances is inexpressibly desirable; and nothing is truly desirable but as in or connected with him. This, this, O fellow-professors, is my spiritual husband, and my constant and sympathizing lover and benefactor.

Ver. 1. This verse complies with the closing invitation of the preceding chapter, and represents Christ delighting in the feast of his church, and inviting all that follow him to participate in his joy, Jn. 3. 29. C.

Ver. 2. Open to me, my sister. The emblem of our Lord standing at the door and knocking, and waiting for the opening of the closed door, Re. 3. 20. C.

Ver. 3. Two excuses easy to be understood by those who observe that it is not Christ personal but Christ representative that now knocks for admission, see Mat. 25. 40, 45. And when the hungry, the thirsty, the naked, the stranger, and the imprisoned have knocked and called, how few will be able to plead that they have never hesitated to rise, and never invented a plausible excuse for neglecting to open the door! C.

Ver. 7. The watchmen that, by their faithful preaching of the truth, found out (detected) the lately negligent, but now aroused and anxious seeker; they smote, they wounded the conscience, and they took away the veil of every plausible excuse. C.

Ver. 16. He is altogether lovely. This description must present to the eye of an unprejudiced artist an imagery of most unequalled range, the product of a mind fraught with universal information. Its chief topics of comparison are (1) Colours; (2) Officered armies, ver. 10; (3) Precious metal; (4) Ornithology, ver. 11, 12; (5) Botany, ver. 13; (6) Jewellery, ver. 14; (7) Architecture; (8) Landscape, ver. 15; (9) Attractive eloquence, ver. 16. Every province of nature and art thus furnishing its tribute to the King, the 'Lord of all!' C.

REFLECTIONS.—Quickly, when entreated, does Jesus come to comfort the hearts and supply the wants of his people; and brings with him for their refreshment the fullness of promises, grace, and joy. Enlarged appe-to strive in prayers for one another. And how pleasant when, even under desertion, saints maintain the most exalted view of Jesus' person and fullness, and the most assured faith of their interest in them; and when even curious inquiries concerning him draw forth the warmest commendations of him!

CHAPTER VI. DAUGHTERS. 1. Precious saint, tell us where we may hope to find this thy beloved Saviour, that we may, after thy example, and in holy fellowship with thee, more heartily than ever seek him.

BELIEVERS. 2. Jesus, my beloved, is always present in his church, and is especially conversant in those assemblies where the graces of the people are most eminent; taking pleasure in and increasing their grace and comforts, and delighting to convert, and afterwards glorify, all who accept him. 3. And notwithstanding all my miscarriages, the mutual relation between him and me is as full and firm as ever; and he still delights himself in the assemblies of his people.

CHRIST. 4. In respect of oracles, ordinances, officers, and order, thou, my church, art extremely beautiful in my view, and terrible to enemies around. And in respect to real righteousness, glorious grace, and holy conversation, thou, O particular believer, art transcendently comely, and thy assured faith and fervent prayer overcome every opponent. 5-7. Such was my delight in the vigorous actings of thy faith and love, and in thy importunate prayers, that I could no longer absent myself; and being returned, I assure thee, for thy comfort, that thy holy thoughts and gracious exercise, thy unfeigned and operative faith, thy spiritual meditations, thy regular and active zeal, thy humility and self-abasement, together with all thy privileges, and everything belonging to my church, are as precious and comely as ever. 8, 9. Whatever beauties there be in earthly courts, there are none comparable to a true regard to my church that, even while absent from thee, I was occupied among my outwardly mean but inwardly glorious and hidden ones, carefully observing if her fruitfulness in saints and in good works was answerable to her new-covenant soil, and how her various members did thrive in the advanced progress or weak beginnings of grace. 12. And thy vigorous actings of faith and fervent supplications took such hold of me, that I was constrained, as in a surprising transport of affection, speedily to return to thee in loving-kindness and in tender mercies. 13. Notwithstanding every former offence, return, therefore, my perfect and peaceable one, by faith and repentance, to thy wonted familiarity with me, that I and my Father, and blessed Spirit, and ministering angels may, with pleasure and satisfaction, behold thy beauties. However mean and worthless thou art in thy own eyes, yet how pleasant is it for me to behold Jews and Gentiles united into one society of saints, and to contemplate heavenly graces and holy duties withstanding and conquering the remains of inward corruptions, temptations, and fears!

Ver. 1. O thou fairest. This character of superlative female beauty, like the panegyric on male beauty, ch. 5. 10, &c., should have led every expositor to see that the book was never intended for any daughter of Eve; to any one of whom it had been the grossest flattery, alike degrading to the deceiving utterer and the credulous listener. But how literal the description when applied to her who is adorned by the Spirit with 'the beauty of holiness!' C.

Ver. 5. Turn away thine eyes. That is, thine eyes suffused with tears from seeking and suffering, ch. 5. 6, 7; see Ps. 116. 8. C.

Ver. 8. This is no enumeration of Solomon's family establishment, as it does not accord with the account in 1 Ki. 11. 3. It is an emblematic classification of the church, in which queens, concubines, and virgins are exactly equivalent to the triple classification, 1 Jn. 2. 12-14, fathers, young men, children. C.

Ver. 9. That is, the church in its progressive, tripartite condition on earth, saw and praised the church in its glorified and perfected condition in heaven, as the most wondrous monument of the wisdom and grace of its Lord. C.

Ver. 11. The speaker in the first person from ver. 4. has been the bridegroom; and after the question ver. 10, he resumes ver.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The love of the church to Christ. 6 The vehemency of love. 8 The calling of the Gentiles. 14 The church prayeth for Christ's coming.

OH that<sup>a</sup> thou wert as my brother, that sucked the breasts of my mother! when I should find thee without, I<sup>b</sup> would kiss thee; yea, I should not be despised.<sup>1</sup>

2 I<sup>c</sup> would lead thee, and bring thee into my mother's house, who would instruct me: I<sup>d</sup> would cause thee to drink of spiced wine of the juice of my pomegranate.<sup>2</sup> make others inquire after him. And it is prudent for deserted saints frequently and boldly to recognize the mutual relation betwixt Christ and their soul. Great is the mercy that, though he often for a time deserts a particular child, he never totally forsakes his church and ordinances, and often does much good while it is little perceived. How sweet and often surprising are the returns of his sensible presence! For unchangeable is his esteem of, love to, desire after, and delight in all people amidst all the changes of his countenance and providence. Engaging, honourable, and awful are the beauties of holiness when they shine in churches, ordinances, and saints. And unbounded is Jesus' care about all people, and to have them fruitful in graces and good works. He daily seeks to return them his sensible favours, and to see them cordially united among themselves, and valiantly contending with their spiritual enemies.

CHAPTER VII. 1-6. Thou, O my visible church, art adorned with ministers shod with the animating preparations of the gospel of peace;—ministers fixed in the most noted station, and contributing to thy inward health and fruitfulness;—strong in grace, and confirmed in the truth, and set for the defence of the gospel;—intelligent in the mystery of Christ, and sagaciously watching against thy spiritual foes.—Thou art also adorned with manifold oracles and ordinances, for the spread of my honour, the communication of my influence, and edification of my people. How beautiful understanding in the matters of God! Wonderful is thy gracious sagacity in discovering truth, and discerning between good and evil: and attended with courage and watchfulness, especially against the most near, constant, and malicious enemies! Grounded in my blood, and effectually productive of good works, is thy towering hope supported by thy faith! And acceptable in me is even the very smallest part of thy holy principles or practices! 7. So affecting is thy beauty, bestowed by myself, that I cannot but regard thy fellowship, and take pleasure to look on, and abundantly delight in thee.—When the whole of thy graces and holy conversation is considered in connection, how comely, flourishing, victorious, and heavenly is the appearance! And how cordial and cheering to me are thy affection and kind entertainment; 8, 9. In my purpose I resolved, and in my promise I have sought, to manifest myself to my church, in converting nominal members, and vouchsafing my kindest fellowship to real saints.—This shall qualify thee to edify others, and give pleasure and satisfaction to me. Revived, refreshed, and comforted, by my influences, thy gracious discourse shall quicken and awaken others to taste of my love, and to open their mouths in my praise.

BELIEVERS. 10. O the inexpressible comfort which I enjoy in the faith of Jesus' relations, and in the intimations of his love to my soul! 11, 12. Beloved Redeemer and husband, let me, retiring from the hurry and cares of this present world, have the most

Ver. 1. Shoes. The shoes or sandals are noticed first, as the emblem of 'the feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace,' Ep. 6. 15.—The joints of thy thighs, &c. 'The mouldings of thy limbs are as ornaments, the workmanship of a skilful hand.' C.

Ver. 4. Heshbon was the capital of Sihon; and amidst its ruins a beautiful pool of water still exists. But is not the meaning of the emblem to be found rather in the meaning of the words, which abides, than in any work of art that might soon be destroyed? Heshbon signifies thought; Bath-rabbim, the house of the mighty; that is, 'Thine eyes are pools (bright depths) of intelligence and power.' C.

Ver. 5. 'Thy braided hair is like the royal purple festooned around the ceilings.'—Note, The word here translated galleries is also (ch. 1. 17) translated rafters; it has also been translated singlets. The precise meaning of the word is uncertain; but, from its relation to beams (ch. 1. 17), and the fact that eastern ceilings are generally of boards, it has here been rendered ceilings. C.

REFLECTIONS.—Extensive are the beauties of holiness in the church and people of God, and fixed and uniform in the substantial thereof. What delight Jesus takes in the persons and services of his followers! He is ready to hold the most intimate fellowship with them. And with ravishing pleasure they glory in him, and in his love towards them. When inwardly warmed by his love, how ready are they to relinquish everything else, in order to have familiar intercourse with him! And a deep concern for the church of Christ, and exact observation of our inward condition, effectually

10. Indeed, blessed Redeemer, by thy infinite favour, I have been united to thee, and stand firm on thee as my foundation, and am come to some maturity and perfection in grace. 11. This thou hast committed to the care of thy gospel ministers, that they, by instructions, warnings, reproofs, and censures, might endeavour to their utmost to render the members fruitful in the works of righteousness, to thy praise and glory. 12. And, while the whole concerns of it are under thy special care, I have in charge the vineyard of my own heart, to watch over, defend, purge, and render fruitful in holy habits and exercises. Thou, Jesus, must have the principal honour of all that I am, have, or can attain to, and thy faithful ministers their subordinate share of my love and regard.

and the door of their heart opened to receive me, we, notwithstanding their insignificance, weakness, troubles, and temptations, will thoroughly beautify, strengthen, and protect them.

BELIEVERS. 10. Indeed, blessed Redeemer, by thy infinite favour, I have been united to thee, and stand firm on thee as my foundation, and am come to some maturity and perfection in grace. 11. CHRIST. 13. Believing soul, who lovest and frequentest the assemblies of my people, and ordinances there dispensed, thy fellow-members regard and listen to thy instructions and warnings for their edification. Let me, when withdrawn from thee, particularly in my bodily presence, often hear thy prayers and praises, and the publication of my gospel in the world.

BELIEVERS. 14. And, O my blessed Husband and Saviour, not only maintain frequent and familiar intercourse with my soul, and with thy church on earth, in the instituted ordinances of thy worship, but hasten, hasten thy glorious appearance without sin unto our salvation;—when we shall be caught up to meet thee in the air, and shall, in one complete body, enter that happy, that eternal state, in which God shall be ALL in ALL.

Ver. 2. I would cause thee, &c. 'Thou shouldst accustom me to give thee spiced wine, with the juice of pomegranates.' C.

Ver. 5. I raised thee up. I revived thee, when left a helpless infant under the citron-tree. See Eze. 16.4-8. In this reply the BELOVED speaks. C.

a palace of silver; and 'if she be a door, we will inclose her with boards of cedar.

10 I<sup>h</sup> am a wall, and my breasts like towers; then was I in his eyes as one that found 'favour.

11 Solomon<sup>o</sup> had a vineyard at Baal-hamon; he let out the vineyard unto keepers: every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thousand pieces of silver.

12 My<sup>o</sup> vineyard, which is mine, is before me:<sup>9</sup> thou, 'O Solomon, must have a thousand, and those 'that keep the fruit thereof two hundred.

13 Thou<sup>o</sup> that dwellest in the gardens, 'the companions hearken to thy voice: 'cause me to hear it.

14 ¶ Make<sup>d</sup> haste,<sup>1</sup> my beloved, and be thou like to a roe or to a young hart upon the mountains of spices.

Ver. 6. For love is strong. 'Yea, love is strong,' &c. This is the reply of the Beloved who supports.—Jealousy, 'burning love'—cruel, rather, 'inexorable'—vehement flame, rather, 'the dissolving fire of Jehovah.' C.

Ver. 8. The grammar of the passage suggests that the 'daughters of Jerusalem,' who speak (ch. 1-v.), who are still present (ch. 8.4), are here the solicitous projectors for the welfare of the 'little sister.' This emblem has been expounded of the Gentile church—but it seems much more natural to understand by it such as are yet 'weak in the faith,' Ro. 14.1; 15.1; 1 Co. 3.2; Ep. 4.13. C.

Ver. 10. This has generally been considered as the answer of the 'little sister,' exemplifying full and instantaneous 'growth in grace.' But as the grammar will not warrant any change from the speaker in the first person (ver. 1, 2, 4) and the speaker in the first person (ver. 10), this must be understood as the language of the bride, encouraging the 'little sister' by her own experience of grace and attainments in faith. C.

Ver. 11. Baal-hamon, ruler of multitudes.—The keepers represent the rulers and instructors of the churches in their multitudes.—A thousand. As the annual rent for a vine seems to have been ordinarily a piece of silver, Is. 7.23, the emblem indicates that return of 'fruit of the Spirit,' Ga. 5.22, which is ever due in correspondence to privileges. C.

Ver. 13. Thou that dwellest in the gardens. It is impossible by the grammar to distinguish the speaker in ver. 13 from the speaker in ver. 14; and as in ver. 14 she calls to the listener, my Beloved, the speaker is the bride calling to her Redeemer, 'Even so, come, Lord Jesus!' Re. 22.17, 20. C.

REFLECTIONS.—How kind, how marvellous is it, that God's only begotten Son, the brightness of his glory, has, by his assumption of our nature, become our brother, and will for ever continue bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh! And great is the mercy, that to him the gathering of the Gentiles hath and shall be! It is pleasant to remember past experiences of his love in the assured expectations of others still more sweet! And delightful is the frame, ardent the desires, and fervent the prayers, when a soul is overwhelmed with the consolations of Christ! Importunate intercession for the spiritual welfare of others often produces remarkable fellowship with him. Extensive revenues of holy thoughts, words, and deeds are due from every member of the church to Jesus Christ. And they who give him his due, will give his ministers theirs. But how strongly Christ and his people's hearts must be knit one to another! They cannot live but as it were in mutual intercourse. Soon will he come to take them to himself in glory; and, in the believing view of it, their waiting spirits cry, 'Even so, come, Lord Jesus.'

ening and supporting fellowship that I should enjoy with thee! Nay, already the believing views of it fill my soul with the joys of my Lord! 4. Let me therefore once more charge you, my fellow-professors, to do everything in your power to continue this my delightful communion with Jesus Christ, and do nothing to interrupt it.

DAUGHTERS. 5. What admirable person is this, who, forsaking all worldly things for Christ, and delivered from her distressed condition, mounts up heavenward, by faith resting on him to bear her up under every burden, and forward through every duty and difficulty?

BELIEVERS. O Jesus, animated by thy own delightful influence, I have, by importunate prayers, obtained the most sensible manifestations of thy love; as others, in whose hearts thou art formed by faith, have also done. 6, 7. O let thy most endeared esteem, remembrance, and love of my soul, appear remarkably in all thy dispensations towards me: for so vehement and irresistible is my desire after intimate fellowship with thee, that nothing else can afford me satisfaction: no, not death and the grave are so dreadful to me as the fears of thy withdrawal! Kindled by thy love shed abroad in my heart, my love to thee melts all my inward powers, and burns up my corruptions. No affliction, temptation, desertion, or persecution can extinguish or abate it. Would the richest on earth tempt me from thee, with all his wealth, nay, with ten thousand worlds, I would utterly condemn and abhor the proposal. 8. But, Lord, we have many fellow-sinners, whom thou didst die for; particularly among the Gentiles, who enjoy no ordinances, and are yet unripe for their spiritual marriage, being destitute of faith and love; what shall we do to promote their conversion, when the offers of thy grace shall be made to them?

CHRIST. 9. When, according to my unchangeable purpose, they shall accept me as their foundation, I and my Father and blessed Spirit will endow them with manifold gifts and graces, and render them, in their hearts and church state, a firm tower and beautiful temple and palace for God. When the door of access to me shall be opened to them in the gospel, the impure all things are impure. And such is the state of the carnal mind, that just in proportion as any object is good, in like proportion may it be perverted to purposes of evil. Thus—just in proportion as a medicine is powerful to restore, may its improper administration render it powerful to destroy. And thus grace, in its every form, may be turned into licentiousness. But is the sufferer, therefore, to be deprived of a powerful medicine?—or is the physician who discovered and prescribed it to be pronounced an evil-doer? Is the sinner, therefore, to be deprived of access to pardon; and the God of all grace and consolation to be robbed of his attribute of mercy? No. And neither is the church of God to be deprived of some of the brightest pages in the divine Word, because eyes that have 'loved darkness' cannot perceive their beauties.

SONG OF SOLOMON.

To those who have observed what a prominent place love to Jesus holds in the New Testament (see for example, Jn. 14. 23; 1 Co. 16. 22; 2 Co. 5. 14), and to those who have experienced and rejoiced in 'the assurance' of that love—the Song of Solomon will ever furnish a subject of study, at once most delightful and profitable.—C.

The various modes of interpreting this remarkable and extremely difficult book may be classified under three heads:—The Literal, the Typical, and the Allegorical.

1. The Literal makes the book a simple story related in the form of a dramatic poem. The facts of the story are given by Dr. Ginsburg as follows:—'A village girl, the daughter of a widowed mother of Shulam, is betrothed to a young shepherd, whom she met whilst tending the flock. Fearing lest the frequent meetings of these lovers should be the occasion of scandal, the brothers of the Shulamite employ her in the vineyard on the farm. Whilst on the way to this vineyard she one day falls in with the cortège of King Solomon, who is on a spring visit to the country. Struck with her beauty the king captures her, conveys her to his royal pavilion, then conducts her to Jerusalem in great pomp, in the hope of dazzling and overcoming her with his splendour, and eventually lodges her in his harem. But all is in vain. True to her virtuous love, she resists all the allurements of the exalted sovereign, spurns all his promises to elevate her to the highest rank, and in the midst of the gay scenes assures her humble shepherd, who followed her to the capital, that her affections are sacredly and inviolably pledged to him. Solomon, convinced at last that all his advances are in vain, allows her to quit the royal residence. Hand in hand the two faithful lovers return to her native place, and on their way home visit the tree under which their love-spark was first kindled, and there renew their vows of constancy and fidelity. On their arrival they are welcomed by their companion shepherds, and she is rewarded by her brothers for her exemplary virtue.' It is said that the object or moral of this charming story is 'to teach a lesson of practical righteousness by the record of an extraordinary example of virtue in a young maiden in humble life who encountered and conquered the greatest temptations from the most exalted personage in the land.' The theory is attractive, and the arguments employed in defence of it are not without weight; but I think the thoughtful student of God's Word, and especially such as have studied the genius of oriental poetry and imagery, will see that there is something higher and nobler in this book, than such a moral lesson. And, besides, I cannot see that the various parts of the book can be made at all to harmonize with such a simple and detailed story. In my mind the imagery is too sublime, the descriptions of far too elevated a character, to be applied even by an eastern poet to any mere narrative of real life.

2. The Typical theory of interpretation adopts as a basis the historical truth of the narrative, making the bride either Pharaoh's daughter, or some maiden of Palestine, whom Solomon had loved and married; but then this bride typified the church, and Solomon typified Christ, while the whole story was designed to represent in prophetic imagery the love subsisting between Christ and his church—a love mutual, indissoluble, and eternal. The great difficulty in the way of this theory is to establish the historical character of the narrative. A type must be a fact; and the narrative here has all the characteristics of ideality as distinguished from reality. No writer, however poetical, would describe ordinary events in such language as is employed in ch. 2. 1-4, 14; 6. 10-12; and no writer, even in the East, would put such language in the mouth of a virtuous maiden as we find in ch. ii. viii.

3. The Allegorical interpretation of the book seems to me to be the only possible and true one. The poem is conceived in the loftiest style of eastern imagery. Incidents of real life, events of everyday occurrence, customs which still prevail in the East form a groundwork, but they are all idealized and spiritualized, so that they may more strikingly exhibit to the pure and spiritual mind, grand divine truths. The leading image is common in Scripture. Human love in its purest and holiest type—that of husband and wife—is the symbol of the love of Christ and his church, of God and his people. Thus Isaiah says, 'Thy Maker is thine husband: the Lord of hosts is his name,' ch. 54. 5; and still more clearly: 'For thou shalt no more be termed Forsaken; neither shall thy land any more be termed Desolate; but thou shalt be called Hephzibah, and thy land Beulah; for the Lord delighteth in thee, and the land shall be married. . . . As the bridegroom rejoiceth over the bride, so shall thy God rejoice over thee,' ch. 62. 4, 5. The forty-fifth Psalm greatly resembles this book in style and imagery. So also the same imagery is common in the New Testament: 'I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ,' 2 Co. 11. 2. The whole bearing and force of that beautiful passage in Ep. 5. 22-33 rest upon this same figure. The apostle John too, in the last book of the Sacred Canon, appears to embody the very idea of the Song of Solomon, when he records his glorious vision: 'And I John saw the Holy City, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.'

This is substantially the system of interpretation which was adopted generally by the Jews, and is developed in the Talmud. By them, of course, God is represented as the Beloved, and the people of Israel the loved one. In the early Christian church, the same view was taken, and was held almost universally until impugned by Erasmus. It appears to me to be in accordance with the analogy of Scripture, and with the genius of eastern poetry. The whole structure of the composition, too, discursive, yet having a subjective coherence, tends to the same conclusion. There is in it no sustained plot, no crisis of a story. It consists of expressions of most devoted affection, with reference to localities and ever-changing scenery, all adapted to call forth new emotions, and to exhibit unalterable love. Viewed in this light, interpreted in this manner, it is one of the purest and noblest portions of Holy Writ. It lifts the mind into an ideal world of spiritual communion with God in Christ. It shows us his tenderness, his watchful care, his devoted unceasing attachment to his people in all their waywardness, temptations, sorrows, and persecutions, such as we can see nowhere else. It shows us that friends and kindred—the nearest and dearest, may desert us in the hour of trial, but God will not and cannot, for love binds him to us and us to him by a tie that is indissoluble.

Yet, still, holy, pure, and comforting as this book is to the man whose nature the Spirit of God has mastered, the profitable reading of it by the ordinary Christian is confessedly difficult. Each one knows his own heart, and can best review his own feelings. But in this western land, where we are not accustomed to the gorgeousness of eastern imagery, or the nature of eastern life and manners, we need watchfulness, prayer, and a heart completely under the control of the sanctifying Spirit, if we would derive from this book those noble lessons which God intended it to embody and impart.

It is sometimes said that the Song of Solomon is not quoted or referred to in the New Testament, and that therefore it cannot have that high spiritual significance which I have above advocated. In reply I quote the words of Hengstenberg:—'The New Testament is pervaded by references to the Song of Songs, and all of them are based on the supposition that it is to be interpreted spiritually. Proportionally no book of the Old Testament is so frequently referred to, implicitly or explicitly, in the New Testament, as this one; and we cannot but be surprised at the superficiality or the prejudices of those who have asserted that the Song of Songs is never quoted in the New Testament.' The following passages afford ample proof that its language and spirit were constantly before the mind of our Lord and his apostles, Mat. 6. 28-30; 13. 25; 24. 42, 21. 33; 26. 6-13; Mar. 14. 3; Lu. 12. 35-37; 13. 31, 32; 7. 38; Jn. 6. 44; 7. 33, 34, 12. 3; 21. 10; 3. 29; 2. 1-11; Ep. 5. 27.—P.
